GOVERNMENT GIRDS LOINS FOR STRUGGLE AS HOUR FOR COAL STRIKE DRAWS NEAR

DRASTIC ACTION TO KEEP MINES GOING PROMISED

Claiming Proposed Strike Would Be Violation of Food and Fuel Control Law, Criminal Penalties for Strikers Are Promised by the Attorney General.

STRIKE IS CHALLENGE TO SUPREMACY OF LAW

Fuel Administrator Garfield Called to Washington—Fight on Hoarders and Profiteers to Be Pushed—May Set Maximum Coal Price.

Washington, October 29.—The government moved swiftly tonight to meet the nation-wide strike ordered for Saturday.

Refusal of the miners' organization at Indianapolis to withdraw the order calling out half a million men brought instant announcement that drastic action would be taken to keep the mines in operation.

As to those miners who go on strike and thereby curtail production the food and fuel control law with its recently added criminal penalties of fines and imprisonment will be enforced without regard to persons. This attitude of the government, Attorney General Palmer made clear, does not affect the right of workers to strike for redress of grievances in other cases where no violation of the law is involved.

Every resource of the government, in the words of Attorney General Palmer, will be used to prevent the "national disaster" certain to follow the stoppage of work.

To Protect Workers.

Adequate police protection, with troops as a last resort, if necessary, will be given those men desiring to remain at work. Reports from government agents show that a big part of the miners ordered to quit work want to stay on the job.

Rights of the public will be protected through revival of price control regulations suspended when the fuel administration went out of existence February 1. This means an early drop in the price of soft coal and gives assurance against profiteering.

"Challenges Law."

Mr. Palmer's announcement of the government's plans, made after a consultation with Secretary Wilson, Director General Hines, Assistant Attorney General Ames, in charge of prosecutions under the food and fuel control law; Assistant Attorney General Garvin, rcediting criminal prosecutions and investigations of the department of justice; Secretary Tumulty, representing the president, and Dr. H. A. Garfield, former fuel administrator, did not mince words in dealing with the strike.

"The proposed strike," the announcement declared, "would be a more deadly attack on the life of the nation than an invading army. The facts present a situation which challenges the supremacy of the law."

Emergency Steps.

First of many steps to deal with a situation, admittedly critical, probably will be these:

Ample police or other protection for miners willing to remain on the job as urged by President Wilson.

Revival of the fuel administration, armed with full war time powers, to prevent hoarding and profiteering.

Allocation and distribution of coal to homes, railroads and essential industries.

Efforts to bring the strike to a speedy and thorough mediation.

The government, however, will make no efforts to bring about indictment of officers of the United Mine Workers of America who called the strike on charges of conspiracy to reduce production of a necessary product.

Strike To Be Brief.

Government officials asserted tonight that reports from confidential sources showed that not all of the miners would strike, that public sentiment was overwhelmingly against the walk-out at the beginning of winter and that the duration of the strike would be brief.

The statement, which it was said fully represented the attitude of the government, declared that the impending coal strike "was ordered in a manner, for a purpose and with a necessary effect, which taken to-

Miners Declare Strike Is Certain

All Treaty Amendments Defeated

LAST AMENDMENT FROM COMMITTEE LOSES IN SENATE

Every One of Forty-Six Changes Attached by Foreign Relations Committee Has Now Gone to Discard.

TWO MORE CHANGES ARE ALSO REJECTED

Long Debate Expected, However, on Fight to Eliminate Labor Section From Pact — Reference to Deity in Preamble Tabled.

Washington, October 29.—The forty-six amendments attached to the peace treaty by the foreign relations committee passed into history today when the last survivor of the group, a proposal by Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, to revise voting strength in the league of nations, was consigned to the discard in the senate by a vote of 47 to 36.

As if gaining impetus by this accomplishment, the senate then upset two more proposed textual changes in the treaty brought in by individual senators. One of them, presented by Senator Sherman, republican, Illinois, and proposing to write into the treaty preamble a reference to the Deity, was laid on the table by a vote of 57 to 27. The other, sponsored by Senator Johnson, republican, California, as a new solution for voting inequality in the league, was killed outright by a count of 43 to 35.

At adjournment, however, the effort to hasten final action had brought up against an obstacle which seemed likely to prevent further progress for several days. Tomorrow a determined group of senators will launch a fight to eliminate the labor section of the treaty, opening a debate which, in view of unsettled labor conditions over the country, is expected by the leaders to last for at least a week. The battle is expected to be the more spirited because it is regarded as holding out whatever hope remains of writing any amendment into the treaty.

Vote on Amendments.

Nine republicans joined the democrats in overthrowing the Moses amendment, which provided that none of the British dominions should vote in any league controversy directly affecting any one of them. Three democrats voted with the republicans supporting it. On the new Johnson amendment, proposed as a substitute for the one rejected last week, the line-up was exactly the same as on the California senator's original proposal, the only changes in the actual record vote being due to absences and pairs. The Sherman amendment got only scattered support, most of the republican leaders helping the democrats to put it out of the way.

As usual, the greater part of the day's debate related to subjects aside from the matters directly under consideration. The labor section, although not before the senate at all, got the biggest share of attention, Senator La Folette, republican, Wisconsin, centering discussion about it with a three-hour speech assailing the proposed international labor organization filled with peril to American labor.

Realm of Religion.

For a while when Senator Sherman's amendment was considered the debate got into the realm of literature and religion, Mr. Sherman declaring Voltaire would have rejoiced to see the collection of "Godless men" who gathered at Versailles, and Senator Lodge, republican, Massachusetts, replying with Macbeth's proclamation "I cannot say 'God bless us.'" It would be a travesty, said Mr. Lodge, to invoke divine blessing on such a treaty.

Also opposing the amendment,

$2,000 Per Hour Needed To Make Great Campaign For Agnes Scott Success

Workers Redoubling Efforts and Expect Rousing Meeting at the Auditorium on Next Friday Evening.

With only twenty-four hours remaining of the Agnes Scott campaign, and facing the task of raising $45,000, or nearly $2,000 per hour, in order to put Atlanta over the top with her quota of $100,000, the workers are redoubling their efforts, and are calling upon all loyal citizens to aid in bringing the local drive to a successful end in a big jubilee Friday night in the city Auditorium, where several thousand college students will gather to celebrate the victory.

To hear the reports that will be rendered by the business men who have been active in the campaign, all the educational forces of the city will gather Friday night in the Auditorium. There will also be the friends of Agnes Scott and hundreds of subscribers to the campaign fund, as well as thousands of citizens who will be present to hear the interesting figures as they are announced. The program beginning at 8 o'clock will last approximately one and a half hours.

Educational Jubilee.

The program for the Friday night meeting contemplates a regular educational jubilee, in which thousands of cheering students, giving voice to their enthusiastic and loyal spirits will congratulate Agnes Scott upon the big victory.

Led by the Tech band, the Agnes Scott Glee club and other musical organizations, the students will give free vent to their enthusiasm over the success of the Atlanta drive. The following colleges and schools will be there to see Agnes Scott go over the top: Emory university, Oglethorpe, Georgia Tech, Girls' High, Georgia Military academy, High, Georgia Military acadamey, Washington seminary and Woodberry.

Will Speak at Tech.

Malcolm Lockhart, director of the campaign, will make an address at Georgia Tech this morning at the chapel exercises in order to interest the students in the Agnes Scott campaign.

At the meeting Wednesday twenty prominent business men and citizens of Atlanta, who agreed to see Agnes Scott over the top, plans were laid for an added intensiveness that will feature the remaining hours of the big drive. The results of efforts that have been made by these citizens, which have not yet been tabulated or made public, will not be announced until the big jubilee Friday night.

An appeal is made by the leaders of the drive to all persons who have not yet contributed to the Agnes Scott fund, and it is hoped that all who are interested in the greater development of this famous college will respond before the end of the campaign.

Each Foot Brings Sum Father Paid For Entire Lot

Otto Braumuller Sells Forsyth Street Property, Purchased for $1,200 in 1854, at $1,200 Per Front Foot.

Otto L. Braumuller, who left Atlanta thirty-six years ago to make his home in New York, and who has returned here to live, has, through George and Forrest Adair, sold the old Braumuller lot on the west side of Forsyth street, between Alabama and Hunter streets.

The lot fronts 64 feet on Forsyth street and runs back 200 feet to a 20-foot alley.

This lot was bought by the father of Otto Braumuller in 1854 and he paid N. L. Angier $1,200 for it. He has sold each of its 64 front feet for the mount that his father paid for the whole property 65 years ago.

It is said that the property is bought for business developments, but the name of the purchaser is not yet announced.

Otto L. Braumuller managed the Atlanta music store of his father, Herman Braumuller, who died in 1868. This business was established by the senior Braumuller, who moved here from Griffin in 1854, and it was Atlanta's first music house. He conducted a successful business prior to and through the Civil war.

When Herman Braumuller died he left only one child, Otto, who, after managing his father's business here for several years, liquidated it and went to New York to enter the piano business there.

"I am back to stay now," said he yesterday. "My wife and I are making our home at the Georgian Terrace. Lots of things have happened since I left Atlanta thirty-six years ago, but during all of that time I have kept in close touch with the home of my boyhood and young manhood and I am glad to get back to it.

"Father and mother, and two children, who died in infancy, are buried at Oakland, and some of these days I expect to be laid there for my final rest. It is a wonderful feeling to come home to stay, and I cannot realize that I have been away for so many years."

Witches to Meet.

All members of the Witches' club, especially the chairmen and committees for the Hallowe'en tag day for funds for the Atlanta Childs' home and the Churches' Home for Girls, are asked to be present at a meeting to be held on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel Ansley at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

WHITEHALL LOT TEN-YEAR LEASE BRINGS $200,000

Property on Corner of McDaniel Street Rented at Big Price by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

BUILDING IS PLANNED AT COST OF $150,000

Atlanta Made Headquarters for South for Large Automobile Company. Handsome Structure to Be Erected.

Leasing the southwest corner of Whitehall and McDaniel streets for ten yedrs at a total rental of $200,000, the Chevrolet Motor company will begin within a short time the erection of a $150,000 building, in which its southeastern headquarters will be located.

This announcement was made Wednesday morning by Keenan & Chambers, prominent realty men, who have handled many of the big leases and sales of an industrial nature within the past few months.

The lot, which lies on the southwest corner of McDaniel and Whitehall streets, measures 72 feet on Whitehall and 206 feet on McDaniel, the rear end of the property abutting the Central of Georgia and the West Point railroads.

Purchased Tuesday.

The railroad frontage, and a portion of the lot, has been the property of owners, whose names were withheld for some time, but that the Whitehall street frontage, which measures 72x116 feet, was purchased by them Tuesday for $25,000. This deal with the lease on the whole property to the Chevrolet Motor company, was handled by Keenan & Chambers.

The new building that is to be erected by the Chevrolet Motor company will house the southeastern office of the company and will be known as a "zone" building. It will measure 206 feet on the McDaniel side and face 72 feet on Whitehall street. The building will be of four stories, extending through from Whitehall to the railroad tracks in the rear. It will be constructed of reinforced concrete, steel window frames and glass, making it one of the best lighted and most modern buildings of its kind in the city. The plans for the building were made by G. Floyd Preacher, a prominent architect of Atlanta, who has offices in the Healey building.

The zone building of the Chevrolet Motor company will be a very handsome one, and will be equipped with every appliance required to make it an ideal one for this purpose. It is expected that the new building will be finished by April 1, 1920.

Rental of $20,000.

The rental price of $20,000 a year for the Whitehall street property is looked upon as an indication of the value placed upon Atlanta realty by the big national concern that contemplate Atlanta locations for their southern warehouses and offices, and the erection of the building of four stories at the corner of Whitehall and McDaniel streets is expected to enhance the property in that section of the city.

The Chevrolet Motor company, which has nine factories and fourteen zone buildings in the United States, is one of the biggest units of the gigantic General Motors corporation, and its Atlanta location was decided upon after the field had been searched for an advantageous distribution center in the southern states.

The rental of a prominent Peachtree street store, in which the company will operate its retail sales room, was announced a few weeks ago, this deal also being handled through Keenan and Chembers.

The Chevrolet Motor company is reperesented in Atlanta by M. J. Herold, sales manager, L. E. Costley, assistant to the sales manager; The-

Mrs. Julia Carlisle Withers, First Child Born in Atlanta, Dies After Long Sickness

MRS. JULIA CARLISLE WITHERS.

Mrs. Julia Carlisle Withers, pioneer Atlantan, who was the first baby to be born in the city—when it was just a settlement, and called Terminus—died Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at her home at 78 Avon avenue. She leaves numerous friends who will always cherish their love for her, and who have known her as one of Atlanta's most prominent and admirable characters.

Mrs. Withers was born in August of 1842, when Atlanta represented nothing more metropolitan than a beautiful expanse of meadow land. On the spot where the Equitable building now stands was the spring that furnished the water for Mrs. Withers' home, which stood nearby. Mrs. Withers attended school in the small frame structure that stood on the corner below the spot that now holds the Constitution building.

Two Sisters Survive.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Sallie Hudson and Mrs. Susan Pierce; two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Cherry, of Atlanta, and Mrs. A. B. Sanders, of Griffin; three sons, W. G., John B. and W. T. Withers; besides several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The parents of Mrs. Withers were the first settlers of Atlanta; her father, Willis Carlisle, and her mother, who was Miss Sara White, both of Marietta, having married in 1841, moving immediately to Atlanta upon the suggestion of Rev. Josiah Burke, who performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Withers' first Atlanta home was on Marietta street, and later her parents moved to what is now Edgewood avenue, their home being on the site that faces the Equitable building.

The reminiscences that Mrs. Withers has often told her friends, of the early days in Atlanta's growth, when the city's present size was nothing more than the prophesy of those that even then foresaw its great future, are interesting and even wonderful.

In telling of the days when she was about 6 or 7 years of age, Mrs. Withers once said that the streets were then but trails through the woods, and the land that now holds the largest office buildings was but pasture land, with no house upon it.

Married in 1862.

It was in 1862 that Mrs. Withers, then Miss Julia Carlisle, was married to Walter Withers, the cere-

Wounded Heroes Will Be Guests At Great Circus

Constitution Will Give Big Party for Convalescents at General Hospital No. 6 at Fort McPherson Friday Afternoon.

By Paul Warwick.

Experience may take the glamor away from many things; a kaleidoscopic view of too many of the old world's doings may finally make blase cynics out of the cheeriest of us—but that roseate glow that hovers over our anticipation of seeing a circus can never be dimmed.

Soldiers who have rubbed shoulders with some pretty tough circumstances are no exception; gruesome things are soon forgotten, even if the forgetter happens to be a lad that stopped some of Jerry's metal mementoes while he was cussin' the squareheads at the front.

But here's the point! The Constitution's going to have a party. Not a box party, nor a dinner party, nor a political party—but an honest-to-goodness, dyed-in-the-sawdust circus party! And the somewhere near 400 convalescent soldiers at Fort McPherson are going to be the guests of the occasion.

The Sells-Photo gang of delighters of the young and rejuvenators of the old are going to toss an extra hogshead or so of pep into things Friday afternoon, and the lads who suffered wounds "overseas" are going to grab off the chance of a lifetime to feel again that titillating thrill that was once wont to vibrate through youthful

MINERS' WALKOUT NOW INEVITABLE, LEADERS STATE

Officials of United Mine Workers End Indianapolis Conference and Return Home to Direct the Coming Strike.

STATEMENT ISSUED AS "FINAL WORD"

"Issue Has Been Made, and If It Must Be Settled Upon Field of Industrial Battle, Responsibility Rests on Coal Barons Alone," Say Miners.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 29.—After pronouncing a strike of bituminous coal miners inevitable, and blaming the operators for forcing a walkout, that may involve half a million men directly, the conference here of officials of the United Mine Workers of America wound up its business tonight and dissolved. District presidents and members of the scale committee left for their homes to direct the locals in the strike, which is to become effective at midnight Friday.

Only a new wage agreement to replace the one which they claim expired with the war emergency, is wished by the union, its leaders emphasizing that a call from the mine owners for a joint meeting will find the organization ready to negotiate on any or all of the demands formulated at the Cleveland convention of the union.

These and other points in the union's position were set forth in a statement prepared by a committee of the conference and adopted by unanimous vote. The statement was characterized as the "final word" from union forces, and John L. Lewis, acting president, and other officials referred questioners to the statement as embodying everything that could be said and as answering all rumors as to motives actuating the union.

Combats Claim.

The statement brought out that no communication had been received from the national administration, and that the union had knowledge of President Wilson's attitude toward the strike only through newspaper accounts. It combatted the president's claim that the strike was illegal by asserting that the right to strike or quit work had been

Interests of Public Will Be Protected

Washington, October 29.—The position of the government in the impending coal strike was announced tonight by Attorney General Palmer as follows:

"There can be no doubt that the government has the power in the public interest, under the law, to deal with the projected strike of the bituminous coal miners, without infringing upon the recognized right of men in any line of industry to work when they please and quit work when they please. The illegality of this strike can and will be established without in any way impairing the general right to strike, and the general right to strike is not in issue in any sense whatever in the present situation. This is true because the circumstances differentiate this case from the case of any other strike that has ever taken place in the country. It does not follow that every strike is lawful merely because the right to strike is recognized to exist. Every case must stand upon its own bottom and be governed by its own facts. Therefore, when the president said in his statement last Saturday that 'such a strike in such circumstances' is not only unjustifiable, but unlawful, reference was had only to the conditions in the impending situation.

Outside Pale of Law.

"The proposed strike was ordered in a manner, for a purpose and with a necessary effect, which taken together put it outside the pale of the law. After the war began the production of fuel was regarded as one of the subjects of such peculiar public importance as to justify a special statutory enactment. The fuel administration was created to supervise the subject and matters of wages as well as prices were considered and sanctioned by the fuel administration.

"After the cessation of hostilities the fuel administration suspended certain of its orders, but did not terminate them, and they are subject to reinstatement at any time upon the president's order and the statute under upheld by the courts, and that in leaving their jobs the men will exercise a constitutional prerogative.

Charges that the miners were endeavoring to force nationalization of the mines were indignantly denied, and again the language of the statement that "all of the demands are incorporated in the wage proposal," was quoted.

Finally, emphasis was laid on the last sentence of the statement as follows:

"The issue has been made, and if it must be settled upon the field of industrial battle, the responsibility rests fairly and squarely upon the coal barons alone."

Ready to Negotiate.

The word "if" was explained as significant of the readiness to negotiate. While conceding that there was no way of preventing the strike, the union's spokesman, Ellis Searles, argued that with the strike in actual effect the operators demand that the strike order be withdrawn as a condition precedent to negotiation was automatically wiped out.

"We fully expect this difficulty to be settled as all difficulties in the mining industry have been settled for thirty years—by direct negotiations between the owners and workers," he said. "When that point will be reached we do not attempt to say. But the strike will be so big and have such far-reaching effects that we do not believe it can last very long before a crisis is reached."

The statement follows:

Statement of Miners.

"The conference of United Mine Workers, composed of members of the international executive board, the scale committee of the central competitive district, and the district presidents, United Mine Workers of America from either the presconsideration to the statement of the president of the United States, which appeared in the public press recently, relative to the impending strike of bituminous miners set for November 1st. No communication was received by the international officers of the United Mine Workers of America from either president or any representative of the federal government.

"A canvass of the entire situation shows that a strike of bituminous miners cannot be avoided. A regularly constituted convention of representatives of United Mine Workers held at Cleveland, Ohio, on September 25, ordered a strike of bituminous mine workers to become effective November 1, in the event a wage scale was not negotiated before that time. The highest authority of the organization has acted in this manner, and no representatives of the organization have authority to set such action aside. The facts are that the same supreme authority which ordered the pending strike is the same as that which approved the contract which has now expired.

Responsibility for Strike.

"The responsibility for the strike rests with the coal operators. They have refused to negotiate a wage agreement, notwithstanding the fact the mine workers' representatives have urged and beseeched them to do so. The fundamental causes which prompted the mine workers to take this drastic action are deep-seated. For two years their wages have remained stationary. They appealed one year ago to the federal fuel administrator, Dr. Garfield, and from him to the president of the United States for an increase in wages sufficient to meet the increase in the cost of the necessaries of life. Their appeal was rejected and their request refused. Notwithstanding this, they continued mining coal until now their contract expires, when they are determined that their grievances must be adjusted in a reasonable and satisfactory manner.

"The courts have held that the working men have a right to strike and may quit work either singly or collectively for the purpose of redressing grievances and righting wrongs. The constitution and guarantees of this free government give men the right to work or quit work individually or collectively.

"Exercising Right."

"The mine workers, therefore, are but exercising the right guaranteed by the constitution and which cannot be taken away by the representatives of government when they quit work or when they refuse to work until their grievances are adjusted. The mine workers' representatives are ready, willing and anxious to meet the coal operators for the purpose or negotiating an agreement and bringing about a settlement of the present unhappy situation. They will respond at any time to a call for such a meeting and will honestly endeavor to work out a wage agreement upon a fair and equitable basis, which agreement alone will put the mines in operation annd guarantee the nation an adequate supply of coal. We assert that the mine workers have no other purpose in view—other than to secure a working wage agreement. All of their demands are incorporated in the wage proposal submitted to the coal operators, and each and all are subject to negotiation.

Conscious of the grave responsibility resting upon the representatives of the coal miners, we have no other alternative than to carry out the instructions of the United Mine Workers' convention. The issue has been made, and if it must be settled upon the field of industrial battle, the responsibility rests fairly and squarely upon the coal barons alone."

Tomorrow the executive board of the union will meet to clear up a big batch of businss incidental to the strike and various routine affairs which have been accumulating.

TO CLOSE MINES IF STRIKE.

St. Louis, October 29.—Thomas T. Brewster, chairman of the scale committee of the mine operators' association, tonight reiterated that the mine owners would make no attempt to operate the mines without government aid after the strike became effective, and reasserted that the operators would reopen negotiations with the miners if the strike order were rescinded pending settlement of differences.

Mr. Brewster declared the statement issued by the miners at Indianapolis tonight was "merely a reiteration of what they have said before."

"The operators," continued Mr. Brewster, "will resume negotiations with the miners and submit all disagreements to arbitration, provided the strike order be rescinded pending negotiations and the award of the arbitration board. We have assured the president and Secretary Wilson we would do this, but the miners have refused to."

Operators to Co-operate.

When told that Attorney General Palmer would act in the strike under provisions of the Lever food control act, Mr. Brewster said the operators would co-operate with the government to the fullest extent in continuing production of coal.

"We cannot operate the mines of our own accord if the men walk out," he said. "Laws in certain states provide for the status of miners' an dwithout government intervention we cannot put anybody to work to fill the strikers' places."

Discussing the report that the operators would meet in Cleveland Friday, Mr. Brewster said that while the operators have been holding themselves in readiness to confer on the situation, he had not been advised as to the reported meeting.

THIRTY THOUSAND TO STRIKE IN PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Pa., October 29.—Thirty thousand bituminous coal miners living and working within thirty miles of the Pittsburg retail district, were said by their leaders tonight to be ready to leave the pits when the final order was given tomorrow.

In addition to this army, many of whom are of foreign birth, there were in the neighborhood of 150,000 other miners in twenty-seven counties of central and western Pennsylvania awaiting the same call.

Among these men, it was admitted, there were many who were in no way connected with the United Mine Workers of America or any other union, but who, operators and labor leaders agreed, were not expected to work during the first few days of the suspension.

Steel men discussing the possible effects of a coal strike estimated that many mills in the Pittsburg district could operate for several weeks with the fuel stocks now on hand, while some plants, largely dependent upon natural gas for fuel, would suffer little inconvenience.

INCREASE OF WAGES.

Washington, October 29.—Wage increases of miner in Alabama since 1914 aggregate 47 per cent, Representative Huddleston, democrat, of Alabama, declared today in the house during discussion of the threatened strike of soft coal miners. Retail coal prices, he added, have been advanced in a greater degree.

His remark was an interruption of a speech by Representative Bland, republican, Indiana, who in defending the miners, declared their wages were advanced 20 cents a ton during the war, and that their "84 cents for mining a ton of coal does not meet the cost of living or represent a fair division of profits."

OPERATORS TO MEET.

Terre Haute, Ind., October 28.—Coal operators of the central competitive field are called to meet in Cleveland at 10 o'clock Friday morning, according to announcement tonight of Phil Penna, secretary of the Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators association. Mr. Penna said the meeting was to consider the situation in relation to the threatened strike of coal miners as it may develop.

Mr. Penna said he was not advised of the program for the Cleveland meeting other than that further negotiations with the miners would depend on developments of the next two days.

JENKINS ACCUSED OF HIDING HIMSELF

Reported Mexican Authorities Charge United States Government Ordered Consul to Fake Kidnaping to Provoke International Question.

(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, October 29.—Dispatches from Mexico today state that the government authorities at Puebla have published officially that William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent recently abducted by Mexican bandits at that place, had "hidden himself in order to provoke a grave international question," and that Jenkins had so acted "by order of his government."

The advices added that the government officials had seized the correspondence of Jenkins and his wife in an effort to substantiate the charges published against him.

The state department was informed today of the arrest of Jenkins' attorney at Puebla by the Mexicans, and is watching his case, it was learned authoritatively. As the liberator of Jenkins is a Mexican, it is doubted whether this government can act in his behalf. There is a suspicion in some quarters that the Mexican government is attempting to create an appearance of conspiracy between Jenkins and his attorney, with the intent of avoiding the necessity of having to refund the $150,000 indemnity paid the bandits as ransom.

Charges of Indebtedness.

The dispatches state also that inspired charges are appearing in the government organs in Mexico City that Jenkins owed the government 200,000 pesos. The revenue office apparently inspired the report, but the newspapers admit that they are ignorant concerning the nature of the taxes due and for what they are owed.

The advices state that, at the probable instigation of Luis Cabrera, head of the Mexican treasury, the Mexico City press also charges that enemies of the Mexican government have sent agents to various parts of the country to abduct prominent foreigners and in this manner to increase the number and seriousness of the difficulties facing President Carranza.

Until the Mexican press' charges are brought to the attention of the state department officially, it was not believed here tonight that this government would issue either a denial of them or take up the affront diplomatically with the Mexican foreign office.

Rebel Leader Holds Power.

Reports from Mexico state that Francisco Villa is ready to launch his new campaign against the Carranza government and coincidentally with this report is another saying the rebel leader holds the balance of power between Obregon and Gonzales, rival military candidates for the presidency to succeed Carranza.

It is learned from these advices that both Gonzales and Obregon have made overtures to Villa and General Filipe Angeles, Villa's chief of staff, to secure their support in the presidential campaign which is now in progress, despite President Carranza's desperate efforts to stave off the campaign until next year. Most Mexicans in the capital, according to today's dispatches, fear that if Obregon and Gonzales undertake to "fight it out," regardless of the elections next August, Villa may have little difficulty in walking into Mexico City. Luis Cabrera, minister of Hacienda, has voiced this danger by urging that Carranza be maintained in the presidency indefinitely on the ground that any other arrangement would result in another revolution and further disrupt the country.

EIGHT ARE HELD FOR COMPLICITY IN TERROR PLOT

BOMB EXPLOSIONS BELIEVED PLANNED

Assassination Plotted of Cleveland Police Chief and Another City Official—Suspects to Be Tried October 31.

Cleveland, Ohio, October 29.—A plot to assassinate Chief of Police Frank W. Smith and another high city official of Cleveland was revealed by the police today, following the round-up of seven men and one woman, alleged to be directly involved in a conspiracy to spread terror throughout the country by another series of bomb explosions. Chief Smith admitted receiving telegraphic warning from a point in the east. He would not divulge the identity of the other city official.

Chief Smith declared that evidence which police already have obtained reveals a plot for a country wide anarchistic uprising during the winter and early spring. Proof has been obtained, he said, that arms and ammunition were ordered from various makers and that home made weapons were being prepared here in large quantities.

Another arrest was made in New York today, bringing the total up to eight. According to the police, membership cards in radical organizations were found among his effects.

Five of the six persons taken in four raids last night were given preliminary hearings today. Three, Theodore Leowar, an electrician; Steve Matejka, a machinist, and the latter's wife were held in bail of $15,000. The others, one of which is still held for investigation, were placed under $1,500 bail. Trial was set for October 31.

Many Explosives.

With the prisoners the police captured a large quantity of high explosives, one complete bomb, several incomplete bombs, a number of automatic pistols and a supply of ammunition and much anarchistic literature.

The police declared the bombs were similar to those used in the bombing of Mayor Davis' home. They believe the arrests will lead to apprehensions in other cities in connection with the country-wide bomb outrage which occurred last May and June.

Detectives were sent from here last night and today to co-operate with police in other cities.

The campaign of terrorism was to have culminated next May day in a revel of bombing, slugging and slashing that the conspirators are said to have hoped would leave the city at their mercy.

To this end huge knives and steel bludgeons were to be provided, the plotters planning to make 5,000 of each.

Hundreds of automatic pistols were ordered, it was said, and each gun-toter was to have six extra cartridge magazines.

World Conference On Labor Questions Holds First Session

United States to Participate in Deliberations Unofficially, Pending Ratification of Peace Treaty.

THIRTY-SIX COUNTRIES REPRESENTED AT MEET

Secretary of Labor Wilson Named President of Conference—Federation of Labor and United States Chamber of Commerce to Choose Delegates.

Washington, October 29.—The first move of the international labor conference, which formally opened here today, was to take steps to obtain the virtual participation of the United States in the conference, although congress has decided against the appointment of delegates prior to ratification of the peace treaty.

On motion of Baron Mayor des Planches, Italian government delegate, United States employers and workers' organizations were invited unanimously to send representatives to take part in the conference, which is still in a state of "being organized."

While no attempt was made to obtain the appointment of governmental delegates, as such action would have been in direct conflict with the decision of congress, the United States will be represented in the conference through Secretary of Labor Wilson, who opened today's session and probably will continue as conference president during the major portion of its deliberations. Mr. Wilson will be proposed by the organizing committee as permanent chairman during the "period of organization," at the meeting tomorrow, and in view of the universal custom of selecting chairmen of international gatherings from the nation acting as host, no objection is expected.

Accepts Nomination.

Secretary Wilson said that he would accept the nomination in view of his interpretation that the organization of the conference cannot be completed until the league of nations is created, and that the United States is charged by the Versailles treaty with the organization of the conference.

The American Federation of Labor and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States were invited by the organizing committee to name the worker and employer delegate, respectively, to represent this country. Samuel Gompers, veteran chief of the federation, will represent the workers. Decision as to the choice of the chamber of commerce will await the arrival here tomorrow of Homer L. Ferguson, president.

Owing to the lack of time, the question of the admission of German and Austrian delegates was not taken up today and probably will be the first item on the program when the conference reconvenes at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

"The completion of the organization," said Mr. Wilson, "cannot take place until the league of nations has been created. While the final technical steps have not been taken, the creation of the league is now an assured fact. We can, therefore, go on with the definite assurance that it will be ultimately completed, and I take the liberty of suggesting that this conference proceed during the process of organization to the consideration of the questions it has before it."

In moving that a special invitation be extended to the United States, Baron Mayor des Planches, Italian governmental delegate, expressed his regret that the United States was not represented officially and said he hoped that country "might see its way clear to take part later on."

Brief Morning Session.

Cordial thanks for the work of the United States in organizing the conference and fervent wishes for the quick restoration to health of President Wilson were expressed in a resolution presented by the Venezuelan delegation and unanimously adopted.

The opening session continued only an hour, the conference recessing until this afternoon when the report of Arthur Fontaine, of France, chairman of the organizing committee, will be received.

Speaking "on behalf of the people of the United States and in the name of President Wilson," Secretary Wilson formally opened the conference which was provided for in the treaty of Versailles.

Welcoming delegates from all parts of the world, the secretary declared the conference represented the first concerted effort in history to deal with labor problems progressively.

36 Countries Represented.

Representatives of 36 countries, seated in alphabetical order in a large circle in the same hall of the Pan-American building where the national industrial conference came to grief, heard the secretary's address, which was translated into French when he had finished.

Ambassadors and ministers of many nations occupied places of honor on either side of the chairman's platform.

Germany and Austria also were without delegates, but their representatives are now en route and the question of seating them will be for the conference to decide.

Countries having delegates present today included Great Britain, France, Japan, Italy, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Sweden, Canada, China, Czecho-Slovakia, Switzerland, Denmark, Greece, Norway and practically all of the Central and South American republics.

DRASTIC ACTION TO KEEP MINES GOING

New Maximum Price.

One decision of the government conference on coal late today was to recommend to the president the re-establishment of maximum prices on coal which prevailed when the fuel administration went out of existence.

These prices are considerably lower than the prices now prevailing. It is considered certain that the president will comply with the recommendation, which means that a substantial reduction in soft coal prices, including those specified in large contracts made since February 1, will become effective almost immediately.

Dr. H. A. Garfield, former fuel administrator, made the announcement as to resumption of price control. He declared that his recommendations, which will go to the president tomorrow, would deal only with the question of prices and would not be concerned with the allocation of fuel or the zoning system of deliveries.

Refusal of the miners' organization to withdraw the strike order was a distinct surprise to officials, who changed quickly from a hopeful to a fighting attitude.

Before first word of rejection of the president's appeal reached here from Indianapolis, federal machinery was being made ready to deal with conditions likely to arise in the coal fields. Fuel Administrator Garfield was summoned here from Massachusetts for a conference at the white house. Paramount consideration was given the problem of keeping a volume of coal passing swiftly from mines to cities within the next few days and rounding up a civilian army that might be ready to work the mines.

The necessity of reviving the fuel administration was emphasized at various conferences during the day and this is to be decided tomorrow when President Wilson will receive recommendations of the conference of officials meeting late today that control of prices again be exercised. Administration leaders said congress would have to provide immediate funds, and assurances came from leaders of both houses, it was stated, that all the money the government needed in the emergency would be provided speedily and cheerfully.

Clothed with its war-time powers, the administration would be called upon to see that the coal supply is conserved and distributed as it was during the shortage two winters ago. Railroads must have first call, with second consideration given essential industries, on which the public depends for comfort and warmth.

The government contends that the miners are working today under the war-time agreement made by Dr. Garfield, stipulated to run until the end of the war, or until April 1, 1920. This date was put into the agreement so that a new scale might be agreed upon in event the war was not over by that date. The fuel administration, holding the agreement still valid, would be authorized, it was said, to take charge of the mines and keep them in operation.

Dr. Garfield was called to Washington by the cabinet at the suggestion of Director General Hines. The railroad administration is the nation's biggest coal buyer, and its stock, according to reports given out last week by union officials, is relatively small. Anticipating a strike, the railroads, especially those touching the central coal fields, have been giving "one hundred per cent coal car service," which means that railway stocks have been largely increased within the past 48 hours. Director Hines, in conference during the day with cabinet officers, told of extraordinary precautions to assure full service by all the roads until the emergency has passed.

Since miners and operators failed to settle their differences at the joint conference here last week, reports had gained wide circulation that the men who called the strike would be arrested and held on charges of conspiracy. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, referred to these reports, and said union men would not evade the issue. Announcement today that such a step had not been considered by the department of justice and would not be considered relieved feeling in some quarters.

FUEL ADMINISTRATOR SUMMONED.

Washington, October 29. — The government is prepared to take drastic steps to deal with conditions arising in the coal fields if the executive board of the United Mine Workers of America permits the strike order to stand. This became known today after Federal Fuel Administrator Garfield had been summoned from Massachusetts to discuss the situation with Secretary Tumulty.

Mr. Garfield left a memorandum on the coal situation for President Wilson. He was hopeful the strike could be averted and that it would not be necessary to revive the fuel administration, which under the Lever food control act, still would retain all its war-time authority over the nation's fuel supply.

Would Not Talk.

The fuel administrator would not discuss his conference with Mr. Tumulty, but his visit to the white house resulted in the renewal of suggestions that the fuel administration might again be called into existence to exercise the war-time control over fuel provided for in the Lever food control act.

While actively serving as administrator, Dr. Garfield was instrumental in bringing about the so-called Washington wage agreement, which expires April 1, 1920, or at the end of the war, and which, if has been contended, would be violated if the miners walk out.

MINERS WARNED.

Tacoma, Wash., October 29.—Members of district No. 10, United Mine Workers of America, today received formal notification from Governor Hart that the state of Washington would not tolerate any attempt to "freeze the government into submission," to demands being made by the organized miners under threat of strike November 1.

The governor declared he would not argue how the state can protect itself and its citizens. Governor Hart's message said:

"So far as I can ascertain the coal miners of the state of Washington have no specific grievance. Whatever may be the demands of the coal miners in other states citizens of this state should not be required to suffer from cold and hunger by reason of your affiliation with residents and organizations of other states who would use you in an attempt to starve and freeze the government into submission, and a yielding of its properly constitutional functions to an unauthorized body."

TO CONFISCATE LIGNITE COAL.

Denver, Colo., October 29.—The United States railroad administration issued orders to all of the railroad companies in this state to confiscate all lignite coal in transit and to be mined in northern coal fields of Colorado the rest of this winter for emergency use of the railroads.

The order does not affect companies operating in fields in the southern and western part of the state as bituminous and anthracite coal is mined in that region.

COMMENDS PRESIDENT.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 29.—Governor Sproul has sent this telegram to the secretary to the president:

"President's statement on the coal strike situation is superb. You may count upon the complete cooperation of Pennsylvania in such plans as he may decide are necessary in this great emergency. Public sentiment in this great industrial state will back him up in this courageous and patriotic stand. Command us when we may be of service."

COAL STATES TO SUFFER.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 29.—The strike of bituminous coal miners which is to start Friday midnight will be most keenly felt in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, three of the principal producing states of that grade of fuel, according to local coal merchants and operators. They said tonight that much coal from the central competitive district has been shipped to the northwest in the last few weeks and that section is in better condition to withstand the rigors of the tie-up than are some of the states where the coal is mined.

It was estimated that 90 per cent of the bituminous miners are organized. The unorganized production is even less than these figures indicate, it was said, and probably can meet less than 5 per cent of the normal consumption demands. The anthracite district produces enough coal for the area it covers, but it is not included in the strike order. It was estimated fifteen days' commercial supply was on hand in Indiana.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT TO TACKLE FINANCE

Stormy Session Expected in Commons as Money Matters Come Up.

London, October 29.—National finance was the topic up for debate in the house of commons today, with the government facing probably as critical a body of members as ever in the history of parliament. More than 100 members had given notice of a desire to speak and all were understood to be prepared to belabor the government for its alleged waste and extravagance. Some of the government's keenest critics are among the supporters of the coalition, including such staunch unionists as Sir Edward Carson and Lord Robert Cecil.

The program called for the introduction this afternoon by Austin Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, of the official resolution drafted by the cabinet at Monday's meeting. The motion declares "that this house, realizing the serious effects upon the trade and industry of the nation of the enormous financial burdens resulting from the war, promises its hearty support to the government in all reasonable proposals, however drastic, for the reduction of expenditure and the diminution of the debt."

This is counted as equivalent to a demand for a vote of confidence. Donald MacLean, for the independent liberals, and W. C. Adamson, for the labor party, have tabled amendments which are virtually equivalent to votes of censure.

It is expected the debate will occupy the remainder of the parliamentary week. Both Premier Lloyd-George and Mr. Bonar Law, the government leader, will speak in the government's defense. Winston Churchill, the war secretary, will defend the war office, against which some of the strongest charges of extravagance have been launched. Others of the ministers probably will offer defenses of their respective departments.

Notwithstanding the intense anti-government feeling in a large section of both the house and electorate, present opinion in political quarters is that the defeat of the government is unlikely.

Senator Martin Better.

Charlottesville, Va., October 29.—Some improvement was evident today in the condition of United States Senator Thomas S. Martin, who is ill at a local hospital. Although still very restless Senator Martin passed a quiet night and ate a hearty breakfast this morning, his physician announced.

1,500 RAIL MEN VOTE TO DECIDE SYMPATHY STRIKE

Four Railroad Brotherhoods and Shopcraft Men in Steel Strike Region to Decide Action at Once.

RESULT OF VOTING TO BE KNOWN SUNDAY

Imported Agitators and Alien Workmen Blamed for Steel Strike by the Homestead Chamber of Commerce.

Pittsburg, Pa., October 29.—Officials of the four railroad brotherhoods and shop crafts today started taking a strike vote of the 1,500 employees of the union railroad who operate trains in steel plants of the Pittsburg district. The result of the vote will not be known until next Sunday and in event the men favor a strike they will be called out in sympathy with the striking steel workers, acording to the brotherhood executives.

A statement in connection with the steel strike, addressed to Pennsylvania representatives in congress by the Homestead chamber of commerce, was made public here today. The chamber says its membership is thoroughly acquainted with the industrial situation as far as the steel industry of western Pennsylvania is concerned, and expresses the opinion that American workmen are in favor of industrial peace, but are interfered with "only by imported leaders or agitators and alien workmen."

To remedy the situation the chamber urges the enactment of laws placing under government regulation combinations of employers and capital and of employees and labor organizations. Americanization of foreigners, withholding from him the rights and liberties of a citizen until he has become naturalized, registration of aliens with some designated authority, and more stringent immigration laws are also advocated.

NO CHANGE AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, October 29.—General conditions in the Chicago steel district, now affected for more than five weeks by the strike of steel mill workers, today showed no marked change from the last few days. Chief interest still centered at Gary, Ind., where one strike leader said the strike had been lost through use of federal troops and the mayor had requested that the soldiers be not withdrawn for fear of a recurrence of radical activity that would jeopardize lives and property.

Canton, Ohio, October 29.—Following a night of quiet around the steel plants, interest today in the Canton strike situation turned to the scheduled address of W. Z. Foster, strike leader, who is to speak in Eagles' hall this afternoon. Police say they do not anticipate any trouble at the meeting.

Reports from the plants crippled by the strike are that more men went to work this morning in answer to appeals by the managers to men to return under promised protection of the state, county and city.

FITZPATRICK PLEASED.

Pittsburg, Pa., October 29.—John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the national steel strike committee, left here tonight for Chicago after a survey of the strike situation in the Pittsburg district.

Mr. Fitzpatrick, who spent two days here, said he was pleased with the situation, and things were going as "well as could be expected."

"Steel production in the strike districts," said Mr. Fitzpatrick in a statement issued before his departure, "is little if any more than 15 per cent normal. The steel strike is solid, and it is going to stay solid."

Secretary W. Z. Foster left strike headquarters earlier in the afternoon for Canton, Ohio, where he expected to address a meeting of strikers.

Several American authors, including Thomas Nelson Page and Booth Tarkington, are having their books printed in raised letters for the use of blind American soldiers.

SWISS BOURGEOISIE EXULTANT OVER ELECTION RESULT

Berne, October 29.—Satisfaction with the results of the election to the national council, which show only 39 socialists chosen on the final recount, is expressed by the bourgeois press today. The Swiss democracy, these newspapers comment, withstood victoriously a strong attack on the part of the extremists who had been boasting that the bourgeois parties would be snowed under. The final results show that the council with a total of 189 members will be made up as follows:

Radical democrats, 63; Catholic conservatives, 42; socialists, 39; the new peasant party, 27; liberal democrats, 9; eastern Switzerland democrats, 4; Grutleans, 3; progressive bourgeois, 1; evangelist, 1.

QUANTITIES OF SUGAR SHIPPED TO EUROPE

Four Million Pounds Distributed to Germans in Occupied Territory.

Washington, October 29.—Representative Bland, republican, Indiana, submitted in the house today a statement from the sugar equalization board that 493,000 long tons of sugar were exported from the United States this year, of which 154,000 tons had been intended for domestic consumption, while the remainder had been refined here for buyers abroad. Mr. Bland also submitted cables from the American sales organization abroad declaring that 1,798,000 pounds of army sugar were sold in Europe, as also 4,124,800 pounds of the army stocks for distribution among the German poor in "accordance with the plan of the allies to prevent suffering in occupied territory."

Replying to a resolution of the house, Secretary Baker today wrote Chairman Kahn, of the military committee, that 7,151,083 pounds of sugar were held by the war department.

In answer to a request from former Representative Fitzgerald, democrat, Massachusetts, as to the amount of candy held in storage by the war department, Mr. Baker wrote that 7,188,788 pounds were on hand last week and that 5,597,918 pounds were being disposed of as surplus.

Atlanta Man Home From "Y" Service With Russian Bride

After spending nineteen months "overseas" in Y. M. C. A. work in Russia and England, Miller S. Baker, of 168 West North avenue, has returned to New York city, accompanied by a Rusian girl as his bride.

Mr. Baker, who was in the service at Camp Gordon for some time after the United States entered the war, went to Europe in April, 1918. When he reached London he opened Washington Inn, in St. James square. Washington Inn was a "Y" for American officers. When King George and Queen Mary made an inspection trip to the inn, he had the honor of acting as escort to the British sovereigns.

It was during his service at Washington Inn that the call was issued for workers to serve with the allied expedition in north-Russia, and Mr. Baker was one of 18 "Y" men who volunteered. The party sailed in November, 1918, and landed in Murmansk during the arctic night, which lasted for three months thereafter.

After a few weeks, Mr. Baker was sent to Archangel, spending seven days on an ice-breaker, on a trip of 500 miles through ice 5 feet thick. The arrival at Archangel revealed a great food shortage. Mr. Baker had charge of supplies for 34 "Y" huts, co-operating in his work with the British Y. M. C. A. Convoys of as many as 75 sleds, laden with food and supplies, would often make a trip of 125 miles to serve allied soldiers.

While in Archangel Mr. Baker met Miss Maria Boolan who was a record-keeper for the "Y." When the allied forces were ordered to evacuate Archangel, Mr. Baker arranged to bring her back to America as his wife.

The wedding took place at Leith, Scotland, with the Rev. M. L. Waights, of Nicholson Square Methodist Episcopal church, of Edinborough, Scotland, officiating.

Before the war Mr. Baker was engaged in the dyeing business in Atlanta for four years, and was later connected with the Southern railway.

Offers for further work in Siberia with the "Y" have been received by him, but his present intentions are to spend some time in Atlanta.

Protest Honduran Election.

San Salvador, Tuesday, October 28.—Adherents of Dr. Alberto Membreno, vice president of Honduras, abstained from voting in the Honduran election held last Saturday, and have issued a manifesto of protest, according to advices received here. Dr. Membreno, who has been in Guatemala, has arrived here on his way to Honduras.

RESPONSIBILITY ON TRADE BOARD

Federal Trade Commission Upholds Recent Statement Criticising Senator Watson, of Indiana.

Washington, October 29.—The federal trade commission in a communication to the senate today assumed full responsibility for its recent statement criticising Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, who charged that the commission was a hotbed of bolshevism, sedition and anarchy.

In response to a resolution of Senator Jones, republican, Washington, Acting Chairman Murdock said preparation and distribution of the commission's statement "was approved by three commissioners as a commission, to wit, Commissioners Murdock, Thompson and Culver." Commissioner Fort was ill.

The statement, Mr. Murdock further stated, was given generally to the press and paid for from government funds, the total cost being $2.36 charged to "the current expense of the clerical division."

The commission in its statement charged Senator Watson with having relation with the meat packers and demanded proof of his charges against the commission. Senator Watson later denied in the senate that he had had any relation with the packers.

DOLLAR PER HOUR DOCK WORKERS ASK

New Orleans, October 29.—Representatives of gulf coast dock workers told members of the national adjustment commission here today that they regarded $1 an hour as fair pay in view of the high living costs.

The men ask $1 an hour straight time, $1.50 for overtime and $2 for Sunday work. The present scale is 65 cents, $1 and $1.50.

Representatives of dock workers' organizations were heard from Mobile, Pensacola, Galveston, Beaumont and Gulfport.

A Balance Sheet---

When a Bank presents its statement, it shows so many Stocks and Bonds, so much Cash, etc. Its strength is determined in a large measure by the amount of these assets; and these are published to the world.

A Bank has no secrets—for by this publicity its standing is established. By its standing its clientele is attracted, and thus it grows into a great institution.

By the same token a City is known by its assets; chief among which are her Educational Institutions.

Few influences are so potent in building civilization as education. A trained mind is one of the greatest instruments God has for the advancement of His race.

Cities do much to attract plants that manufacture plows, hoes, etc., and these are good. But what about the plants that make ciizens by training their intellects, developing their wills and their characters, and thus fitting them to make the very laws of God co-operate to increase good will and make the world happier, better and withal a more prosperous place in which to live?

The greatest tax on efficiency is inefficiency.

We grow by knowing.

AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE is one of the greatest influences in Georgia for the making of fine women.

Hundreds of girls have entered here for the foundation of their future. And these girls go out into the World to herald abroad the advantages of that institution; and thus a stream of influence is flowing that reacts to the credit and continued growth of Atlanta and the South.

If AGNES SCOTT is not one of the greatest Colleges in the United States, it is because her cash balance alone is under weight. Her curriculum is the same as Vassar, but her finances are below par. Her subscription list is not great enough—her balance sheet is short.

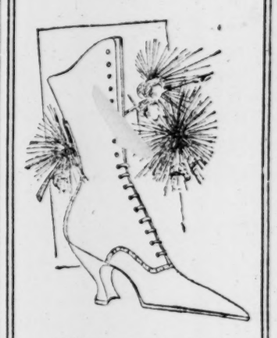

Eastern Colleges have millions of endowment, and for lack of facilities thousands of Southern Dollars Go East each year, because we cannot compete.

Will Atlanta fall short in the present crisis, when $175,000 of Eastern money has generously been offered for our fine Southern girls?

LEWIS IN CONTROL NOW IN KNOXVILLE

Full Authority Conferred on Camp Gordon Commander in Strike City. Martial Law Possible.

Knoxville, Tenn., October 29.—As a result of the street car strike and consequent rioting last Sunday, federal troops are here in command of General E. M. Lewis, who arrived yesterday afternoon with two companies of infantry and one machine gun company, including about 500 officers and men. Today's joint communication, signed by Governor A. H. Roberts, United States District Attorney W. T. Kennerly, Sheriff W. T. Cate and Mayor E. W. Neal, was addressed to General Lewis, giving him full authority in the local situation. The sequel to this may be a declaration of martial law, in the event of further serious trouble.

The letter to General Lewis says:

"Having brought two infantry companies and one machine gun company, with theih equipment, to this city at our request in order to preserve the peace and good order of this city and vicinity, we desire to express to you our thanks for such assistance and service and request you to take full charge of the situation and exercise your own judgment as to the means necessary to be used in maintaining order in the city of Knoxville and adjacent territory. The civil authorities stand to aid you in such manner as to you may seem necessary and proper."

City Quiet.

The city is quiet today, the street cars being operated on all lines.

While Governor Roberts, of Tennessee, was trying to arrange a conference here of officials of the Knoxville Street Railway company and its striking employees, eight thousand union workers in the city were voting today on a resolution calling for a general sympathetic strike to begin Saturday.

Troops Resented.

In the meantime fifteen hundred troops, federal and state, were held in readiness to quell any attempt at disorder. The presence of the soldiers is resented by union leaders and the strike resolution declares the walkout, if decided upon, shall remain effective until the troops are withdrawn.

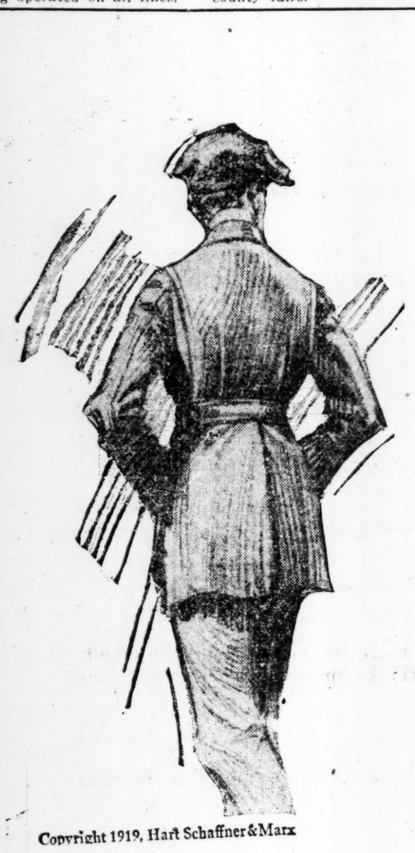

The Tennessee Law and Order league, meeting here yesterday, issued charters for 32 county leagues. The threatened coal strike was considered, and it is understood Governor Roberts urged that troops be held here indefinitely, not only to control outbreaks incident to a general strike in this city, but to be ready for use in the adjacent mining region. No disorder has occurred here in the past 48 hours.

ATTENDANCE DOUBLED AT FAIR IN COLQUITT

Moultrie, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—More than 12,000 people passed through the gates of the Colquitt County fair today and yesterday, nearly twice as many as attended it during the first two days last year. Since the fair opened the management is not alone in describing it as the "greatest county fair on earth," as hundreds of people who have looked it over hold to the same view.

The exhibit features have astonished both the visitors and the Colquitt county people, despite the fact that this has been one of the most adverse agricultural seasons the county has known in several years. The Agricultural building has an exhibit from every militia district in the county and the Girls' Canning Club building houses an exhibit from every one of the districts also.

The stock show is one of the biggest features of the fair. More than 200 fine hogs are on exhibit and the showing of beef cattle is possibly the biggest ever seen at a county fair in the south. Swift & Co.'s $10,000 many-sided exhibit is also attracting much attention. It in itself is as large as some county fairs.

TWENTY ENTOMBED IN BURNING MINE

Every Effort Being Made to Rescue Men Entrapped in Mine When Electric Fan Starts Fire.

Amsterdam, Ohio, October 29.—Twenty men are entombed in Mine No. 2 of the Younghisgheny and Ohio Coal company and a fire was raging in the mine at 2 p. m. The fire was caused when an electric fan caught fire in an entry about noon today, according to company officials. No explosion occurred and all efforts are being made to rescue the imprisoned men.

With flames spreading back toward the 21 miners trapped in the north passage of the No. 2 mine of the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal company, mine officials tonight held no hope for the men. Rescue parties were able to remain in the mine only a few minutes because of the intense heat and smoke.

For American-born workmen were reported to be among the miners entombed when an electric generator operating a fan exploded and set fire to the wood braces, according to company officials. The flames started 200 feet from the elevator shaft, it was said.

Partly suffocated and his clothing and hands burned, a trip driver emerged from the burning mine early tonight. He related how he lay on the floor of a mine car and his mule pulled him to the shaft.

A huge water tank was emptied into the shaft by a company of the Steubenville fire department, which arrived here tonight.

A crowd of more than one thousand men, women and children thronged the entrance to the mine tonight eager for any word as to the condition of the men back of the flames. No explosion has been reported so far.

TREATY AMENDMENTS ARE ALL DEFEATED

Senator Thomas, democrat, Colorado, said if the chaplain's daily prayer in the senate chamber had accomplished any improvement, he had been unable to perceive it. He added that he did not favor "saddling the Almighty with all the sins of man." Other opponents pointed out that the American constitution had endured without containing a reference to the Deity and declared such a reference in the treaty would make trouble because of the many religions represented.

"Never Prayed."

The chair was unable to control the galleries when Senator Sherman, saying he was not a member of any church, got into a tilt with Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas.

"I have never prayed in my life," said Mr. Sherman.

"Doesn't the senator think," interjected Senator Robinson, "that it's about time he began?"

"No," Mr. Sherman shouted, while the galleries kept up a roar of laughter; "no, not at the appearance of any such antagonist as the senator from Arkansas. I can take care of him myself."

The motion to table was made by Senator Robinson after Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, who had voted for several committee amendments, pleaded that senators who were consistently opposing all amendments as a matter of principle should not be asked to go on record directly in regard to the one proposed by Senator Sherman.

Total, 6.

Those against included:

Republicans — McCumber, North Dakota; Townsend, Michigan—2

Democrats—Beckham, Kentucky; Martin, Virginia; Pittman, Nevada; Stanley, Kentucky; Underwood, Alabama.

Total, 7.

In preparation for a vote on the Moses amendment, the senate voted down 31 to 49 a substitute by Senator Shields designed to equalize voting power in the league assembly.

Two democrats, Shields and Walsh, Massachusetts, supported the Shields substitute, and three republicans, Senators Kenyon, Spencer and Smoot, who supported the Moses amendment, voted against the Shields provision.

Atlantans Meet Belgian Royalty In Washington

Miss Pauline DeGive Presents Cluster of American Beauty Roses to King Albert, Who Expresses Regret at Being Unable to Visit South.

By James A. Hollomon.
(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—One of the most imposing little ceremonials incident to the visit of the king and queen of the Belgians to Washington was the presentation at 9:30 o'clock this morning of Mr. and Mrs. Henry De Give and Miss Pauline De Give, of Atlanta, to the royal couple and to Prince Leopold. The audience occurred at the Breckenridge Long home, which is the residence of the king and his suite during their stay in Washington.

Mrs. De Give preceded, followed by her husband, and then by Miss Pauline, the latter presenting the king for his queen a cluster of American Beauty roses as a tribute of admiration and love from the south. The king, with due formality, accepted graciously the token, and responded that he had heard much of the great section south of the Mason and Dixon line and was deeply distressed that he could not see more of it and particularly he regretted not being able to see Atlanta and meet her wonderfully progressive people of whom he had heard a great deal.

The royal couple showed characteristic graciousness to the Atlantans and were deeply appreciative of their having come such a distance to extend their greetings. After the brief formalities were over the king and Mr. De Give, who has for some years been the Belgian consul in Atlanta, consulted informally for several moments.

WOUNDED HEROES GUESTS AT CIRCUS

hones when the long, long train brought the long, long parade, and the short, too-short performance.

The great big tens are going to be pitched in the ball park at Piedmont park. It is there that the McPherson gang of "buddies" will react to the beautiful whine of the calliope and the melodious hullabaloo of the barker's seductive voice as he shouts the old, old story that's never lost appeal.

Every one of them's expected to be there. No matter whether he stopped the whole back end of one of Fritzie's garbage cans, or merely caught a nip of vagrant shrapnel that made him bloomin' mad when he had to swap his cozy little shellhole for a big white hospital and pretty nurses—they're all invited, and urged to be there with a yearning for a view of the bearded ladies, the smallest giant in the world, the largest dwarf and the whole gamut of things that couple up with clamorous clowns and bare-back riders to make the circus one great big, thriving old American institution.

There's no trick in it. It's not like they uhed to imagine about the leave areas before they had been there and enjoyed the very mischief out of themselves. They won't have to stand in line with a mess-kit cup to get their pink lemonade; and no "loot's" going to be allowed to stand up and demand a forty-minute drill session before the monkey will be allowed to ride the bicycle.

If you are one of them, or happen to see one of them—the buddies, not the monkeys—tell 'em that they needn't bother about wearing full packs or ammunition belts.

MRS. WITHERS DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

mony being performed in the First Baptist church.

Mrs. Withers was the oldest member of the First Baptist church, her mother having been a charter member of that church. Up until the illness with influenza and consequent pneumonia that began last winter and caused the weakening that finally resulted in her death, her interest in church affairs was unabated.

Topics of national interest were followed with an eagerness and accurate knowledge by Mrs. Withers up until less than three weeks before her death, and the fund of knowledge that she always had available was surprising to younger people.

Until the time of her recent illness she was an active member of the Pioneer society of Atlanta.

Mrs. Withers had lived constantly in Atlanta since her birth, with the exception of a twenty-month period during the Civil war that she and her mother spent in Nashville as refugees from the Union army on its march to the sea. She often said that she wished the officers who were with Sherman's army, and who left Atlanta burning, could have returned to see it in the glory that is finally achieved.

The funeral services for Mrs. Withers will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from her residence at 78 Avon avenue. Rev. John F. Purser will officiate, and interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

The pallbearers at the funeral services are all grandsons of the deceased and are: Leon Withers, J. S. Withers, J. W. Cherry, Jr., W. B. Sanders, A. S. Sanders, Gilbert Withers, Dr. Walter Withers and Mrs. Walter S. Withers.

INTERESTS OF PUBLIC WILL BE PROTECTED

which the orders were made is still in full force.

"With this situation existing, the convention of United Mine Workers at Cleveland last September decided to annul all wage contracts on November 1 and took the unprecedented step of deciding in advance of any opportunity for consultation either with the government or with the coal operators, to strike on November 1, unless satisfactory new arrangeemnts should be made.

Without Consent of Workers.

"Without any expression from the workers themselves, the organization promulgated a demand for a 60 per cent increase in wages, a six-hour day and a five-day week, and authorized a strike to be effective November 1, before the demands were even presented to the operators. The demand for a new wage agreement covered only a part of the coal fields, but the strike order was sent broadcast to workers in other fields where operators had been given no opportunity to even consider demands for increased wages or decreased hours. All this has been done while the miners in every field, through their right of collective bargaining had entered into a solemn contract with the operators, fixing wages and hours for a definite period which has not yet expired. The operators, upon the insistence of the president, indicated their willingness to negotiate and arbitrate, providing the strike is deferred, while the miners rejected the president's request for arbitration as a means of settlement and refused to defer the strike.

"Some of the wage contracts were made with the sanction of the federal government, operating through the fuel administration, to run during the continuation of the war or until April 1, 1920. Many others, however, run until a time still in the future without regard for the continuation of the war.

War Not Ended.

"While it is perfectly plain that the war is still on and any contract running until its conclusion is still in force, whatever weight may be given to the argument that the successful operation of the war no longer requires such contracts, it has no application whatever to the large number of such contracts which expire at a fixed date without regard for the war period. The armistice did not end the war and the courts in many cases have held that the war emergency statutes are still in force; the same rule must apply to war emergency contracts. The congress has held to this position so late as October 22, when an act of congress was approved, making even more effective the food and fuel control act.

"The suspension of the restrictions as to the price of coal is not necessarily permanent and conditions warrant a renewal of these restrictions at this time; and yet the government, if it reinstates the order fixing a maximum price would be absolutely helpless to protect the people against exorbitant prices of the product if the contracts made under its sanction should now be deliberately broken. This does not mean that a change could not be negotiated, and either agreed upon or arbitrated if proper protection of the public be accorded in the settlement, but it does mean that the public welfare in the war time emergency must still be the same permanent interest to be served by both parties. The government is the protector of the public welfare.

Would Paralyze Industry.

"The proposed strike, if carried to its logical conclusion, will paralyze transportation and industry. It will deprive unnumbered thousands of men who are making no complaint about their employment of their right to earn a livelihood for themselves and their families; will put cities in darkness, and, if continued only for a few days, will bring cold and hunger to millions of our people; if continued for a month, it will leave death and starvation in its wake. It would be a more deadly attack upon the life of the nation than an invading army.

"By enacting the food and fuel control act, congress has recognized the vital importance in the present circumstances of maintaining production and distribution of the necessaries of life and has made it unlawful for any concerted action, agreement or the arrangement to be made by two or more persons to limit the facilities of transportation and production, or to restrict the supply and distribution of fuel, or to aid or abet the doing of any act having this purpose or effect. Making a strike effective under the circumstances which I have described amounts to such concerted action or arrangement.

Duty to Enforce Law.

"It is the solemn duty of the department of justice to enforce this statute. We have enforced it in many cases. We must continue to do so irrespective of the persons involved in its violation. I hope it will not be necessray to enforce it in this case. Indeed, I am hearing from many sources that large numbers of the miners themselves do not wish to quit work and will not do so if assured of the protection of the government, of which they properly feel themselves a part. It is probably unnecessary for me to say that such protection will everywhere be given, so that men may exercise their undoubted right of continuing to work under such terms and conditions as they shall see fit. The facts present a situation which challenges the supremacy of the law and every resource of the government will be brought to bear to prevent the national disaster which would inevitably result from the cessation of mining operations."

BONDS ARE URGED BY KIWANIS CLUB

$3,000,000 Bond Issue for Schools Given Approval After Address Made by Superintendent W. F. Dykes.

In line with action already taken by the Atlanta Federation of Trades, the Atlanta Woman's club and the Moreland Parent-Teacher association, the Kiwanis Club of Atlanta has expressed its approval of a $3,000,000 bond for the public school system of the city.

Superintendent of Schools W. F. Dykes spoke before the club, describing the need for new buildings and other improvements in the system. He told of the congestion in the schools and of the use of residences and store rooms for school purposes for which the city pays more than $15,000 a year rent.

Some of the grammar schools in Atlanta are good and some of them are not good, he said. In many instances people are sending their children a distance of two miles in order to get them into schools. Other people are sending their pupils to private schools.

"With compulsory attendance coming into effect in January something must be done, and done quick, to take care of the school system here," he said. "It should be a matter of civic pride to all of us to see that we can offer good school facilities to those who want to move here. As the situation exists now we are embarrassed when visitors ask to see our high schools."

He also emphasized the need of a negro high school, a probationary school and a vocational school for the city.

The session of the club was presided over by Dr. Samuel Green under the rule permitting members to serve in place of the president on various occasions.

President Henry C. Heinz gave a report of a recent visit to New York and told of the praise which the Atlanta club had won from the officials of the national organization. Plans for a visit to LaGrange in the near future were announced by Robert Wessel, governor of the fifth district of Kiwanis clubs.

Passage of Prohibition Enforcement Acts Sets Revenue Agents to Work to Make Liquor Ban Absolute.

Washington, October 29.—Armed with the drastic provisions of the prohibition enforcement act, which became effective as to war-time prohibition with passage by the senate of the measure over the president's veto late yesterday, agents of the bureau of internal revenue today took up the task of making absolute the ban on the manufacture and sale of liquor.

The few remaining saloons in the United States were legally open today for the sale only of beverages containing less than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol. Sale as well as manufacture of beverages of more than that amount alcoholic content laid the saloonkeeper as well as the brewer or distiller liable to heavy penalties. But despite its drastic provisions the law could not touch the man who had stored up a supply in his own home for his own use.

Internal revenue agents entered on their task of enforcing the law with the requested aid of law-abiding citizens, churches, civic organizations and welfare societies. In announcing his plans for enforcement of the war-time act, Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper called on such agencies and individuals and on state, county and municipal officials for assistance. Open violation of the law, Commissioner Roper asserted, would bring certain disrepute to the American form of government.

The internal revenue bureau will be backed up by the department of justice, which will conduct the prosecutions from evidence obtained by the bureau's agents.

MRS. DICKEY HEADS RED CROSS DRIVE

Accepts Chairmanship of Women Who Will Take Part in Campaign to Begin November 2.

Mrs. James L. Dickey, chairman of the canteen committee of the Atlanta chapter of the Red Corss, has accepted the chairmanship of the woman's work in the Red Cross roll call which begins November 2 and ends November 11.

No woman in the community has ever done a more definite piece of constructive patriotic work than Mrs. Dickey has done as head of the Red Cross canteen during the period of the war. This department of work was to go out of existence the first day of November, but Mrs. Dickey was prevailed upon to bring to a splendid close the work of her canteen committees by continuing them in service for the Red Cross and crowning their successes by completing the Atlanta Red Cross roll call, which will insure the continuance of the Red Cross in its great work for humanity.

Calls Important Meeting.

Mrs. Dickey calls a meeting of every member of every team and division of the canteen committee for Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the Red Cross house, 258 Peachtree. She also asks that every woman who has been a worker in any department of the Red Cross at any time during or since the war, meet with her at the same place and at the same hour that she may announce to them the plans for making the roll call a success.

"If my women co-workers will continue to stand with me a little longer as I feel sure they will do, I know that we can put over the Red Cross roll call, but unless I can rely upon their faithful services and loyal support, I, as an individual, can do little in this great service we are called upon to render.

"True, we are, many of us, more or less fatigued by our two years of canteen work, which has continued much longer than we have anticipated, but it has been a blessed work, for there was not a day we were not compensated in realizing that we were rendering service to the boys, sick and well, who won the war.

"As long as we saw what our efforts meant to them we were willing to work.

"In being asked to undertake the work of the roll call, which every Red Cross chapter in the nation is going to do, I saw that though we have an untold piece of work before us, we still have the chance to render a service which will be a fitting culmination of the work which we have already done under the inspiration of the Red Cross banner.

"I feel safe in pledging the success of the Atlanta roll call if the Red Cross workers of all departments will rally to the cause and meet me at the Red Cross house Friday morning at 10 o'clock."

Mrs. Hansell, Vice Chairman.

The sensation of the year in the drug trade is Aspironal, the Two-Minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the Laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the common people as ten times as quick and effective as whisky, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are now supplied with this wonderful new elixir, so all you have to do, to get rid of that cold, is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk a half dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls with four teaspoonfuls of water in a glass. AMERICAN LEGION POST IS PLANNED FOR EX-SAILORS

In order that a post of the American legion can be organized of ex-sailors who are now living in Atlanta, M. D. Baker, of 519 Empire building, is anxious to secure the name of some sailor who lost his life during the recent war. Mr. Baker wants to commemorate the memory of the sailor by naming the post of the legion after him.

There are in Atlanta about 500 ex-sailors, according to Mr. Baker, who is himself a former "pob." The great majority of them have as yet refrained from joining a post of the legion, and it is believed that a post of the ex-sailors of Atlanta would be one of the largest posts in the city, Mr. Baker says. A sailor is peculiar, and does not care much about mixing and mingling with his other brothers in the war—the "Yank" and the "Leather-neck," as he calls the soldiers and marines, respectively.

Already Mr. Baker has secured the names of 50 ex-sailors who are anxious to join the post composed of sailors, and it is believed that by the time definite plans are made for the organization, there will be a much larger number present. Mr. Baker has prospects of forming one of the largest posts yet organized in the city.

Any person who has the name of an Atlanta sailor who lost his life during the war, and who will communicate with Mr. Baker at the above address, will bestow a favor on the ex-gobs of Atlanta who are trying to organize the post.

GUN PLAY FIGURES IN MAKING ARREST OF ALLEGED THIEF

After a chase, replete with the gun play of a wild west movie, early Tuesday morning, an alleged burglar, giving his name as James W. Little, who says he formerly lived at 366 South Pryor street, was captured by Officers Cason, Hulsey, Brooks and Goode. He is being held at police headquarters, charged with the burglary of the home of R. M. Jones, at 318 South Pryor street.

According to Mr. Jones, he came in from work about 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, and found the man calmly looking over everything in the room. Mr. Jones yelled, and this was the signal for the burglar to seek the tall timbers, umping out of a window, he was making for quick get-away, when the officers joined in the chase, resulting in an immediate capture.

The police stated that articles stolen from the Jones home were strewn for half a block. These included an overcoat, raincoat, clothes and a number of postage stamps.

When searched at the station house, detectives stated several pawn tickets were found in Little's pockets, and these are being investigated with the suposition that Little has participated in other burglaries around Atlanta.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF FRANCIS BAKER TAKE PLACE TODAY

Funeral services for Francis Baker, twenty-one years of age, returned soldier, who died Wednesday at his home, 340 Courtland street, as the result of having been gassed while in France, will be held this afternoon from the residence.

Mr. Baker was a member of the 82d division, and went through some of the hardest fighting in France. He was gassed in one of the later battles of the war.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Baker; two brothers, E. S. and W. A. Baker, of Atlanta, and one half-sister, Mrs. Ethel B. Shepperd, and one half-brother, J. R. Baker, Jr., both of Perry, Ark.

CRAWLEYS WILL FACE FEDERAL COURT TRIAL

The federal cases against Felix and Frank Crawley, under which they are charged with harboring a deserter from the United States army, will be heard before Judge Samuel Sibley on Friday, having been continued Wednesday.

The two Crawleys are brothers of George and Decatur Crawley, now held in the Fulton county Tower under sentence of death for the murder of Deputy Marshal Dixon, while that deputy was leading a posse through the mountains of North Carolina in search of deserters. An additional charge against Frank Crawley alleges that he failed to register under the draft law.

Felix Crawley was tried with his two brothers for the murder of the deputy marshal, but was acquitted on evidence that showed that he was not present at the time of the shooting.

Walter Stanley, and his twin brother, Willard, were tried Wednesday on a charge of violating the selective service laws by their failure to register. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty in this case, as they did in the case of Carmie Stanley, tried under the same charge.

Postoffice Robbed.

Word was received at the local office of postoffice inspectors to the effect that the safe in the postoffice at Pine View, Ga., had been dynamited Tuesday night, and a quantity of cash stolen. No further particulars were learned, but an inspector has been sent to Pine View for the purpose of making a thorough investigation of the situation.

BAPTISTS MAKE PLANS FOR SPEED-UP WEEK

Rev. J. W. Ham Makes Public Letter From James M. Smith Estate Manager.

Rev. J. W. Ham announced Wednesday that the Atlanta Baptist Tabernacle is planning to observe Speed-Up-Week, November 1 to 7, in all outstanding subscriptions to the debt fund on the church.

The campaign of last spring totaled $86,000, of which amount $36,000 is on the books and is maturing at the present time. Money is coming in on every mail in response to the 3,000 letters sent out this week to the subscribers.

December 1 is the last date of payment on these pledges and it is necessary that every subscriber should pay in full in order to close up the entire matter and prevent the sale of the property January 1.

Mr. Ham states that the mission boards of the Baptist convention have pledged $25,000, conditioned on the collection of the outstanding subscriptions. This gift from the mission boards will close up the debt entirely. It is not collectible, however, until a sum sufficient to come within $25,000 of the debt is collected, the policy of the boards being in their donations to pay the last part of the debt.

Mr. Ham has released for publication a statement from the manager of the James M. Smith estate, who holds the deed of the property, this statement clearly defining the policy of the estate concerning the payment on January 1, as the last day of grace.

The letter of the estate as given out by Mr. Ham is as follows:

Athens, Ga., Sept. 22, 1919.

Rev. J. W. Ham,
Pastor Baptist Tabernacle,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

We write to inquire as to what progress you have made in the matter of securing subscriptions or funds for the purpose of liquidating the indebtedness of your church to this estate, and as to the success you are meeting in the collection of subscriptions you have secured.

We feel that it is hardly necessary for us to make reference to the unusual indulgence shown by the administrators of this estate up to the time of instituting legal proceedings for the collection of the debt, nor to the extraordinary leniency exhibited in granting approximately a year's time after judgment had been secured to enable your institution to raise funds to relieve itself of this obligation.

While we are in no sense unmindful of the character of the work of your organization, it devolves upon the administratrix of this estate to wind up its affairs as speedily as possible and we wish this letter to be accepted as notice now that under no consideration, nor in any form, will the present agreement as to extension of time and payment of the debt be deviated from, and should the debt not be paid on or before the date agreed upon, the property of the church will be forthwith disposed of in such manner as will appear to the best interest of the estate.

We therefore urge upon you the advisability of pressing your collection of subscriptions from this time forward until the full amount required shall have been realized.

We should be very glad to hear from you at your early convenience.

Very respectfully,
ESTATE OF JAMES M. SMITH.
By J. O. MITCHELL,
Manager.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA TO HAVE POLICE WOMEN

Four of the students attending the training school for social service, being conducted by the American Y. W. C. A. in Czecho-Slovakia, are to have the distinction of being the first police women in the new republic. The commissioner of police in Prague has requested that the Y. W. C. A. secretaries in charge of the school select four women qualified for work with delinquent women and children that he may appoint them at the close of the school term in October, to fulfill these newly-created positions.

Twenty-five women are being trained in the school which is lodged in the palace of the former governor of Bohemia, a picturesque old Gothic structure, set in the middle of large gardens and a park. One aim of the course, in addition to training the women for social welfare work among their own people, is to rebuild, physically, the students who attend, by means of careful medical attention, out of door exercise and sports. Many of them have suffered severely during the war. They come from all parts of the republic, most of them being teachers who wish to take up social service as a profession. Miss Ruth Crawford, head of the Y. W. C. A. mission, states that one hundred and fifty women applied for the course, twenty-five being the maximum number of applicants that could be accepted.

The Y. W. C. A. mission is in Czecho-Slovakia at the request of Dr. Alice Masaryk, daughter of the president of the republic.

Sentiment or Business: Which?

for the benefit of their families.

IN THE STRUGGLE FOR SUCCESS
many overlook the necessity of insuring their Estates, large or small, against loss after they shall be no longer in control.

THE ONLY SAFE PROVISION FOR SECURITY is through a Will, drawn by a lawyer trained and experienced in the form and technical wording necessary to insure its acceptance by the Court.

THE UNCERTAINTY OF LIFE DEMANDS that the making of a Will should not be "postponed to another day." It should be made NOW.

THE SELECTION OF AN EXECUTOR is vastly more important than the execution of a will.

WHEN SELECTING AN EXECUTOR
many are inclined to think of the Wife, a Son, a Brother, or some Friend. The sentiment is commendable.

BUT, THE BUSINESS ASPECT of the situation should be the first consideration.

THE ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS to be determined in the selection of an Executor are:

1. DOES the Executor possess the required business ability, and is he qualified by experience?
2. WILL the Executor comply strictly with instructions in the will, or be influenced by personal interest, favoritism or partiality for one beneficiary to the injury of others?
3. WILL the Executor have time to devote to the proper management of the Estate?
4. IS the Executor qualified to reinvest funds of the Estate, or will he have to depend on the judgment of others for advice?
5. IS the Executor qualified to keep the necessary records, or will he have to hire others for this work?
6. CAN the Executor attend to the numerous little legal matters connected with the administration, or will he have to consult a lawyer for advice in every instance?
7. WILL the Executor always be at his post when important business has to be looked after, or is it possible that he may be inaccessible?
8. IS the Executor certain to be alive when the Estate comes to be administered and is he certain to live until the provisions of the will are completely carried out?

YES, IS THE ANSWER to all these questions, an emphatic YES, if Trust Company of Georgia is appointed executor of your will.

SENTIMENT VS. BUSINESS
is just another form of stating the case—YOUR case. BUSINESS management is even more important for your estate when you are no longer here to manage it yourself.

THE TRAGEDIES WHICH HAVE RESULTED from failure to consider these questions are of frequent occurence. You can recall them, perhaps several, within your own knowledge.

TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA KNOWS ITS BUSINESS
thoroughly and its equipment and twenty-eight years successful experience qualify it for the management of Estates and Trusts, with the best results and at the lowest cost.

SAFETY IS ASSURED BEYOND DOUBT
by the most careful and systematic methods, by the personal supervision of men of well known probity and successful business experience and by exhaustive examination and audit of every Estate by certified public accountants, at least once a year.

COME IN AND TALK TO US OR, WRITE US ABOUT IT
Consultation will cost you nothing and we will have your will written by one of the most capable and experienced lawyers in the South, at our expense.

MEXICANS ARREST JENKINS' LAWYER

Charged With Complicity in Kidnaping of United States Consul, According to Advices.

Washington, October 29.—Advices reached the state department today stating that Senor Mestre, personal attorney for William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent in Puela, Mexico, who was kidneped and ransomed for $150,000, had been arrested, charged with complicity in the kidnapping. State department officials regard the arrest of Mestre and the charges officially made in Mexico that Jenkins was in a plot to be kidnaped and ransomed for a large sum as another example of the Mexican government's policy of attempting to cloud the issue in the endeavor to cover up the inefficiency of the government in protecting foreigners and nationals throughout Mexico.

The charge has been made by the Jenkins acted by orders of the United state government at Puebla that ed States government to hire himself and thus provoke a grave international situation. This is branded by state department's officials as being "utterly absurd."

It was learned today that the Mexican government has seized all the correspondence of Jenkins and his wife in the hope of finding something upon which to base the charges of conspiracy. The American charge d'affaires in Mexico City, George Summerlin, it was said, protested against the seizure.

Articles have appeared in some of the administration newspapers of Mexico City charging vaguely that Jenkins was in arrears 200,000 pesos, nearly the amount of the ransom, in revenues to the Mexican government. Other charges, according to today's advices, are that enemies of the government had sent agents to various parts of the country to kidnap prominent foreigners in order to create additional international trouble for Carranza. No credence is given to these charges in official circles here.

The state department still is waiting for more particulars regarding the kidnaping of Jenkins and the payment of the ransom. It was stated today that additional representations had been sent to the Mexican government in regard to the case.

Belgian Monarch Pays His Homage To Washington

Aboard Mayflower He Goes to Mount Vernon to Place Wreath Upon the Tomb of the Nation's First President.

Washington, October 29.—Belgium's monarchs paid homage today to the memory of Washington. At peaceful Mount Vernon, overlooking the placid Potomac, King Albert placed a wreath upon the sarcophagus of the nation's first chief executive. There was no more of pomp and ceremonial than when he visited the spots where Ile Grant, Lincoln and Roosevelt, but the simple ceremony was none the less deeply impressive.

Landing first from the barges which carried them from the presidential yacht Mayflower, Vice President Marshall, the members of the cabinet and their wives had preceded the Belgians up the gently sloping walk which leads to the tomb, awaiting there the coming of the king. Albert led the royal party, followed by Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold.

His majesty uncovered as he approached the red brick structure, in the face of which is a simple slab of white marble bearing the inscription:

"Within This Inclosure Rest the Remains of General George Washington."

Places Wreath on Tomb.

Then he lifted the huge wreath of yellow and white chrysanthemums which rested against the wall and stepped to the gate held open by an aged negro guard, who looked as though he might have been a servitor of the first president. Albert bowed at the entrance and then stepped within, placing the flowers gently upon the granite slab. Again he bowed, this time more deeply, and then stepped backward from the portal. Queen and prince then made obeisance before the sarcophagus, but no American stepped within the tomb.

There was no other ceremony.

The trip down the river was one of the memorable events of the Belgians' American tour. The king and his party were welcomed to the Mayflower with the ceremony the navy knows so well. When the motor cars carrying them entered the navy yard a gun barked the presidential salute and the standard of Belgium was hoisted as his majesty stepped aboard. A bosun's whistle piped its greeting and a band played the "Brabanconne." At the masthead was raised the flag of the vice president, which had to be made especially for the occasion.

Bugler Sounds "Taps."

As the Mayflower dropped anchor abreast Mount Vernon a bugler sounded "taps," and the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," while the military members of the party stood rigidly at salute. The impressive little ceremony was repeated when the yacht began the return journey.

The spotless Mayflower carried more than 200 passengers and luncheon was served on the way down the river. The party was taken ashore in barges, the king leaving last. From the tomb their majesties and the prince were taken to the historic colonial mansion where Washington lived and died. Albert stood on the wide veranda looking out over the broad expanse of the Potomac, with the trim yacht lying in the middle of the stream. The queen was entranced with the beauty of the vista and returned to the veranda again and again.

View Relics.

Within the mansion they viewed the relics of the great American with more than passing interest, and her majesty, a student of art, described as "wonderful" Houdan's bust of Washington, made while he was alive.

Then they were escorted about the quaint old-fashioned flower gardens, the kitchen, laundry and coach house. Queen Elizabeth clambered into the ancient carriage in which Washington rode with Martha Custis, poked her head out the window and smiled gleefully.

A huge seaplane circled over the grounds while the party strolled about and two other naval aircraft followed the Mayflower far down the river from Washington, dipping, circling and looping the loop.

The Mayflower docked at the navy yard at 6:10 o'clock and the royal Belgians were driven at once to the residence of Assistant Secretary of State Long. They were the guests tonight at a formal dinner given in their honor by Secretary and Mrs. Lansing. The Belgians wore court dress and the military members of the party were resplendent with medals and decorations.

To Go to Annapolis.

"I look like the midnight frolics," exclaimed Lieutenant General Baron Jacques to a civilian who stood near him as he caught a glimpse of himself in a mirror.

King Albert and the men of his party will motor tomorrow morning to Annapolis to inspect the naval academy. Queen Elizabeth will go to Baltimore to visit the Johns Hopkins hospital and the Red Cross hospital for the blind.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was one of those who called upon King Albert today and the conference lasted 45 minutes.

"He's a real man, even if he is a king," said Mr. Gompers as he left. "I neither bow down nor look down. A man is a man. I found King Albert very interesting and I was glad of an opportunity to renew the acquaintance which began at La Panne. We talked upon many subjects and I found him well informed. The labor situation and the unrest of the workers naturally was mentioned and I think I was able to give the king some information he did not have, but, of course, I am not at liberty to give his views upon any of the topics we touched upon."

Inspect Washington

While Albert, king of the Belgians, inspected the work done at the bureau of engraving today, Queen Elizabeth went driving with Mrs. Wilson. The drive was a feature not included in the regular program and was arranged so as to give the queen an opportunity of seeing the capital without having to face constantly the eyes of thousands who lined the route announced in the published program.

Before Mrs. Wilson and the queen started on the ride, the royal party visited the headquarters of the American Red Cross, to personally express appreciation of the society's work in behalf of Belgium. They left their residence at 10 o'clock and were greeted by large crowds gathered along the streets. At the Red Cross building the crowd extended from the doors to the police lines and far out on the lawn. Executive officers of the Red Cross and some of the Red Cross workers were presented to the king and queen.

The king appeared again today in khaki, while the queen wore a white turban and white dress. Her majesty's interest in the Red Cross work caused her to request an alteration of the program for tomorrow so that she might visit a hospital in Baltimore. While she is there, King Albert will visit the naval academy at Annapolis and review the midshipmen.

An hour before the visit to the Red Cross building, the king had begun his sight-seeing. Accompanied by J. M. Nye, the chief special agent of the state department, who has accompanied him on his tour through the United States, he drove to Rock Creek park. Their automobile was halted while his majesty and Mr. Nye walked along the park's lanes, climbing one of the hills to get a better view of the surrounding country.

Cotton Bank Progress Made.

Further progress was made yesterday in the organization of the two-million-dollar cotton bank, proposed by Governor Dorsey to assist Georgia farmers in financing and marketing their crops. Twenty-one additional shares were reported sold and another county, Gilmer, has been added to the list of those which have fully subscribed their quotas.

The governor continues to receive letters from prominent people in this and other states who have given their attention to the solution of the cotton problem, indorsing his plan. Among the strongest letters of indorsement which the governor has, is one from President J. S. Wannamaker, of the American association. Among other things, Mr. Wannamaker said:

"I am convinced that as the result of the organization you have in mind, not only Georgia will receive untold benefits, but the entire cotton belt. The best posted men, both bankers and cotton men, state that we must arrange to warehouse, finance and market our cotton crop, both at home and abroad."

The price asked for each share is $125, of which $100 is the par value per share, under the banking law of the state, and $25 additional to raise the surplus of $525,000 with which the institution expects to start. This will give the bank acapital and surplus of $2,625,000 with which to begin operations. The percentage of this, which, under our banking laws, may be invested in real estate, it is proposed to put into warehouses, thereby giving the farmer the remedy, which all are agreed, is the most essential element in the relief of his difficulties.

Report of Comptroller.

The regular quarterly report of the comptroller general for the third quarter, 1919, was completed by Bookkeeper Harrison yesterday and transmitted by Comptroller General W. A. Wright to the governor. It covers all receipts and disbusements of the state from July to October 1 of this year. A summary of the report follows:

Balance on hand July 1, $538,757.52; receipts for quarter, $1,149,236.03; disbursements on warrants of the governor and legislative warrants, $1,295,555.27; balance on hand October 1, $392,438.28.

Shortage Must Be Made Good.

Following a report from E. B. Douglas, who had made an audit for the banking department, indicating a shortage of $27,000 in the funds of the Commercial Bank of Umpidilla, State Bank Examiner W. J. Speer has notified the officers of the bank that the shortage must be made good within ninety days.

The impairment in the bank's condition was discovered upon the departure of R. A. Collins, former cashier. Auditor Douglas reported that the bank had $15,000 in undivided profits, and the directors believe that they will have little difficulty in securing the $12,000 additional necessary to cover the alleged shortage of $27,000.

Should the impairment of the bank's funds not be made good within the time allowed, the state department would, under the law, assume control of the bank.

In this connection President Charles A. Horne last night sent the following telegram to The Constitution:

"The bank's capital is undisturbed and has a surplus of ten thousand dollars at close of business tonight. Collins' shortage is seventeen thousand dollars. He is bonded by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company for ten thousand dollars. Bank's statement will be published tomorrow."

Charter for Tucker Bank.

Secretary of State S. Guyt McLendon Wednesday issued a charter to the Bank of Tucker, located at Tucker, Ga. The capital stock is $25,000, and the incorporators are Pierce K. Burns, I. E. Rodgers and C. M. Carroll, of Tucker, and A. H. Blount, of Decatur.

A. C. Lewis Is Ill.

Friends of State Entomologist A. C. Lewis will regret to learn that, following his convalescence from a severe attack of influenza, he has suffered a relapse owing to his coming back to his office too soon, and has been again compelled to take his bed. He is again recovering, however, it was said at his office Wednesday that he hoped to be able to get back to work next week.

Another state house official who has had a severe attack of influenza is Judge T. E. Patterson, of the prison commission. After several weeks' illness at his home in College Park, Judge Patterson spent some time at a mineral spring in Harris county, hoping that the water would benefit him. He has so far recovered as to appear at his office this week, but, he, too, found that he had overtasked his strength and was compelled to return home after spending an hour at the capitol.

Agree on Time.

Wihthout any formal agreement upon the subject, state house officials had Wednesday about settled down to the hours which it is proposed to observe under the Barnes law, following the plan determined upon for the conduct of their business by the appellate courts.

The supreme court and court of appeals agreed that Barnes law time should be kept by their clocks and the law of the state fully met in that respect. In doing so, however, they have advanced the time for holding court one hour. The supreme court will meet at 10 o'clock (Barnes time), and the court of appeals at 3, the hours heretofore being 9 and 2 o'clock, respectively.

Of course these hours are still 9 and 2, city and railroad time. The only difference that the visitor will note on entering the capitol will be that the clocks there are running an hour later than those outside. The working hours of the occupants of the building, however, will be the same as those observed last year, that is, from 9 to 5, for most of the offices, city time, or from 10 to 6, Barnes time, which will be state official time.

The national assembly has ratified their renunciation. They retain their private fortunes and private estates.

URGE FITZGERALD MEN TO RETURN TO WORK

B. M. Jewell Will Make Every Effort to Persuade Strikers to Return.

Announcement was made last night by railroad officials that B. M. Jewell, acting international president of the allied railroad shop crafts in Washington, has assured the A. B. & A. railroad officials that he would use his best efforts to induce the striking shopmen at Fitzgerald to return to work pending a settlement of their demands.

This information followed the statement from railroad officials that no change has taken place in the situation at Fitzgerald, where 300 of the men in the A. B. & A. shops including all the crafts, with the exception of the car inspectors and power house men, are out on strike, demanding the discharge of a boiler maker foreman, who they claim, did journeyman work in violation of the agreement the unions are said to have with the road with reference to the matter.

It was stated Wednesday afternoon that the superintendent of motive power from the A. B. & A. railroad had receive a communication direct from Acting International President Jewell, in which the brotherhood official declared he would urge the men to return to work, assuring them efforts would be made to adjust the matter in controversy in a conference between the union men and the railroad officials, and that should there be a failure to agree the matter would be taken, if necessary to Washington for settlement.

A dispatch was received from Fitzgerald last night, giving a statement from a shop craft committeeman, who said that the strike arose over the violation of rule 32, of the federal agreement, bearing upon work that should be done by foremen and shopmen. The committeeman also declared that repeated efforts had been made to secure an agreement of the question after the rule had been violated by the railroad company, but that these attempts had failed in each instance.

A railroad official made the statement that the company had offered to pay the full time of a boilermaker earned by Foreman Ralston, in lieu of a settlement, but that this offer was declined. A demand, it is declared, was made upon the railroad officials for the discharge of Foreman Ralston, which was refused. This precipitated the walk-out.

81ST ANNIVERSARY JUST CELEBRATED BY FRANK P. RICE

That is the way the calendar shows it, but for one to look into his bright blue eyes and to watch his sprightly step and erect carriage a score less years would seem more in keeping with his appearance.

But one lives in deeds, not years. His time, that has lengthened beyond the psalmist's extreme figures, has been well spent in Atlanta. Here since the first he has not only seen the city grow in its ante-bellum days to a position of importance in the old south, but he has witnessed and has been no small factor in its upbuilding from ashes and tears to its present proud place as leader of the new south of promise and fulfilment.

Mr. Rice has served the city and state in many ways, as a public official and a private citizen. His work has been of the same enduring integrity as his sterling manhood. The state capitol stands as one monument to his foresight and accomplishment. But he is not one to rest upon his oars. Just now he is a leader in the movement for improving the traffic ways from the north side to the center of the city. The work has begun, but it needs the enthusiasm and persistence of the old young man who with others are working for the solution of a problem that has long been acute.

LOCAL LAW SCHOOL DEBATING SOCIETY TO HOLD RECEPTION

In an effort to bring the members of the school more closely together, and to make them more thoroughly acquainted with members of the faculty and alumni, the Kilpatrick Literary and Debating society of the Atlanta Law School, will hold a reception in honor of the junior class and new members of the school on Friday evening, October 31, at 8:30 o'clock, in the auditorium of the school.

All alumni and friends of the school are cordially invited to attend, being assured of a good time. A mock national political convention will be staged, the school being divided for the purpose into democratci, republican and independent parties, each party nominating a candidate and making appropriate speeches in his behalf. The platforms will be based upon national issues of the present time, and will be made as truly realistic as possible.

Many of Atlanta's most prominent lawyers will be present, and refreshments will help to make the evening pleasant.

GAS METER ROBBERS TRYING NEW SCHEME

Gas meter robbers are abandoning a scheme they worked so long of representing themselves to be meter readers and purloining the coin at leisure. This got too well known, and they are now adopting regular porch-climbing second-story tactics.

Residents on Windsor street and South Boulevard will testify to this. Numbers of homes on these two streets have been entered during the last few days, entrance being effected by breaking the fastening on windows or doors in each case, and the gas meter robbed. The latest victim of the new method of the meter men is Mrs. J. H. Clarke, of 16 Windsor street, whose home was broken into Wednesday night.

The police have set a drag net to take these burglars in.

SOLDIER-POET WILL SPEAK TWICE TODAY

Signaler Tom Skeyhil, the Australian soldier poet, and probably one of the widest known orators of the day, will speak to the Drama league at Egleston hall this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and at Agnes Scott college in the evening.

Mr. Skeyhill's subject in the afternoon speech will be "The New Elizabethans."

Mr. Skeyhill enlisted in the Australian army at the outbreak of the war, and participated in many of the hottest engagements. He was wounded by a bayonet thrust and later blinded. He was then sent to the United States to assist in drives for war funds.

Mr. Skeyhill has delivered many talks in aid to the Roosevelt memorail fund. He is an ardent admirer of the late ex-president. In one of his speeches he stated "Roosevelt was the American ideal. In him are embodied all those traits we love to call American."

GERMAN SHIPPING PLANS DISCUSSED

Many Lines to Reopen Regular Service to North and South American Ports.

Berlin, October 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Boersen Courier prints a lengthy article on the shipping possibilities from German ports, particularly as regards freight. According to the article the Hamburg-American line will have a weekly service to New York and also a weekly service to Cuba and Mexico by way of New York and Baltimore by the end of October in connection with Dutch steamers. The North German Lloyd line will have a New York service every ten or fourteen days, a monthly service to New Orleans, Baltimore, Norfolk and Havana by Dutch steamers and every ten days to South America on Dutch steamers.

In addition both lines will run steamers to all Scandinavian and Spanish ports and to Suez, Tangier, Colon and the west coast of South America. The North German Lloyd line will have a world shipping plan, relying, like the Hamburg-American line, on Dutch, Japanese and British ships for long hauls to Australia, Japan, China and Asiatic Dutch colony ports. The dates for the departure of these vessels will begin late in October and run into January.

Kelly, V. C., Guilty Of Writing Letters Scoring War Office

British War Hero Enters Plea of Guilty, Before Courtmartial, to Charge of Criticising Russian Campaign in Papers.

London, October 29.—Lieutenant Colonel J. Sherwood Kelly, holder of the Victoria cross, pleaded guilty before a court-martial today to writing letters to a London newspaper in which he asserted among other things that "there had been a scandalous waste of lives and vast sums of money" in the operations of the British in Russia.

Other letters written by Lieutenant Kelly were "to give facts in connection with north Russia that otherwise might never have come to light." One letter said that troops sent to Russia for defensive purposes were used on the offensive in the furtherance of an ambitious plan of campaign entailing not only undue loss, but the suffering of troops who already had made incalculable sacrifices in the great war.

Lieut. Col. Kelly pleaded for a mitigation of sentence on the ground of previous service and because in writing he was actuated by a desire "to protect men against needless sacrifice and to save the country from squandering wealth which it could ill afford to do." He declared also that "politicians who are responsible for the waste of British lives in the Russian scandal should be brought to trial."

TREATY VIOLATIONS BY GERMANS ALLEGED

Paris, October 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—Reported violations of the Versailles peace treaty by the Germans were considered by the supreme council today. A report from Marshal Foch on violations of military clauses of the armistice, including the failure to evacuate the Baltic provinces when called upon so to do by the supreme council, and one from the British admiralty on naval violations, including the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow, were presented. Other reports dealt with the failure to deliver the number of locomotives, cars and agricultural machinery provided for in the armistice as well as works of art to Belgium and France.

The council reserved its decision regarding the evacuation of the Baltic provinces and the Scapa Flow incidents, shelving the Baltic question to await a report of the inter-allied military commission which leaves Saturday.

Further discussion of the Scapa Flow occurrences will be held to determine whether the German government or the naval officers in command should be held responsible for sinking the fleet. In the first event Germany will be asked to surrender an equivalent value of other commodities. Violations of the armistice requirements for the surrender of rolling stock, etc., the council decided, are provided for under clauses of the treaty.

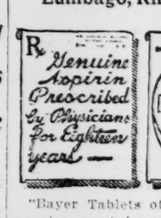

The council also considered the question of the repatriation of prisoners of war and decided Czech prisoners in Serbia should be repatriated first, then the Poles, Rumanians and Serbs.

THE TRIPOD OF HEALTH PUTS YOUR SYSTEM IN ORDER

The Liver, Kidneys and Blood Are Your Tripod of Health. When One is in Distress They All Suffer.

Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney & Blood Powders Tone Up the Liver and Kidneys, Purifying the Blood and Keeps Your Tripod of Health in Balance.

A Vegetable Compound. Will Not Make You Sick. Eat Anything You Like.

Because you are billious, suffer with indigestion, have headaches, a touch of rheumatism now and then and feel out of sorts generally, doesn't necessarily mean that your liver is the only part of your anatomy that needs attention. This upset condition may be caused primarily by either the kidneys or blood, and the liver simply refuses to function out of sympathy. And, if you only treat your liver, you are only getting at one-third of your trouble.

The Liver, Kidneys and Blood are so closely allied, one depending upon the other, that when one gets out of order the others fall in line. Therefore, the only way to put the entire system back to its normal healthy condition is to right the liver and kidneys and purify the blood.

Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney & Blood Powders will clear up these three vital parts of the system—keep your Tripod of Health in balance—and make you feel like new. This is one of Dr. Hitchcock's favorite prescriptions that he used successfully for over 60 years, and is a purely vegetable compound that will not make you sick. Eat anything you like while taking it.

25 cents will buy a large tin box at your druggist. Take a level teaspoonful tonight and it will straighten you out by morning. If you are not satisfied your money refunded. If your druggist can not supply you, send his name and address to the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., and you will receive a sample free for your trouble.—(adv.)

Jas. H. May, traveling salesman of Rome, Ga., says: "We have used Dr. Hitchcock's Liver Medicine in our family for some time, and believe it will do all that is claimed for it. I cheerfully recommend it as being a first-class family medicine. We do not want to be without it."

ORGANIZED LABOR CHIEFS TO MEET

Conference Called to Consider "Grave Danger Affecting Very Foundations of Organized Labor" for December 13.

Washington, October 29.—"Fundamental principles" upon which organized labor may combat "grave dangers affecting the very foundation of its structure" are to be formulated at a conference of union chiefs in Washington December 13.

Formal call for the conference was sent today to the union leaders over the country. It was signed by the members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and the chiefs of the railroad brotherhoods, who explained that the farmers' representatives who sat with these union officials last Saturday when final decision to hold the meeting was reached did not feel that they had authority to sign the call.

However, it was stated that the national farmers' organizations now in session, or soon to meet, would be invited to send delegates with full power to act on behalf of those organizations. It is the purpose of the union leaders to form an alliance with the farmers' organizations for the carrying out of the campaign which will be mapped out.

The purposes of the conference were outlined in the call only in a broad, general way. It was said that it was "imperative" that labor's representatives adopt a program "which the wage earners will accept in performing their duties as citizens and at the same time maintaining the right of free men in order to conserve human interest and welfare."

No specific topics for discussion were outlined, but it is known that pending anti-strike legislation will be one of the principal subjects. Other matters expected to be taken up include collective bargaining and the right of organized labor to choose its own spokesmen as it sees fit, subjects which finally resulted in the dissolution of the national industrial conference called by President Wilson.

LUXEMBOURG DUCHESS TO WED PRINCE FELIX

Luxembourg, Tuesday, October 28.—Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg and Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma will be married here November 6.

Prince Felix was born at Schwarzau September 26, 1893. Unlike his brothers, who served in the Belgian army, he entered the Austrian service, although he declared at the beginning of hostilities he would refuse to fight against the French. Owing to Prince Felix's war service there was some hostility to his marriage to Grand Duchess Charlotte, but the latter declared it was a love match. The people of Luxembourg subsequently acquiesced in this view.

Hoover Blames Cost of Living On Pyschology

Tells Investigating Committee High Retail Prices Are Result of Desire for Expensive Things.

Washington, October 29.—Sixteen to twenty million tons of food more than necessary for American consumption will be the yield from this year's crop, Herbert Hoover, former food administrator, told a house investigating committee today. He said the continuing high retail prices are due largely to the pyschology of the public to buy expensive things.

Speculation by thousands of people in anticipation of a big demand from Germany also was blamed by Mr. Hoover for advancing prices. He said large stocks were accumulated by the trade on the assumption that export trade to Germany would be opened soon after the signing of the armistice.

"Instead of buying, the Germans tightened up their belts," he said.

NEW INVENTION STOPS AIRPLANE WITHIN 50 FEET

Dayton, Ohio., October 29.—Announcement from McCook aviation field today that successful tests have been made with a reversible airplane propeller, means, according to officials, that the day of the "back yard" airplane is here.

With the new propeller, airplanes can land and be brought to a stop within fifty feet by actual test, officials said.

The new device will also increase the climbing speed of an airplane forty per cent and permit of higher altitude flying, 50,000 feet being a possible limit. Seth Hart, of Los Angeles, Cal., is the inventor of the propeller.

First Prohibition Raid in New York Ends in Two Casualties When Agent Empties Gun in Crowded Place.

New York, October 29.—Two men were shot tonight in the first raid in this city made by federal revenue agents acting under the provisions of the Volstead act. The officials entered a crowded saloon on Forty-second street and in the ensuing scuffle the shooting occurred.

This raid was followed by others, all of which were congned to the "white light" district. They were directed by Colonel G. L. Porter, supervising internal revenue agent for the New York district, from his headquarters in the customs house.

The shooting in the 42d street saloon is said to have occurred when a revenue agent started to make an arrest. Both men injured received flesh wounds, and were held as material witnesses.

PETROGRAD SITUATION REPORTED UNCHANGED

Conflicting Reports, However, Come From Various Russian Fronts.

London, October 29.—Latest official reports received here say that the situation on the Petrograd front is unchanged. The bolshevik forces continue to make small local attacks.

Helsingfors, October 29.—A communication issued by the Russian northwest army says that bolshevik attacks on the west Petrograd front Tuesday were repulsed and that 400 prisoners were taken.

It adds that on Wednesday the white offensive west of Krasnoye-Selo was proceeding successfully and that 1,500 prisoners had been taken.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR BOLSHEVIKI.

Reval, October 29.—The bolsheviki defending Petrograd received fresh reinforcements during the last two days, according to the advices reaching here, enabling them to bring the strongest pressure against General Yudenitch, who was compelled after the fiercest fighting to withdraw to Gatchina.

Between Gatchina and Krasnoye-Selo, a severe battle was still in progress at the latest advices, the Bolsheviki being supported by armored cars and trains.

The soviet troops also tried to force the Esthonian front, the reports state, but were checked.

FINLAND AIDS YUDENITCH.

Paris, October 29.—The correspondent of the Temps at Helsingfors is authorized in government circles to declare that Finland is doing her utmost to assist General Yudenitch, having placed at his disposal two tanks and a large quantity of rifle ammunition and authorized Russians residing in Finland to enlist in his army.

Finland, however, cannot do more unless she is promised certain compensating advantages as her financial situation would not otherwise permit her to organize a regular expedition to co-operate with General Yudenitch.

London, October 29.—A wireless message from Moscow reports that risings have occurred throughout the Ukraine against the forces of General Denikine and that largebodies of the troops of General Petlura an of General Makono are joining the red forces.

Fierce Fighting.

The towns of Cherkassy, Chirigin, Kaneff and Tripoli, all lying on the Dnieper or slightly south of it, within thirty to ninety-five miles southeast of Kiev, are in the hands of the insurgents along with other places.

Fighting of the fiercest character is in progress between the troops of General Denikine and General Makono (leader of one of the Ukraine irregular forces). General Makono has captured Alexandrovsk, an important town on the Dnieper river about 175 miles from the Black sea. He also is besieging Elizavetgrad, a city of 100,000 population, the most important in the northern part of Kherson province. General Makono's troops are approaching Nikolaeff and Kherson, which, next to Odessa, are the most important Russian ports on the Black sea.

Berlin, October 29.—The anti-bolshevist paper (Prisyp (apparently an Esthonian paper) prints a communication from General Yudenitch, dated October 27, declaring that the attack on the Petgrograd was unsuccessful.

Yudenitch Falls Back.

Reports from Reval state that General Yudenitch is falling back along the entire line.

General Yudenitch has been compelled to abandon Catchina and to remove staff headquarters to Yamburg, 68 miles from Petrograd, on the road to Reval, and there is consequetly little hope of retaining a base for the advance against Petrograd.

General Yudenitch, in his communication to The Prisyp declared the attack on Petrograd had been unsuccessful because of the lack of assistance.

McVeigh, at Urania, near here while the officer was attempting to arrest the man on the charge of using mails to defraud. McVeigh is still at large. The fox are to be shipped to New York, where they will be placed on experimental farms of the United States biological survey.

Lazzari and Hackett to Sing For Atlantans Friday Week

CAROLINA LAZZARI.

Two young American singers, who have won their way rapidly to the very front in grand opera, will appear in joint recital at the Auditorium on Friday night of next week, giving those Atlantans who cry for the "encouragement of American singers" their looked-for opportunity.

But the advocates of American singers are not asked to support this concert because of American sentiment, for the two artists engaged are Carolina Lazzari and Charles Hackett, both leading artists of the Metropolitan opera company of New York.

Miss Lazzari will be remembered as the tall and beautiful young contralto who appeared here last spring with the Metropolitan quartet, her associates being Frances Alda, Giovanni Martinelli and Giuseppe de Luca. Though the other three were old favorites in Atlanta, the soprano found herself receiving her full share of the applause. She opened with the big aria from "Samson and Delilah" and created a great furore, and in the concerted numbers which followed she fully sustained her position with the Metropolitan singers. Such a contralto voice had never before been heard in the south—certainly not since Schumann-Heink was at the summit of her career. It filled every part of the big auditorium, and yet it was so beautifully modulated that one forgot its volume.

Miss Lazzari was with the Chicago Opera company at that time, but this season she has been engaged as leading contralto of the Metropolitan—though only a year ago she was taking vocal lessons for her concert debut.

Charles Hackett, the young American tenor, has had an equally sensational rise to fame. After successes in concert he was given an opportunity to appear in a leading role with the Metropolitan last season, and he was greeted with such enthusiasm that this season he was given a contract calling for 40 performances, in which he will alternate with Caruso and Martinelli as leading tenor of the company. He will create the tenor part in several new operas this season. Mr. Hackett is the brother, by the way, of Arthur Hackett, the young tenor who has been so well liked in his two appearances in Atlanta. Charles Hackett has never been heard here.

Seats for the joint recital will go on sale next Monday morning at the Cable Piano company's store, under the direction of the Evans-Salter Musical bureau. It will be the second of the all star concert series. The prices will be $1, $1.50, $1.75 and $2, plus the war tax.

Work to Prevent Strike.

Madrid, October 29.—Negotiations between the government and a committee representing the railroad men's union, with the object of preventing a general strike on the southern and eastern roads, continue. The government gained an important point when it received a promise that the strike would not start without due notice.

MUST HAVE PASSPORT FOR FOREIGN TRAVEL

Status of Travelers Remains Same as When War Was in Progress.

(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—So numerous have been the inquiries whether passports are necessary for foreign travel that the state department today assured your correspondent that it was absolutely essential to have passports even to enter Cuba.

It is further announced that people who contemplate visiting foreign countries—England, France, Italy, etc.—must produce good reasons for wanting to enter those countries. In other words, the status of travelers to foreign countries is the same now as when the war was in progress, except that there are more boats available to the public.

Mrs. Tecota Moore, of Hiram, writes: "I could hardly hear anything when I commenced using Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy. Now I can hear a clock ti from one room to another."

"The roaring and crackling noises in my head have gone; I feel alright now," writes G. Nicklas of Ackley.

"I was almost deaf and I had a lot of catarrh trouble when I began to use Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy, but now I feel better and better every day," writes O. J. Holland of Gomez.

"Although I was deaf from persistent bad colds, being scarcely able to hear anything, I began smoking Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy, and soon I could easily hear even slight sounds," writes A. E. Matthews of Monterey.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 10c and 25c.

BASS IS ELECTED STATE MASON HEAD

Atlanta Man Named at Macon Meet Succeeds R. J. Travis, Savannah, as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge.

Macon, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Charles L. Bass, of Atlanta, was today elected grand master of the grand lorge of Georgia Masons, succeeding R. J. Travis, of Savannah. The new grand master is welfare agent for the Southern railway and his position is said to be the only one of its kind in the United States. He is also a member of the north Georgia Methodist conference and has been a Mason for twenty-seven years and in twenty-five years has not missed a session of the grand lodge.

Other officers elected by the grand lodge today were Joe Bowdoin, of Adairsville, deputy grand master; J. D. Hamrick, of Carrollton, senior grand warden; J. E. Sheppard, of Americus, junior grand warden; W. S. Richardson, of Atlanta, senior grand deacon; M. A. McQueen, of Vidalia, junior grand deacon; James M. Ruskin, of Boston, grand treasurer; Frank F. Baker, of Macon, grand secretary; A. D. Echols, of Atlanta, grand chaplain; B. L. Patterson, of Lawrenceville, grand marshal; W. F. Walker, of Preston, first grand steward; S. F. Johnson, of Atlanta, second grand grand steward; A. G. Miller, of Waycross, third grand steward, and Lee Wages, of Macon, grand tyler.

No action was taken today on the resolution proposing a change in dates of either the state fair or the grand lodge or the removal of the grand lodge meeting to other cities. Members said they had been coming to Macon for so many years that it will take something more than a little inconvenience as to hotel accommodations to make them vote to change the meeting place.

The following members were appointed custodians of the uniform of the grand lodge:

Guy Thurmond, Atlanta, chairman; J. T. Waldrop, Griffin; Mr. Hall, of Waycross; J. G. Cole, or Ellijay; Hugo Robinson, of Albany; J. H. Miller, of Eastman, and W. F. Smith, of Manchester. The committee on uniform rank installed the new officers immediately after their election.

W. L. Fowler, superintendent, and Mrs. Minnie L. Fowler, matron of the Masonic Orphans' home, were re-elected to their positions by the board of trustees.

The simplest remedies are nearly always the best. That's why thousands of bright-eyed, clear-skinned men and women keep themselves fit and fine by having an abiding faith in the simple, old-fashioned, inexpensive vegetable tea that your grandmother used to make.

It purifies the blood, regulates the bowels, keeps the stomach clean and sweet and is the best tonic laxative you can take.

The kiddies like it, too, for it is gentle and mild. Give it to them when they are fretful and feverish. —(adv.)

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep.—(adv.)

"Pape's Diapepsin" puts Sour, Gassy, Acid Stomachs in order at once!

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin to help neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs so little at drug stores. —(adv.)

RECORDS BROKEN FOR RECRUITING AT LOCAL OFFICE

The local recruiting office for the navy is breaking all records this month. Last week Atlanta tied with Chicago for fifth place, in the number of men recruited throughout the states. The prospects are that this week's number of recruits will be larger than ever.

Information has been received from Washington that a number of vacancies exist in the aviation section for naval air pilots. This means that a number of enlisted men will be given the chance to go through the pilot's school at Chicago, and if they are successful they will be given a flying course, upon completion of this they will be given a naval aviation certificate, which will carry with it the additional 50 per cent increase in pay.

Tuesday was a record breaking day for the recruiting office. The following men were recruited: George Harry Reid, Baltimore, Mr.; Fred Bennett McCary, Forney, Ala.; Talmadge DeWitt Towns, Cobbsville, Ga.; Joseph Alexander Webb, Cobbsville, Ga.; Luther T. Blackburn, Bloomingdale, Ga.; Charles H. Hardee, Ocala, Fla.; Leon T. Roberts, Ocala, Fla.; Daniel A. Brown, Jr., Shellman, Ga.; John L. Battle, Shellman, Ga.; Julius L. Drake, Sycamore, Ga.; Paul Byrd, Reynolds, Ga.; L. A. Peterson, Rhine, Ga.; Cecil A. Chase, Green Cove Springs, Fla.; Dewey I. King, Daville, Ga.; Tom S. Hownsend, Jacksonville, Fla.; John H. ARREST CLEARS ROBBERY PUZZLE STATE OFFICERS

In the arrest of John Foster, a negro, living at 171 Auburn avenue, Wednesday by Lieutenant R. F. Jordan, of the county police, and County Officers Stovall and Hornsby, the authorities believe they have cleared the mystery surrounding fur burglaries, said to have been committed Tuesday night.

The officers stated that they recovered articles of considerable value from the negro, including clothing, jewelry and a small sum in cash. The negro, it is alleegd, confessed to the burglary at the home of P. C. Morris, on Macon drive. Other places burglarized were the homes of Mrs. Fannie Jackson, Stewart avenue; Mrs. O. Antinoro, Jonesboro road, and Homer Pierce, Macon drive.

The arrest took place early Wednesday morning by Lieutenant Jordan soon after the houses had been entered, and the goods were found in his possession.

New Members Given Welcome to Men's Catholic Lyceum

The young men's Catholic lyceum held an interesting meeting on Tuesday evening, at which the new delegation from St. Anthony's parish in West End was welcomed. There were about fifty new members from the St. Anthony parish that enjoyed the various features of the meeting, which was held at the headquarters of the association. The visitors were accompanied to the meeting by Father Jackson, who gave an interesting talk on the benefits to be derived from Christian companionship. Father Maylan addressed the meeting in a talk which explained the aims of the institution and warmly welcomed the fifty new members from the West End parish.

James F. Donovan, a senior associate, also delivered a short talk to the members, and the plans for the future work of the club, as outlined by President Deikle, were discussed.

AUGUSTA ROTARIANS INDORSE PRESIDENT

Augusta, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—The Rotary club at its regular meeting yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution which was wired to the white house indorsing the position taken by President Wilson as to the threatened strike of the soft coal miners called for Saturday. Rev. M. Ashby Jones, of Atlanta, was present at the meeting during the luncheon and made a talk in which he urged Rotarians not to take sides in the industrial confusion which is now on, but to study the great problem to the end of understanding it and to bring about the solution of the questions involved.

Dr. Jones believes that class organizations of labor, capital, school teachers, preachers or of any group, should be only under government charter, and that it is the duty of the government to immediately apply itself to arrive at and declare on the proper plan of distribution as between capital and labor.

THREE ARE CLEARED OF INJURING BOOTH

Americus, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Albert Smith, James L. Hall and Thomas Bartlett, three young white men, after a commitment trial before Justice P. W. Griffin here yesterday, were absolved of any connection with the maiming of J. J. Booth, who was found lying upon the Dixie highway, near Americus, a few days ago, having been run over by an automobile. Testimony brought out at the commitment trial showed Smith, Hall, Bartlett and Booth had all been together at a restaurant shortly before Booth was injured.

All of the men denied having traveled along the road where Booth was found, while the state alleged they had deliberately run Booth down after a quarrel. Bradley Hogg, famous national league pitcher, now practicing law in Americus, represented the state at the trial, and Robert L. Maynard appeared for the defendants.

Sunday School Meet.

Americus, Ga., October 29.—(Special)—Stephen Pace, president of the Sumter County Sunday School association, announced today that the annual convention of that body would be held with Pleasant Grove Baptist church, seven miles east of Americus, Saturday and Sunday, November 8 and 9. Miss Flora Davis and D. W. Sims, prominent Georgia Sunday school workers, will assist in the convention. Wallace Carter, E. R. Stewart, T. M. Furlow, J. W. Lott, T. O. Marshall and T. F. Gatewood, all prominent Sumter county Sunday school workers, have parts on the attractive program which has been arranged.

GANTT WILL ATTEND LIQUOR LAW MEETING

Goes to Washington for Conference on Enforcement of Prohibition.

D. J. Gantt, United States revenue agent, has been ordered to Washington for a conference concerning the enforcement of the national prohibition law, which has been placed in Mr. Gantt's department. He leaves Sunday for the capital, and expects to be in Washington for two weeks on committee work relative to prohibition enforcement.

The state officials will still receive the co-operation of the federal authorities in the enforcement of the law, said Mr. Gantt on Wednesday, pending the appointment of an independent bureau that will be organized for enforcement under the provisions of the new act.

Not much change in conditions in Georgia is anticipated during the possible brief lifting of the wartime act upon the ratification of the peace treaty before the effectiveness of the eighteenth amendment begins on February 1.

The fact that most of the whiskey sold in Georgia is of the moonshine variety, and because of the fact that there are no open saloons in the state, no activity is expected during the interim of lack of national prohibition other than the probable renewed efforts of the bootleggers, who are punishable under the revenue laws.

Conferences on the prosecution of liquor cases have been held between Mr. Gantt and the district attorney's office, and the rigid prosecution that has been in vogue recently will continue, it is stated. Mr. Gantt also said that there was a probability of the assignment of six or eight more agents to this department to assist in the enforcement of the law.

The principal effect of the national prohibition law in Georgia, it was declared, is the fact that it permits of a double prosecution of violators, once under the state law and once under the federal law. The illicit distilling that furnishes Georgia most of the whiskey sold from within its own boundaries, however, allows prosecution by the revenue authorities without application to the national dry enforcement act.

Another effect that the law will have on Georgia is that it will close the eastern liquor markets to those that have been able to cross the boundary between wet and dry territory.

One provision of the new act that is interesting is the fact that it gives a person the right to claim damages against the person or persons who sold liquor to a person who injured a complainant. This right is extended to the executors in the case of death.

Macon, Ga., October 29.—(Special.) John Frank Stewart, 20-year-old son of J. O. Stewart, superintendent of Tift farms, Tifton, carried off the honors in the Boys' Calf club at the Georgia State fair this year. Not only did he win the grand championship, but he also carried off first prize in his class. Young Stewart also won the grand championship at the Southeastern fair in Atlanta this year. The calves exhibited by the Boys' Calf club will be auctioned off tomorrow.

Today was Georgia Swine and Cattle Breeders' day at the fair, and breeders from many southern states were present. A luncheon wa given in their honr on the fair grounds, and they will be guests at a barbecue tomorrow, when the auctions of live stock will be continued. W. B. Scott, of Edison, Ga., is acting as auctioneer this year.

Tomorrow will be Tractor Demonstration day, and will be featured by a parade of the different makes of tractors and actual demonstrations in the field. Today's attendance was more than 20,000.

WORK IS COMMENCED ON NEWSPAPER PLANT

Americus, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Workmen began yesterday laying brick for the walls of the new Times-Recorder building on Forest street here. Announcement that the building would be devoted to newspaper purposes was made today by Lovelace Eve, business manager of The Times-Recorder. The structure is being erected by Walter Rylander, who has already consummated a long lease to the newspaper corporation. The building, which will be only one story, was especially designed by T. F. Lockwood, of Columbus, and will have a frontage of 40 feet on Forest street. It will extend back 100 feet, with an "L" 50x25 feet, and will have an 18-foot concrete court alongside.

14 GOVERNMENT CARS TO GO UNDER HAMMER

Fourteen used government cars will be sold at public auction at Camp Gordon on November 15 and 22 by the motor transport corps.

Quite a number of civilian bidders are expected to be present at the sales. The sales will open early in the mornings and will continue until the cars are sold.

The cars are grouped, each group to be sold at a separate day. The first day seven Ford passenger cars will be put on sale. The second day, one Ford, four Overlands and two Haynes will be auctioned.

ANOTHER LONG DELAY IN BRADSTREET HEARING

Agreement for Postponement Reached as Result of Westmoreland's Absence.

Another week, in all probability, will have elapsed before a hearing will be secured in the case of William B. Green, vice president of the Fairburn Banking company, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bradstreet, all charged with embezzlement.

George Westmoreland, one of Mr. Green's attorneys, has gone to Texas on a business trip, and before his departure, it is said, an agreement was reached between the defense and prosecution for the further postponement of the commitment hearing that was to have been called this morning before Justice of the Peace Homer McDaniel, in Fairburn.

Attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Bradstreet, Judge Hill and Fred Harrison, state that their wish in the matter is to have the case of their clients called simultaneously, or at least not before the case of Green.

The main factor that still makes continuance of the commitment trial favorable is the fact that the report of Auditor W. O. Martin has not yet been completely rendered on the status of the books of the Fairburn bank. It is understood that Mr. Martin has already been in conference with W. J. Speer, state treasurer, in regard to the matters of the bank, but no definite report is ready for submission yet.

Mr. Harrison, attorney for Robert Ellison, the negro chauffeur formerly employed by the Bradstreets, is considering requesting Judge Hutcheson, of the Stone Mountain circuit, to vacate the order that holds Ellison under bond as a material witness, but it is not yet known whether or not this will be done.

250 ENUMERATORS NEEDED FOR WORK OF TAKING CENSUS

About 250 positions are now open for census enumerators to take the federal census in the Fifth congressional district, according to the announcement of Director Walter O. Marshburn. Many applications have already been received by Mr. Marshburn, but there still remain a great many vacancies, for which applications will be received as late as Tuesday of next week.

The director announces that applicants may reach him through letter to 27½ Exchange place, or by calling him at Ivy 7828. Examinations for the positions will be held some time next week, all applicants receiving beforehand cards that will announce the exact time and place of the examinations.

An average education is required of an enumerator, and he should be able to write legibly and rapidly as well as the capacity for accuracy in his work. Two persons known to the director must indorse his application. Wide ranges of work are to be included in the work of the enumerators, for there will be the necessity of all sorts of calculations, such as the counting of livestock on farms and securing of data on the large industrial plants.

The pay for enumerators has been increased so that the average renueration will be about $100 for two weeks' work. Fulton, DeKalb, Rockdale, Douglas and Campbell counties are included in the Fifth district.

SPLENDID PARADE OPENS CRISP FAIR

Cordele, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—One of the biggest and best parades ever witnessed in this section marked the official opening of the Crisp County fair Tuesday afternoon. Practically every industry in the town and county was represented in the parade, which was more than a mile long and was witnessed by thousands of people.

The weather was ideal and people had been pouring into town since early morning and by the time set for the parade one could scarcely elbow passage through the streets.

President R. L. Deikle and Secretary W. P. Fleming, of the fair management, express themselves as more than pleased with the prospects of the biggest fair Crisp has ever put on. The thousands of people who passed through the gates yesterday afternoon and last night had nothing but praise to offer for the hundreds of exhibits of farm products that occupy a large part of the fair grounds. A detachment of soldiers from Camp Benning put on a real show of war every evening.

$25,000 DAMAGE SUIT FILED IN CITY COURT

A damage suit of $25,000 was filed in the city court of Atlanta Wednesday.

The Georgia Railway and Power company was made the defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages, which was filed by Attorney Fred E. Harrison in behalf of Sarah Jones, colored. The woman claims that in attempting to alight from a West Fair street car, the conductor rang the motorman ahead and she was dragged some 60 feet before the car was stopped. She alleges that she sustained serious personal injuries.

NO FEAR OF SHORTAGE OF COAL IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—With midsummer temperatures prevailing, Savannah refuses to stampede in apprehension of a coal strike. Dealers stated today that the city has on hand a supply to run even with normally expected cold weather for more than thirty days and many consumers have their winter's normal supplies stored. Savannah is not worrying about a coal shortage, for the conversion of the electric plants and many other formerly coal burning places to the fuel oil system has further made the city independent of a coal crisis.

Fifth Ward Club Meets.

The Fifth Ward Improvement club will meet at 8 o'clock Friday night at the English Avenue school. Plans will be made for a special entertainment to be given for "overseas" men the first meeting night in December. It is also probable that the school situation will be discussed.

Mrs. Stevens Dies In China Before Mother's Arrival

News has just been received by relatives in Atlanta of the death of Mrs. George P. Stevens in China on September 15.

Mrs. Stevens, who before marriage was Miss Mary Thompson, went to China in 1908, and has since been engaged in missionary work there under the auspices of the Southern Presbyterian church along with her sister, Mrs. Frank Brown. In 1912 she married George B. Stevens, of Monroe, N. C., also engaged in mission work, and she is survived by her husband and two small children.

Mrs. Stevens is a graduate of Agnes Scott colege. In 1916 Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were in Atlanta on furlough.

Mrs. Stevens' mother, Mrs. J. S. Thompson, left Atlanta on September 16 for China for a two years' visit to her two daughters, and upon her arrival at Shanghai was given the sad news of her daughter's death.

Surviving members of Mrs. Stevens' family in addition to the above are Mrs. J. T. Wardlaw, of Atlanta; T. P. Thompson and W. W. Thompson, of Norfolk, Va., and J. P. Thompson, of Columbia, S. C.

The Spanish harbor of Corunna boasts, it is said, of the oldest lighthouse in the world, it having been built by the Romans in the time of Trajan, between A. D. 98 and 117.

COAL PRODUCTION EXCEEDS AVERAGE

Country in Better Shape to Face Strike Than Any Time Previous to September, Says Rail Director.

Washington, October 29.—Production of bituminous coal since September has exceeded the average and the increased available supply has been taken care of by the railroads, Director General Hines announced tonight, with the result that the country enters a coal strike in far better shape than had the walkout occurred during the six months previous to September.

The first six months of 1919, the director general said in a formal statement, saw an abnormally small amount of coal mined and transported because of lack of demand.

The highest production that had ever been made in a week, he pointed out, was 13,000,000 tons. The highest that had been averaged for any considerable period of weeks was something over 11,000,000 tons.

"Up to September," his statement said, "not exceeding 10,000,000 tons of bituminous coal had been transported per week. The railroad administration early in September instructed that the railroads endeavor to provide transportation for 11,000,000 tons per week. The result has been as follows:

"Week ended September 13, 10,046,000 tons; September 20, 11,253,000 tons; September 27, 11,613,000 tons; October 4, 11,518,000 tons; October 11, 11,881,000 tons; October 18, estimated, 11,874,000 tons; October 25, estimated, 12,900,000 tons."

On Thursday, October 16, the director continued, instructions were issued for railroads serving coal mines to make preferential efforts to furnish coal mines with empty coal cars up to the ability of the mines to load daily, and for noncoal loading railroads to commence immediately to deliver daily to their nearest coal loading or coal route connections, empty coal cars up to the maximum ability.

RED BLOOD MAKES BEST COMPLEXIONS

Wholesome Complexion the Pride and Glory of Healthy Men and Women.

Pepto-Mangan Makes Red Cheeks.

Builds Up Tired Bodies. Helps Change Pale Complexions to Bloom of Health.

The healthy, attractive woman—and man, too—with a wholesome complexion is the envy of those who feel that, for them, such attractiveness is impossible.

And yet health and attractiveness are much a matter of good, red blood and unless a man or woman is afflicted with some deep-seated or serious ailment, vigorous health, and personal charm are within easy reach.

Pepto-Mangan is responsible for the present health and happiness of thousands who formerly were thin, pale, languid and easily exhausted. Pepto-Mangan helped place these folks in the full-blooded, energetic, vigorous class—and it probably can do the same for you.

Pepto-Mangan contains the elements that make rich, healthy blood. And as a result of the increased supply of red blood that Pepto-Mangan creates, the entire system attains the vigor that belongs to every man and woman.

Pepto-Mangan is prepared in two forms, liquid and tablets. They are exactly alike in medicinal value.

Ask your druggist for "Gude's" when ordering Pepto-Mangan. Look for the name "Gude's" on the package.—(adv.)

TOKIO PLEASED WITH SHANTUNG SETTLEMENT

Tokio, Friday, October 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Rejection by the United States senate of the amendment to the peace treaty with regard to Shantung brought forth in Tokio many expressions of pleasure, both in official and private circles. The hope is expressed in official circles that China will reconsider her attitude and sign the peace treaty and also decide to enter into negotiations with Japan concerning the restoration of Shantung.

RYAN'S BANK ACCOUNT IS BEING INVESTIGATED

Revealed in Testimony of Former Director of Aircraft Production.

New York, October 29.—An investigation of the bank accounts of John D. Ryan, formerly director of aircraft production, is being made in behalf of the congressional subcommittee which is investigating war expenditures for aviation.

This was revealed by Mr. Ryan today in testifying before the committee here, and the committee admitted it. An accountant for the investigators is making a transcript of Mr. Ryan's accounts with the Boston banking firm of Hayden, Stone & Co.

Mr. Ryan told the committee he was perfectly willing that they should know of this account, or any other of his private funds.

The purpose of the examination of Mr. Ryan's funds, as indicated by questions of the committee today, is to learn whether Mr. Ryan assisted in financing the Siems, Carey and Kerbaugh corporation of New York in its contracts with the government for logging spruce in the state of Washington and building a 38-mile railroad from Lake Pleasant to Crescent Lake, in the Olympian peninsula. This road connects with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, of which Mr. Ryan is a director.

Mr. Ryan admitted that some months after the contract was signed he learned, he testified, that Hayden, Stone & Co. had loaned the contractors some securities.

Mr. Ryan criticised the committee at the outset of the hearing, saying that making him testify in New York when his records were in Washington was unfair and that it was "an outrageous and scandalous abuse of the congressional privilege to send any such telegram, impugning the motives of men who were doing their best to win the war."

He testified that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul never wanted the Lake Pleasant-Lake Crescent railroad built and did not care to buy it now.

LOUIE, THE LAWYER — He Won't Be There At All!

What Does This Little Tot Care for Circus Thrillers?

Do you think this little girl, who has just reconciled two jealous and kicking performing ponies to such an extent that they have been caught by the camera in the act of kissing and making up, would rather see some of the big thrillers with the Sells-Floto circus coming to the Atlanta ball park Friday and Saturday than play with these very ponies? Not a chance. The clowns, with their trained donkeys, pigs and geese, might win her away, but do you think Beatrice, the boneless woman, doing her lightning spin of death high under the dome of the big top, could do it? Could the spectacular and colorful pageantry of "the Birth of the Rainbow," which opens the performances, do the trick? Easily, because the herd of fifty ponies bear Maypole garlands, which stream down to their bridles from pikes carried on the backs of nine of the elephants. There are 600 people and 400 animals in the extravaganza, and, no doubt, our little girl's eyes will pop wide open at the color and beauty of it all.

AMUSEMENTS

"Some Time."

(At Atlanta Theater Tonight.)

"Some Time," the new Rider Johnson Rudolf Friml musical romance which pleased New York theater patrons for one year at the Casino theater, will be presented at the Atlanta theater tonight, when it will begin an engagement of three nights and Saturday matinee. This merry melodious comedy with its keen and witty dialogue, with its dances that enthuse and lilting melodies that charm, comes undeh the direction of Arthur Hammerstein, to whom theatergoers are indebted for "The Firefly," "High Jinks" and "Katinka." A competent symphony orchestra will supply Mr. Hammersteh's organization with the various instrumentations requisite to give to the score those delightfully tinkling effects. Mr. Hammerstein has supplied a cast of well known musical comedy favorites specially selected for each important role. Song hits are numerous, girls are plentiful romance predominates, music that delights in plenitude, and keen wit, crisp satir and sentimentality dominate. Many beautiful costumes, most of them up-to-the-verymoment in fashion's realm, will catch the eyes of the ladies. Stage settings brilliant-hued, and other environments that will add to the pleasurable viewing of this attraction are also promised.

"Mutt and Jeff" Coming.

(To the Atlanta.)

It is certainly good to be able to see "Mutt and Jeff" again and it gives infinite pleasure to record the fact that they are to be at the Atlanta theater for two nights and matinee, next Monday and Tuesday.

This time in a new piece which will present their laugh compelling gifts in undisturbed sway. The title of the new piece "Mutt and Jeff's Dream" is described as a comedy with music, songs, pretty girls and novelties, acknowledged the best musical comedy at popular prices on the road. Seats go on sale Friday.

"The Owl."

(At Loew's Grand.)

"The Owl," a musical comedy arranged for vaudeville, will be the topline attraction at Loew's Grand today and for the balance of the week. It has everything that goes to make vaudeville entertaining, a chorus of pretty girls, six of them. Unusual scenic and electrical effects, beautiful costumes, two musical comedy stars, a pretty love story and new song hits. The comedy has just finished playing the Loew New York houses, thirty-two of them in all, and has been a tremendous success.

The Vicker Sisters, assisted by Dave Dillon, are English pony ballet dancers, the McMahon Sisters entertain with harmony, ranging from old-time melodies to songs of the present day. Other acts are Martin and Courtney in a travesty skit and Charles McGoods and company in "Pastimes in a Billiard Parlor." On the screen Gladys Brockwell is presented in "Chasing Rainbows."

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

There's an act you'll be bound to like at the Lyric theater on the program which opens today—a girly girly affair, in which there are a large number of participants. It is called "Snapshots of 1919" and it is featured by the appearance of Julian Hall. There are four other good numbers.

Billie Rhodes.

(At the Rialto.)

Billie Rhodes, one of the most charming and interesting little women on stage or screen, will be seen today and through Saturday in "Blue Bonnet," which is a most delightful little story and one which is bound to please everybody. It is founded around a basis of Salvation army life and is filled with action. It gives a most delightful role to little Miss Rhodes.

"Forbidden."

(At the Tudor.)

Atlanta women who appreciate good style and want to see the latest thing from the Rue de la Paix, Paris, and Fifth avenue, New York, should not fail to see "That Well Dressed Look," at the Tudor theater this week, a revue of the fall models posed by beautiful girls.

"That Well Dressed Look" is a minor but unusually attractive feature of the Tudor program. The big picture is "Forbidden," a drama of the New York cabarets and Chinatown, in which pretty Mildred Harris, wife of Charlie Chaplin, is the star. She is supported by a splendid cast.

Alice Brady.

(At the Criterion.)

Anyone who can play a dual role—one of the hardest things on the screen—with the personality, versatility, zest and excellence that Alice Brady displays in her latest Select Picture, "His Bridal Night," which can be seen this week at the Criterion theater, deserves every word of praise that can possibly be meted out to her.

Miss Brady plays the roles of both Vi and Tiny Playfair with the ease and grace that only as finished an actress as this vivacious, charming bit of femininity can employ.

A Mutt & Jeff cartoon comedy, The Fox News, and incidental music by the Criterion orchestra are added features.

Billie Burke.

(At the Forsyth.)

"The Misleading Widow," in which Billie Burke, the famous Paramount-Artcraft and stage star, is to be seen at the Forsyth this week, is as charming and attractive as the pretty actress herself. And that is saying a lot. The picture relates the adventures that befell Mrs. Betty Paradime, a beautiful "widow," when she announced that her missing husband had "died" in South Africa. The purpose of Betty's news was to collect the "deceased's" insurance.

Nazimova.

(At the Strand.)

Out of the dreary environment of the New York night court "The Brat," as they call her, is taken by a well-known novelist to serve as his model and guide of a book he is writing, in which the heroine is a "typical New York chorus girl." To all intents and purposes, "The Brat" is just that on the surface, and the novelist's family is unutterably shocked at his new companion. The picture is at the Strand this week.

Dustin Farnum.

(At the Savoy.)

"The Light of Western Stars," which is Zane Grey's red-blooded story of the southwest border, will be shown at the Savoy theater today. Dustin Farnum is the star, and the picture promises plenty of action.

Clara Kimball Young and her own company will be seen Friday in "The Claw." Romance and adventure, thrill and suspense abound in J. Warren Kerrigan's latest picture, "The End of the Game," showing at this theater Saturday.

LABOR UNIONS MEET TO VOTE ON STRIKE

Knoxville, Tenn., October 29.—meetings were held today by a number of local labor unions to vote on a proposal for a general sympathetic strike in sympathy with the striking street carmen. Four locals are said to have rejected the proposition. All locals will vote by Friday night.

The city commission today prohibited mass meetings on Sunday and parades on any day until the present situation of unrest becomes more quiet.

Street cars continue to operate with non-union crews during the daylight hours. There was no disorder today and both the state and the regular army troops in the city remained in their camps.

TELEGRAPHERS DECIDE TO DELAY STRIKE VOTE

St. Louis, October 29.—Twenty-one chairmen of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, in session here, late today decided not to order a strike vote among their 23,000 members before communicating with W. D. Hines, director general of railroads.

The railway telegraphers claim that, although an award which would grant them approximately 5 cents an hour increase was made by former Director of Railroads McAdoo, they have been unable to obtain a satisfactory interpretation of this award from Mr. Hines or any of the railroads in the Chicago district.

GRAFT IN BUILDING OF CAMP CHARGED

Criminal Prosecutions May Follow Probe of "Cost Plus" System.

Columbus, Ohio, October 29.—Both criminal and civil prosecutions may result from testimony given before the congressional subcommission which is here investigating the construction of Camp Sherman, according to members of the committee. Alleged promises of graft, orders of superintendents and bosses to slow up work under threat of discharge, and general charges of inefficiency, mismanagement and extravagance were contained in evidence furnished by witnesses, many of whom had been employed in the construction.

The only witness who said he did not consider there had been extravagance at the cantonment was Major General Edwin F. Glenn, commanding the camp. He added, however, that he was only acquainted generally with the construction.

Carl M. Watts, Columbus, a team foreman, asserted that at the end of his first day's work with about thirty teams under his direction, General Superintendent C. H. Hollingsworth, of A. Bentley & Sons company, Toledo, called him into his office and told him to "slow up." Watts testified that the men "learned they were not expected to work."

As many as 500 idle men at a time would be hidden in a gravel pit from the eyes of government inspectors, according to Watts. Timekeepers came twice a day and checked the men as being at work, Watts declared. The witness declared that he brought down four saddle horses and that a foreman told him he would put the horses on the pay roll if Watts would split the money with him.

Members of the committee tonight said they would not subpoena members of the Bentley company, which built the cantonment on a cost-plus basis. The hearings will be continued the remainder of the week.

SHE SEEKS DIVORCE BECAUSE HE CURSED AT GROCERY BILLS

After her husband saw the gorcery bills for about three weeks, he stated treating her cruelly, according to a divorce suit filed Wednesday by Mrs. L. Taylor against E. Meade Taylor. Mrs. Taylor claims in her suit, which was filed by Attorneys Troutman and Freeman, that about a year ago her husband came home and asked to see the grocery bills for the past three weeks, and then began cursing and abusing her. Again last June, it is set out in the petition, Taylor came home and asked to be shown the laundry bill and when this was shown him he became so abusive and obscene in his language that Mrs. Taylor was compelled to "lower the windows to keep the neighbors from hearing it." It is further alleged that he choked her and told her to leave him, that he did not want to support her and their daughter.

The petitioner asks for a total divorce, the custody of their minor daughter and alimony.

R. M. Dobbs brought suit for divorce against Mrs. Ethel Williams Dobbs, on the grounds of desertion. The suit, which was filed by Attorneys E. A. Neely and Roy M. Brown, sets out that after a married life of 21 days, his bride, so he is informed, went to Cuba with a burlesque show as a chorus girl and he has not heard from her since, and that was in January of 1915.

VOTE TO WITHDRAW

Delegates to Rail Shopmen's Convention Dissatisfied.

Pittsburg, Pa., October 29.—Fourteen of the delegates attending the convention of railroad shopmen in session here, voted tonight to withdraw from the meetings. They declared that in their opinion the convention could accomplish nothing definite. The division came when the delegates took up the questions of trials for suspended union members and the demands for wage increases. The trials should be made the primary issue, said one faction, while the others declared that the problem of wages should be taken up first.

Following the withdrawal of the fourteen, the other delegates numbering twenty, decided to continue the meetings and devise ways and means of securing their original wage demands from the railway employees' department at Washington.

$2,000 GONE, SAYS WILEY VESPERMAN

"I spent at least two thousand dollars on medicines and treatments before I finally got relief by taking Tanlac," said Wiley Vesperman, of 4418 Bowser avenue, Dallas, Texas.

"I suffered with rheumatism in my left arm and shoulder for seven years," he continued, "and at times I was so badly crippled up that I would just have to give up and go to bed. I also suffered terribly with indigestion, and what little I ate formed so much gas that I would belch up my sour, undigested food and would become faint from dizziness. I could hardly sleep at night for the misery I was in and in the morning I would get up feeling so awful that I could hardly get around.

"But Tanlac has driven away every bit of the pain and misery, I never suffer from indigestion and can eat anything I want. My condition has improved so wonderfully since I started on Tanlac that I am able now to give all my time to my business, just like I did before that awful rheumatism got its hold on me. My wife is taking Tanlac, too, and she is just as enthusiastic about it as I am."

Tanlac is sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. and all other leading druggists.—(adv.)

Atlanta Conference Of A. M. E. Church Proves Big Success

Social Circle, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—The twentieth annual session of the Atlanta Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church convened in the First A. M. E. church at Social Circle Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Presiding, Bishop J. S. Flipper delivered his annual address to more than 350 ministers and laymen who represent more than 40,000 colored people. In the course of the bishop's address he urged the ministers in the cities and rural districts to preach the gospel of peace to their respective districts and charges and be law-abiding citizens and never break the law, but uphold it and stand by the citizens who work for the best interest of both races.

Rev. D. R. Fobbs, J. W. Langster and R. J. Jefferson were elected secretaries of the conference. Rev. B. R. Holmes, president Holmes institute, was elected reporter to the secular press. The welcome addresses were made by Mayor J. L. Connor, Revs. J. T. Robins and J. D. Winchester; Professor P. A. Evans and Joe Avert and A. L. Tanks.

The amount of money raised was more than $700. The Atlanta district, Rev. H. D. Canady, led the district with an increase of more than $200. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. W. A. McClendon. Rev. W. C. Kelley was indorsed by the conference for a delegate to the general confreence.

TESTIMONY BEGINS IN TRIAL OF POLICEMEN

Charlotte, N. C., October 29.—Eight witnesses for the prosecution testified today in the preliminary hearing of Chief of Police Walter B. Orr and thirty policemen charged with murder in connection with the death of the five men shot and killed at the street car barn riot here August 26. Jake F. Newell, leading counsel for the state, announced tonight that he had approximately sixty witnesses to be introduced yet, and Harlot Clarkson, for the defense, said he had fifty witnesses, exclusive of the defendants.

HOOKWORM CURTAILS PRODUCTION OF GOLD

New York, October 29.—The ravages of the hookworm among the gold miners in Colombia is seriously interfering with the production of the precious metal, according to T. Brosius, mine physician, who arrived here today from Santa Marta. When the disease is particularly prevalent, Dr. Brosius said, production is cut as much as 50 per cent.

Colombia is the only South American country which has refused the aid of the eRockefeler Institute in fighting the hookworm.

Oklahoma Public Won't Lack Fuel Asserts Governor

McAlester, Okla., October 29.—"We'll see who's running this old U. S. A." Governor J. B. A. Robertson declared late today when he suddenly adjourned a conference he had called here of representatives of coal miners, operators and the public to discuss the strike set for November 1. He had warned both sides to the controversy previously, after hours of "sparring" by the operators and miners, that all powers of the state at his command would be used to see that the public does not suffer as a result of the strike.

"The people of this state are not going to suffer because of a coal strike," he told them. "We don' have to have statute laws to ta' action in a crisis of this kind I am acting for Oklahoma, for the public that hasn't an interest, but that of obtaining fuel, when I say that we are not going to suffer."

Mines to Operate.

"The coal mines of Oklahoma will be operated," the governor tersely declared as the conference came to an end, "I made that statement this morning and I meant it."

Governor Robertson adjourned the conference after the miners' representatives had declared the men would abide by the order to strike November 1.

"There is no use of prolonging this conference," the governor said. "I am now going to convert it into another kind of a meeting, a meeting of American citizens. All who care to stay for that kind of a meeting are welcome."

Non-Union Coal.

None left the room.

One means by which the governor hopes to avert suffering among the people of the state, he said, will be the distribution of New Mexico and Colorado coal mined by non-union men.

"I have heretofore tried to keep this coal off the market in Oklahoma for the benefit of the union miners," he added.

FOUR WASHED ASHORE FROM WRECKED BARGE

Sodus, N. Y., October 29.—Four bodies from the wreck of the steam coal barge Homer Warren, of Toronto, which foundered off Pultneyville in the heavy gale of Tuesday, washed ashore here today. The barge, which left Oswego yesterday for Toronto, its home port, was commanded by Captain William Stalkar, with a crew of eight men.

PRESIDENT BETTER, NO MORE BULLETINS

Daily Reports No Longer Necessary—Wilson Transacts Executive Business.

Washington, October 29.—President Wilson's improvement has reached a point where his physicians have decided to issue no more daily bulletins. This was announced today in the following statement:

"The president's improvement steadily continues. He is eating, sleeping, digesting and assimilating well. His present improvement has now reached a point where it is not considered necessary to issue daily bulletins. The people of the country will be promptly advised of any change in his condition."

During the morning some executive business was laid before the president.

JUDGES BAN ROME JAIL; PRISONERS ARE TRANSFERRED

Rome, Ga., October 29.—(Special.) When deputy sheriffs this morning took a large number of Floyd county prisoners to Lafayette to be held pending their trial in court here, the Floyd county jail becomes merely a transfer station for prisoners and a place to house them over night.

This is brought about by the order of Judge Moses Wright, of the Floyd superior court, and Judge W. J. Nunnally, of the Floyd city court, filed with the clerk of the county yesterday terming the jail an unsafe place, insanitary and an unfit place to confine human beings, which conditions cannot be remedied." The officers were directed to take all prisoners whose cases comes within the jurisdiction of Floyd county courts, to the county jails of Chattooga, Walker or Polk counties to be kept until the further order of the court.

Judge Wright stated yesterday afternoon that he made an investigation of the jail following the publication of an article that certain prisoners were chained in order to hold them in the jail, and that he decided that the limit had been reached. The two judges state that their action is in no way a criticism of Sheriff Wash Smith and his deputies, because they have been doing the best they could with a bad proposition. It is understood that the matter will be taken up by the board of county commissioners at their regular meeting on November 4.

SETTLE IT!

At a rousing meeting of the Moreland Avenue Parent-Teacher association that organization placed itself squarely behind the position taken by the Atlanta school board on the question of the distribution of moneys accruing from the state school fund and the revenues derived from non-resident tuition fees; and it recommended that the board immediately institute legal proceedings to establish its status in the matter.

It will be unfortunate if this question is not definitely and finally settled.

The question is simply whether or not that part of the state school fund that is apportioned to the schools of Atlanta is for use exclusively for school purposes.

As to the money derived from non-resident tuition—with the production of which the city government has nothing to do—it is a question of whether that money, yielded by the schools, is to be used for the schools, or whether or not all but 22 per cent of it is to be applied to other than educational purposes!

The issue is clean cut and direct, with the city council assuming the one position; the board of education the other.

It is demoralizing for the issue to hang in suspense and undecided, and the sooner each side in the controversy may know its status the better it will be for all concerned.

The courts can decide it; and if the state school funds can be diverted from the use for which they are intended that should be established.

If, on the other hand, it is the intent and purpose of the law that school money is for school uses and for no other, that fact should be established.

Suspense and uncertainty are essentially destructive, and there is no excuse for it in this instance.

LAW AND ENFORCEMENT

Whether or not this country is to be operated on a prohibition basis depends not so much upon the law saying that it shall, as upon the extent to which the law is enforced.

The country is now technically as dry as law can well make it. Under the war time food conservation act no liquor can legally be manufactured nor dispensed in the United States pending the proclamation of peace with the erstwhile central powers; and upon next January 16 the nation goes dry by constitutional amendment.

But we will not have prohibition unless the law is enforced.

So long as liquor is manufactured in moonshine stills and dispensed surreptitiously by bootleggers and blind tigers the prohibition laws will amount to worse than nothing.

The liquor that is now in existence, either in bonded warehouses or in private hands, is of little or no consequence. It will soon disappear, and if no more is made, or imported, the country will soon become dry, just as a pool of water dries up by the natural process of evaporation when the source of supply is cut off.

This left-over liquor is at least genuine, and it is infinitely less harmful than the stuff that forms the bulk of the stock in trade of the moonshine distiller and the blind tiger under prohibition law conditions. The consumer of it knows what he is taking when he drinks it, and he knows that he is not drinking wood alcohol or potash dissolved in water.

It would be better to return to local option and to repeal recently enacted legislation than to make a pretense of being a prohibition nation without putting an effective stop to the business of the illicit distiller and the blind tiger.

And law without enforcement is worse than no law at all.

THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM.

Council cannot too soon apply itself to the traffic situation on the downtown streets of Atlanta.

The congestion in the heart of the city during the busy hours of the day has grown to intolerable proportions.

This situation not only interferes with the comfort and convenience of those who have to use the streets, but it is hurting business; and it is high time that a remedy were found.

Other cities have solved their traffic problems, and there is no reason why Atlanta cannot do the same thing.

Certainly if a city of New York's size, with millions of people pouring through its thoroughfares day and night, can handle its traffic conditions with a minimum of inconvenience or confusion, Atlanta ought to be able to evolve a plan by which its streets may be protected against unreasonable congestion.

Traffic moves forward in the most congested part of New York's Fifth avenue—probably the most crowded thoroughfare in the country—with twice as great speed as can be made on Whitehall-Peachtree across the viaduct and past Five Points.

That is conclusive proof that, bad as the situation in Atlanta is, and as difficult as its solution may be, it is not without remedy.

Without further unnecessary loss of time, council should find what that remedy is, and then apply it.

FOR AGNES SCOTT.

Only two days remain in which Atlanta may measure up fully to its duty to Agnes Scott college, the campaign for the endowment fund of that splendid institution closing tomorrow night.

Atlanta has never failed in its response to a worthy call, and it is not going to do so in this instance!

Agnes Scott college means too much to Atlanta; its service in behalf of the young womanhood of Georgia and the south has been, is, and is to be, of far too great importance to permit this movement to fail.

Atlanta's quota of the total contemplated by the endowment fund campaign is only $100,000.

Of that amount, two-thirds has been subscribed and two days are left in which to secure the balance.

Two days, however, is long enough time if Atlanta goes about this important piece of business with its traditional spirit and characteristic determination to perform its duty.

FROM GEORGIA TO OHIO.

With stockmen of the north and middle west coming to Georgia to buy breeding animals, and with Georgia districts that only a few years ago were productive of nothing but lumber and naval stores now exporting trainloads of hogs and cattle for the northern markets, it begins to look as though this state is at last coming into its merited position as one of the foremost livestock states of the union.

This is borne out by developments that have recently taken place in Turner county and Turner is only a typical county of Georgia.

Prefaced by the question, "Where will we stand in another decade?" The Wiregrass Farmer, Ashburn, Ga., said in a recent issue, with reference to Turner county's live stock development, that—

"The fact that Turner county a few years ago was a lumber and naval stores producing county and annually imported immense quantities of all kinds of meat, recently in one season shipped from within her borders 125 cars of cattle and hogs, shows the way the straws are blowing."

"Whoever dreamed that Turner county would be shipping fine blooded cattle to Ohio?" asks The Wiregrass Farmer; "but—today the Red Pebble farm is loading 50 head of Hereford cattle for that state. Mr. C. F. Shingler, the manager of the Red Pebble farm, who is superintending the loading of these cattle, informed a representative of The Wiregrass Farmer that the price paid was $400 per head, or $20,000 for the bunch. Recollect a good many of them are only a year old. Also remember these were not his best cattle, as he has several individuals that run up in the thousands. The cattle were sold to Mr. James V. Hill, of Bell Center, Ohio."

Other Georgia counties have similar experiences to their credit.

Every northern buyer of Georgia cattle or hogs is a dynamic advertisement of this state as being a region presenting stock-raising advantages that are without parallel anywhere else in the United States.

It is not going to be long before Georgia will be universally appraised according to its true value; and once it is, we shall see an unprecedented in-pouring of western and northern live stock and stock men in search of relief from drawbacks and disadvantages that are unknown here.

"Drink cane juice," advises The Moultrie Observer, and says that when properly made—as in the country places—it's both food and drink; it's great for "grown-ups," and children fatten on it. "It's now a local product, but we may, in the course of time, ship cane juice all over the country and serve it as a beverage."

A Simple Remedy For the Influenza

Editor Constitution: We are beginning to notice advertisements of various articles supposed to fortify the person against influenza or to modify the attack. Some of these articles, as they appear in the daily press, are enough to scare susceptible people sick, with no other provocation than the suggestion.

The facts of science prove that there cannot be another as widespread or as fatal an epidemic of influenza, because the virus becomes more attenuated with each repetition of infection; and, greater than all the tonics ever advertised, each man and women has within themselves their safest remedy.

First, be careful of your diet. The pigs seem to get away with mixtures that don't mix, but you are not a pig. Remember to chew thoroughly. It isn't how much you eat, but how you digest, that keeps you well.

Ventilate your house, and especially your sleeping room. Take exercise, or a good walk in the open air every day; and learn to breathe. Keep your mouth shut, and throw out your chest. Fill the very bottom of your lungs. Deep, long breaths, with your chin held up like a son of God; and breathe in, slow and deep.

Try it for a month, and see how many "bogey man" prescriptions you are going to need. In conclusion, bathe daily, a cold plunge daily, in the morning on arising, or a cold sponge bath; with, once or twice a week, a hot bath at bed time. It's so simple and sane, that the flu won't bother you, and you can do the grinning, and with more enjoyment, than the wolf that's so thinly veiled in the "bogey man" prescriptions.

When Sets Your Star.

I.

Your Star of Destiny may set
Before Earth's pilgrimage is o'er,
You still may journey on, and yet—
The Star will rise for you no more.

II.

For if you live till you grow old,
You'll cross an unseen line some day,
When Hope for you shall cease to hold
A light to lead you on the way.

III.

When you have passed that line there'll be
No visions that can lure you on,
No sheaves to gather you will see,
The harvest day forever gone.

IV.

Behind that line there'll lie the years
That you have lived, in joy or pain,—
With memory's smiles or memory's tears,
You'll live them o'er and o'er again.

V.

Then you on old-time scenes will dwell,
Recall the friends you knew of yore,
Of by-gone days you'll often tell,
And speak of loved ones one before.

VI.

If comes your fateful hour to know
That Time has written its decree,
Across the line unfaltering go

Conventions Opening Today

Today is the seventieth birthday of Sir William Mackenzie, a Scotch-Canadian who started on his career with a heritage of poverty and country air and in time became one of the eminent railroad builders and capitalists of the Dominion. In all large business ventures Sir William has been associated with Sir Donald Mann. As boys the two grew up together in Ontario. As "Bill" and "Dan" they went west together in early manhood to seek their fortunes. Arriving in Manitoba, Mackenzie worked at his trade as a carpenter and Mann found employment as a wood chopper. Later they entered into the contracting business, and soon the firm of Mackenzie & Mann became known throughout the western provinces. They started in a small way as railroad builders in Manitoba and met with such success that in a few years they had a system extending across the continent, together with steamship lines on both oceans.

Strong Congressional Sentiment For Armed Mexican Intervention

Only the Paramount Issues of Treaty Ratification and Industrial Stabilization Keep the Problem From Immediate Consideration.

By James A. Hollomon.

Washington, October 29.—(Special.)—Despite the fact that the two paramount issues of treaty ratification and individual unrest preclude any legislative action at this extra session on the Mexican problem, unless the situation becomes more acute, it is a question that official Washington knows must be handled shortly, and without any weak-kneed sentimentality. Members of congress are almost to a man disgusted with the defiant attitude of the Carranza government, and particularly with the apparent weakness of that government in bringing about an abatement of outrages committed upon Americans and American interests in that country. There is a suspicion among them that there is as much indifference in the Carranza regime in properly protecting Americans in Mexico as there is confessed inability on the part of the federals to cope with the situation. The truth is, it is generally believed that Carranza's own forces are largely responsible for these outrages, a fact that has been demonstrated in many instances, and that General Carranza is aware of this, and is merely playing for time until the next general election in Mexico in 1920.

STRONG SENTIMENT FOR INTERVENTION.

That the problem is one that is not going to be temporized with is established by the outspoken sentiment of the legislative members here, many of whom favor intervention with arms at the earliest moment. Indeed, it is safe to say the issue is one that will be met firmly after the international and domestic problems arising from the war—the imperative demands of the hour—are disposed of. But for them this last outrage, the abduction of Consular Agent Jenkins, would precipitate immediate action. It is believed by many in official circles in Washington that Carranzistas are in one way or another responsible for, or have guilty knowledge, of this abduction, and that when analyzed it will be found that federals are mixed up in the outrage. It has been proven to be the case in so many attacks on Americans that were originally claimed by the Mexican government to be the work of rebel bandits that there is no good reason to suspect that the Jenkins case is an exception to the rule.

The state department has just been advised of the robbery of a paymaster in the Tampico oil fields by federal soldiers.

The oil companies who had suffered these robberies patiently until their patience became exhausted appealed to the Carranza government to permit them to use airplanes in transporting their payrolls from the offices in Tampico to the fields 50 to 100 miles below. The government declined, declaring that the paymasters themselves were guilty of these robberies. The companies protested the slander, and demanded an apology. The demand fell upon deaf ears as most of the demands upon Carranza from Americans. Carranza then countered with the proposition that if the companies would turn over their payrolls to the federal military establishment in Tampico the same would be safely transported. Though inviting robbery, one of the companies accepted the offer. The payrolls were to go to Naranjos, Potrero and Tanguijo. The soldiers got to the first place, but declared they could get no further. Private paymasters for the company with duplicate payrolls went through. At the end of two weeks the military escort of 250 men delivered the payroll to Tanguijo, delivered to the camp superintendent and took a receipt. And soon as this was done the soldiers instituted an attack upon the same camp, looted everything in sight and stole every peso they had just delivered, and everything else in sight. How many Americans they killed has not been reported.

And this was the way Carranza's own uniformed men "protected" American interests at their own request.

These things are occurring all the time, and congress is getting tired of hearing about them. The straining point has long ago been reached, and the breaking point is near.

HOW LAW IS ENFORCED AND JUSTICE METED OUT.

Following is a concrete example of some of the "law and order" that is prevailing in Mexico today. It comes to light from a Mexican newspaper that has just reached Washington—

A few days ago General Guajardo, who won promotion from a colonelcy by killing Emiliano Zapata, after he had slain Lieutenant Colonel Pina and Captain Avila as a result of a political discussion was arrested and placed in the custody of a military judge at Puebla, the town where the American consular agent has just been kidnaped for having killed two soldiers who expressed in a casual conversation a preference for Obregon, the anti-Carranza candidate for president, over General Pablo Gonzales, the chief of the "house of generals" that surrounds Carranza.

His two victims were under his immediate command, and the killing was attributed to "militarismo," which some Mexican papers declare has become the greatest power in Mexico.

The military judge in whose custody General Guajardo was placed ordered that he remain in barracks during the day; at night, however, he was allowed the freedom of the city without guard. He was ordered always to return to the barracks in the morning. During one of his nights at liberty Guajardo was told that Leon de Garay, a prominent attorney in Puebla, had criticised the system that permitted an army officer, who had killed two of his subordinates in a quarrel, to be at large. General Guajardo announced he would find de Garay and kill him, the report alleges. He met the attorney on the street and without a word shot him. Before he could fire a second shot he was overpowered by the populace and the victim was removed to a hospital.

The outcry was so great that the war department announced that swift justice would be meted out to the offending officer. At about this time, however, the judge before whom General Guajardo was to have been tried was removed from office, and it is charged in Mexico City that the war department was responsible for his removal in order to postpone the trial of the general.

That is not only illustrative of how law is enforced, but how justice is meted out to offenders when they belong to the house of the anointed.

Bits of New York Life

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, October 29.—Broadway has a new effulgence with Gaby Deslys back on the boulevard. Gaby out walking these days puts a showcase at Tiffany's to shame. She is fairly dripping with jewels—literally from head to her feet—for she wears jewels in her hair and in her heels.

Each day she appears in a new fur dress—fur being the last scream in Paree. The most observing reporter noted her return to America in the following description in The Evening Sun:

"Gaby arrived on the French liner France. Her costume was of fur, her stockings were green and of exceptionally delicate texture. A neat pair of diamond garters completed her costume."

Gaby is reported to have brought with her the $1,000,000 necklace given to her years ago by King Manuel of Portugal. At least her press agent said so, and a press agent will not lie. That would be unfair to the public.

Harry Pilcer, her dancing partner, who was a former east side boy of the Avenue A cabarets, is with Gaby. He, too, has cut a sartorial splash on Broadway. He wears the tightest sleeves, the highest slashed coat and the niftiest hat that have been seen from Thirty-fourth to the Circle.

If ever a person was actually lifted to stardom by a free puff in the press it was Gaby. She owes her fame entirely to Phil Simms, then a Paris correspondent for a press association. Simms was knocking about the cafes looking for stories, and learned that Manuel was paying attention to Gaby, who was not even featured in a Paris musical show. The story gained momentum after the original cable to America—and zip! Gaby became the star of an American musical comedy. She is here this time to flicker on the films. Costume designers say that no one has ever been discovered who can wear gorgeous gowns with the sang froid of Gaby.

All over Manhattan appear reminders of the great adventure. One may now lunch at the St. Mihiel restaurant or send clothes to be pressed by the Vesle tailor. But it is up in darkest Harlem, in the haunts of a race whose every day speech is replete with mouth-filling epithets, that the really personal touch is found. The A. E. F. Shoe Shining Parlor proclaims that an ex-hell fighter is ready for civilian business; the Argonne florist blooms with asters and gay cosmos, and a bright green sign with fanciful orange lettering boasts that the flight of steep steps going straight down from the sidewalk will lead a customer to the "Buffalo Dugout Ice Man."

I happened to be in one of the huge buildings that dot the heavens in the financial district the other day. The man at the gate—the point of contact for the visitor—was a man near sixty. He seemed above an office boy's job and yet there was something skillful about his handling of the visitor. He was the soul of courtesy and the impression one gained of the establishment that employed him was pleasant. But he looked more like a prosperous retired business man. The truth was that at one time he was one of New York's most successful merchants. He failed and this job was the first thing presented to him. But he made such an important job of it that he is paid $6,000 a year. More business is lost in New York through the impertinence of young office boys than will ever be realized.

There is something eminently fair about the following personal ad in a New York newspaper: "I will not be responsible for the debts of others. I will pay only my own.—J. T. Litt."

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE CONSTITUTIONALLY WEAK CHILD.

Some mothers begin pampering children soon after birth. It is a habit which grows on the mother and on the child. Talk bellybands. A bellyband has but one proper purpose—to hold the dressing on the naval. As soon as the dressing becomes superfluous—which it does, as a rule, before the baby is ten days old—the bellyband should be omitted.

A doctor who had devoted a few years to medical mission work in the Orient visited an Adirondack resort last summer. He fetched along his boss and his good luck. Every morning that boss took the good luck out to the lake for a nice cold bath. Good luck crowded and welled and thrashed around in great glee. And the water was cold, too. But the doctor didn't care, and his boss didn't mind, and the good luck registered satisfaction—but there was a lot of Saireygamping about the hotel every time the cruelty was perpetrated. For myself, I have no use for cold baths, nor for any bath any oftener than necessary, except air baths. For any one who can enjoy a cold bath as that baby did they are assuredly beneficial.

There is a period in every child's life when he or she exhibits a pronounced disinclination for exercise in the form of work or play. This accompanies or follows a period of rapid growth. Parents are too prone to assume that the child has a "weak constitution", and, therefore, cannot indulge in active exercise. This pleases the child immensely, and the final result is a more or less prolonged state of nervous irritability, poor digestion and faulty assimilation, various functional difficulties and poor general development. Pampering contributes heavily to the child's delinquency. If instead of accepting the hasty conclusion that the child has a "delicate constitution" the parents would see to it that the child is given proper physical training and such hygienic attention as the family doctor may think necessary, the outcome would be very different.

Among laymen and some physicians there is an erratic belief that a person who has a weak heart or valvular disease, for instance, cannot safely take any exercise. This is far from the truth, for intelligently graded exercises will often accomplish the greatest good for a weak heart.

A certain amount of daily exercise, beginning with very simple movements, even movements carried out while the subject rests in bed, and gradually increasing as conditions warrant, is indispensable for the complete education of every child not really disabled by disease. Some such program adopted in time will carry the "delicate" child through to vigorous adolescence.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Soap and Sugar for Ingrowing Nail.

I suffered for years from ingrowing nail and finally found a remedy which gave permanent relief. You take a piece of laundry soap the size of a bean, and work it in your palm with about an equal quantity of sugar until you have a ball of paste. Place this on the ingrowing nail and bandage it in place. You have to keep putting it on every day till the nail grows out, some three weeks or more. It relieves you while wearing it. (A. J.)

ANSWER—Soap and sugar was grandma's favorite "drawing" poultice. It certainly used to feel good on a feller's stone bruises. If it feels as good on an ingrowing nail it is worth trying.

Sex and Consumption.

Does cessation of menstruation ever cause consumption? (Mrs. E. H.)

ANSWER—No, cessation of menstruation often occurs in a woman who has developed tuberculosis, being a result and never a cause of diseases. The idea that it is a cause is an ancient lie propagated by dispensers of worthless nostrums and plausible advice.

Superstitious About Spiders.

Of all the ways to bring about bad luck there is none so certain, according to the sages, as to kill a spider. Kill a wood spider and you bring down the hatred of the whole army of witches. Even to see a spider early in the morning is an ill omen, and the earlier the day and the larger the spider the greater the evil that threatens.

This superstition of the danger of killing a spider is said to date back to the time of Mahomet. During his flight from Mecca he rushed into a cave to escape his enemies who were close behind him in hot pursuit. On reaching the entrance to the cave the enemies perceived a spider's web across the cave's mouth and a pigeon in her nest just above. Thus they concluded the place to have been undisturbed and did not enter it.

Hebrew tradition has a similar legend concerning King David while flying from Saul in the desert of Ziph. Hence the Kentish proverb

He who would thrive,
Must let spiders run alive.

There is still a third story regarding the bad luck of killing a spider. Once there lived a beautiful Grecian maiden named Arachne, who had attained great skill in the arts of spinning and weaving. To watch her one would have said that Minerva, goddess of weaving, had taught her. But this she denied, crying scornfully, "Let the goddess try her skill with mine!" When Minerva heard this she assumed the form of an old woman and advised Arachne to ask the goddess' forgiveness. But when she would not do so Minerva dropped her disguise. A contest was then arranged. Arachne filled her canvas with such scenes that Minerva could not forbear to admire. Yet the goddess was so jealous that she rent the web to pieces, and touching Arachne made her conscious of her great guilt. This was more than mortal could bear, so forthwith Arachne hanged herself. "Live, guilty woman," said Minerva. "But thou and thy descendents must continue to hang to all future times."

And so the maiden was transformed into a spider, forever spinning the thread by which she is suspended. No wonder it is bad luck to kill a spider!

Saghalien: Perplexing Problem

Washington, D. C., October 29.—The report that Admiral Kolchak has offered the Russian portion of the Island of Saghalien to Japan in return for military and economic aid, lends timely interest to the following bulletin issued by the National Geographic society:

"The Island of Saghalien has been a political perplexity both to Russia and Japan for many years. Soon after the pilgrim fathers landed on the east coast of America, a Japanese feudal baron dispatched an agent to this far northern island of the group that swings south from Siberia, at the mouth of the Amur, to Formosa and Fuklien on the China coast. Within 20 years after that the Russians had landed on Saghalien.

"The Japanese subsequently made several trips of inspection but a small handful of Russian colonists remained and today the majority of the permanent inhabitants of Saghalien are Russian, while to the Japanese it is little more than a summer fishing resort.

"In 1853, Russia sent an ambassador to Nagasaki and a band of troops to Saghalien. While the ambassador conducted negotiations, the troops built a fortress but, after repeated attempts, the boundary question was still unsettled.

"By 1875 the sea-going Japanese gave up all rights in Saghalien to the Russians in return for full rights in the Kurile islands and this condition of affairs continued until the treaty of Portsmouth, which gave southern Saghalien, up to the 50th parallel, to Japan.

"Japanese Saghalien has little agricultural land, but has large forests of both deciduous and evergreen trees, amounting to more than 8,000,000 acres. Japanese paper mills are situated in Otomari and elsewhere and an effort is being made to develop the papermaking industry.

"But it is on fishing that the majority of the Japanese inhabitants depend for a living. As soon as the summer season is over the fishermen migrate to the southern islands of Japan for the winter. Mauka, on the west coast of Saghalien, is the center of the crab fisheries and much of the crab flake consumed in the far east comes from this little town. A post road connects Mauka with Toyohara, which is the capital of Karafuto, the name which the Japanese have given to the southern part of Saghalien.

"Saghalien has less than 60 miles of railway and white, red or blue lines are painted across the windows of the cars to prevent the people from trying to stick their heads through the glass.

"The average annual temperature of Saghalien is near the freezing point and if the Japanese are ever to colonize the island they will have to change their methods of dressing and building.

"In summer, the streets swarm with Japanese; the Shinto shrine on the heights overlooking the Toyohara plain is visited by thousands; and numerous fishing boats ply back and forth from the ports massing the catch which is valued at about $3,000,000 a year. Between Toyohara and the shrine there is a race track and when a man wins on the races he climbs to the shrine and makes an offering in recognition of the good luck he has had. Thousands of the most talkative crows in the world line the roadway and scold at the passersby.

"But in winter, the scene is different. Then the Japanese section of the city, with its light frame houses with movable partitions, is almost deserted and only an occasional Japanese woman in a padded kimono, but with bare ankles can be seen in the snowy streets. The scene of greatest activity then shifts to the Russian part of the town where heavy log huts and a Russian church give an air of permanence to what would otherwise be a toy village of thin walled villas.

"Karafuto has much coal and there is considerable gold, but in the past the Russian residents have largely confined their efforts to farming and the Japanese to fishing.

"The northern portion of the island has an area of 14,668 square miles and a population of about 34,000 persons, who live there throughout the year. The summer population of Karafuto is about 50,000, but in winter the population dwindles to half that number, those who remain being mostly Russian.

"Saghalien has not been developed to any great extent, but what natural development has taken place has been done more by the Russian exiles whose permanent Japanese whose fishing camps and homes were there, than by the trading centers have dotted the shoreline."

BIG SUGAR USERS MAY BE RATIONED

Manufacturers of Candy, Soft Drinks, Etc., to Be Limited in Sugar Allowance, Says Herbert Hoover.

Washington, October 29.—Rationing of sugar to manufacturers of candy, soft drinks and the like soon is to be suggested by the sugar equalization board, a house war investigating committee was told today by Herbert Hoover, former federal food administrator. This step by the board, Mr. Hoover said, resulted from the fact that "raw sugar has risen beyond the point where it cannot be bought advantageosuly for the housewife."

Ottawa, Ont., October 29.—All contracts for the shipment of sugar to the United States were cancelled today by the Canadian trade commission and no more licenses for such exportations will be issued. The export of sugar at border points which has been permitted to some extent also has been stopped.

Mr. Hoover appeared before the committee in connection with an inquiry into the sale of 22,000,000 pounds of army sugar to France.

"Sugar consumption in the United States has increased apparently because the country has gone 'dry,'" said Mr. Hoover. "The present consumption of 93 pounds per capita a year is the greatest in the history of the country," he said, "last year's consumption being 73 pounds, the previous high consumption 84."

"The shortage is not large," he continued. "The equalization board has stated that for November and December the supply will be larger than in past years, but the increased consumption leaves a minor shortage. To meet all demands we will have to get more than half of the Cuban crop."

New York, October 29.—Recommendation that some department of the United States government be given "absolute power to ration candy and sweet drink manufacturers" was made today by George A. Zabriskie, president of the United States sugar equalization board, in a letter to Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer.

"The government is faced with two alternative sugar policies," said Mr. Zabriskie. "One involves the continuance of absolute control by the entry into an agreement with European government for the joint purchase of the dominant Cuban crop and the allocation of the remainder to certain governments as was done last year.

"The other method is to cease all governmental control of sugar and permit the establishment of free trade. This might result in a large price increase, at least temporarily, as there is undoubtedly a large amount of speculation and even hoarding in process, all in anticipation of further rises."

BRITISH M. P. BACK FROM DARING TRIP INTO PETROGRAD

Helsingfors, Tuesday, October 28. (By the Associated Press.)—Lieutenant Colonel Lestrang Malone, a liberal member of the British house of commons, has returned after a daring unofficial visit to Petrograd. He told friends here he was convinced after an investigation of the political and military situations of Russia that it is improbable Petrograd will fall this winter. He said reports of dissension among the bolsheviki were untrue and that Lenine and Trotzky appeared to be working in entire accord.

He saw Trotzky review thousands of soldiers who enthusiastically hailed him as "a divine leader." Colonel Malone said the bolsheviki asserted General Denekine had lost the confidence and support of the allies and had reached an understanding with General von der Goltz and Colonel Avaloff-Bermondt, heading the so-called west Russian army composed largely of Germans in the Baltic provinces.

WOMAN IS REPORTED ASLEEP THREE WEEKS

New York, October 29.—Mrs. Dora Mintz, 29 years of age, has been asleep for three weeks, and all attempts to rouse her have failed, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner, announced today. The young wman firstbecame ill on October 1, whenshecomplained of a sore throat. A few days later she developed a severe headache, and on October 7 she went to bed and has been in a semicomatose condition ever since.

She was taken to a hospital October 6, and has been given nourishment in liquid form. Physicians report that the young woman becomes slightly delirious at times. The "sleeping sickness" is believed to be the aftermath of an attack of influenza.

Suggestion Made For Fixed Ransom For U. S. Citizens

Claimed Chief Trouble Would Be Necessity of Sending Army With Money to Guard Against Wrong Bandits Taking It.

By Robert T. Barry.
(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, October 29.—The suggestion of the Public Ledger for standardization of ransoms to be paid for the release of American citizens corralled in Mexico found instant favor today among many senators, but there was some disagreement as to just how this proinclined to the view that the plan would be difficult of fulfillment.

Senator Fall, of New Mexico, chairman of the senate sub-committee which has been investigating American relations with Mexico, was inclined to the view that plan would be difficult of fulfillment.

"The chief trouble, as I see it," the senator said, "would be in getting the ransom money to the proper bandits. There might be very many chances of its falling into the hands of other bandits, who were not entitled to it. Of course, we might get around that by sending an army into Mexico with the ransom money to insure its delivery to the bandit entitled to it. We would have to send a strong force so that it could withstand the attempts by other bandits to take it. It would not be right to have ransom intended for Carranzistas fall into other hands."

Hard to Fix Scale.

On the subject of standardization itself, Senator Fall said he believed it would be difficult to fix an arbitrary scale. He pointed out that in the past the Wilson administration had neglected to negotiate for the ransom of many Americans and the result had been the loss of many American lives. When the senator's attention was directed to the fact that the policy of ransoming American citizens was of comparatively recent birth, and had been sanctioned officially only when two American aviators were captured, he insisted that the administration should distribute ransoms without regard to the political faith of the captured Americans.

"The difficulty in fixing a scale of prices to be paid for the release of Americans in Mexico," said Senator Fall, "lies in the fact that the market value of some Americans is nil. For instance, the only 'marketable Americans' up to date have been those who were employees of the administration. Just plain citizens engaged in lawful business in Mexico and relying upon the United States for protection of life and property have possessed no marketable value. We have done nothing to ransom them and their lives were taken. That should not be, but I doubt if any fixed scale of prices could be agreed upon as the amount of ransom which the administration might be willing to pay would depend upon the extent of the prisoners being 'deserving democrats.'"

Not Fair Solution.

The suggestion that a scale might be fixed and the relatives or friends of the captured American could subscribe the difference between the amount the administration would agree to contribute did not appeal as a fair solution.

Senator Poindexter, of Washington, discussing the proposal of Senator Myers, of Montana, to send United States soldiers into Mexico to recover captured Americans, suggested an annual appropriation by congress for the ransoming of citizens of this republic. In consideration of the senator's modesty and the fact that he has announced his candidacy for the presidency, he was not asked if such appropriations would terminate automatically on March 4, 1921.

Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, indorsed the Public Ledger's suggestion as the best possible means for the Wilson administration to maintain American rights and honor.

Would Accommodate Bandits.

"It would be accommodating to the bandits and not unsatisfactory to the administration, of which the policy has been to maintain amicable relations with other powers through the surrender of American rights," Senator McCormick said.

"A notable example was when we paid the British for their good offices by a repeal of the tolls exemtipn for coastwise shipping through the Panama canal. Another, the proposed apology to Colombia. In the first part of the war this administration was notable for its courtesy in the face of insults of the Hohenzollerns, while towards Mexico, as Mr. Root said of our relations with Germany, 'we have shaken the finger and we should have shaken the fist.'"

Democrats Reticent.

Democratic senators were not inclined to indorse the plan wholeheartedly. It was not that they desired to be put in the light of not "standing by the president," or of "getting off the administration reservation," but rather that Postmaster General Burleson, umbrella in hand, had not appeared in the lobbies to "line up" the administration supporters. In another quarter, the point was made that the program put forward by The Public Ledger could not be accepted by the democrats because it involved a "policy of protection."

In view of the announced determination of the republicans to effect economies in federal expenditures wherever possible, it was believed that some difficulty might be encountered by the administration in obtaining an appropriation of adequate size to meet the increasing demands of the Mexicans for ransoms.

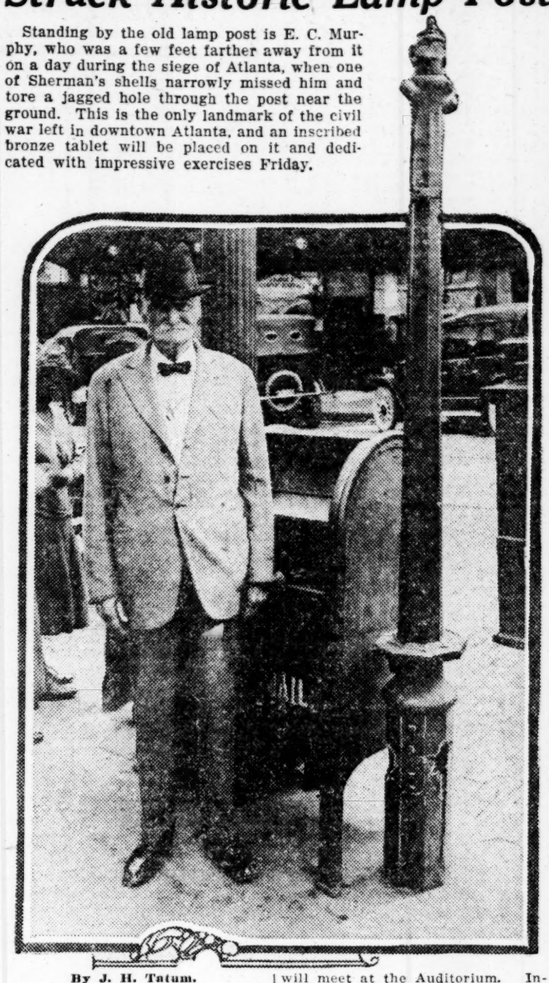

To overcome this barrier to the appointment of a "secretary of ransoms" with cabinet rank, the suggestion was advanced that a great popular fund might be subscribed by the nation to relieve the federal government of the drains upon the treasury. The Liberty Loan organizations, the Red Cross and Boy Scouts were mentioned as being especially well qualified to aid in the canvass for such a fund and the administration could name trustees to administrate it. It was argued that even though the funds were raised by popular subscription it would be better to have the administration represented on the board of trustees so that the records or the department of state might be available to indentify bandits in good standing and known to keep their promises for release of Americans promptly upon receipt of the ransoms. It is felt that the state department could obtain from President Carranza a list of such bandits in good standing.

Atlantan Barely Escaped Death When Yankee Shell Struck Historic Lamp Post

Standing by the old lamp post is E. C. Murphy, who was a few feet farther away from it on a day during the siege of Atlanta, when one of Sherman's shells narrowly missed him and tore a jagged hole through the post near the ground. This is the only landmark of the civil war left in downtown Atlanta, and an inscribed bronze tablet will be placed on it and dedicated with impressive exercises Friday.

By J. H. Tatum.

More deeply interesting to E. C. Murphy, pioneer Atlantan and Confederate veteran, than to any other person perhaps in the city, will be the dedication of the shell-scarred old lamp post standing on Alabama street at the corner of the Atlanta National bank, the only landmark of the civil war left in downtown Atlanta and which will be fittingly inscribed and dedicated with impressive ceremonies Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by the Old Guard and the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mr. Murphy's great interest in the exercises and in the historic relic of the days when Sherman's batteries were trained on the city, lies in the fact that he was standing but a few feet from the post when the Yankee missile of destruction came hurtling through the air and exploded in the street, a large fragment of the shell narrowly missing him, and penetrated the iron post, passed on and killed a negro barber named Luckie in his shop in the basement of the James bank building, which stood on a portion of the site of the Atlanta National bank.

Will Have Bronze Tablet.

After next Friday the lamp post will bear upon it a bronze tablet inscribed with its history and dedicated as a memorial to General A. J. West, pioneer Atlantan and gallant Confederate veteran, who died a few years ago.

So far as is known Mr. Murphy is the only living witness to the incident which is to be commemorated by the Atlanta organizations, and his narration is a vivid bit of history of this tragic time preceding the fall of the city before Sherman's advance.

"Federal batteries planted west of the city had brought the heart of the city within range," he said. "I was standing at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets just a few feet away from the old lamp post. An occasional shot was dropping from the federal guns into the city.

"A shell came screeching out of space and struck about midway of the block on West Alabama street between Whitehall and Broad streets. It did not explode upon landing, but richocheted toward where I was standing and burst nearby, scattering fragments in all directions. A large piece whizzed by me and cut clean through the lamp post.

Negro Badly Injured.

"Cries of pain immediately came from the interior of the little barber shop and running inside I found that the same fragment had struck Luckie and badly mangled both of his legs. I got Johnny McGee, who had a saloon in an adjacent room, and together we carried the wounded negro to the old cit yhospital, now the Grady hospital. He was so badly injured, though that he died."

John H. Jentzen, father of Chief John Jentzen, of the city sanitary department, was another eye witness of this incident, said Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Murphy now resides at 164 Stewart avenue. Although eighty-six years of age, he gives promise in appearance of vigor of attending a good many more Confederate reunions. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, his parents removing to America when he was two or three years old. At the age of nineteen he elected to become a mechanic and served his apprenticeship with the Pittsburg Pennsylvania Central railroad in that capacity under Andrew Carnegie, the late steel magnate.

In 1853 he came to Atlanta, then but a village, and became connected with the Western and Atlantic railroad. At the outbreak of the war he was detailed to help manufacture munitions and was thus engaged throughout the war, being sent to Montgomery, Ala., after the invasion of Georgia.

Manned the Texas.

Anthony Murphy, his brother, was one of the Confederate crew who manned the iron horse "Texas," with which the Andrews' raiders, twenty-two in number, who stole a train from under the eyes of a detachment of Confederate soldiers at Big Shanty, near Marietta, was overhauled beyond Dalton, Ga., in a mad race by the raiders to reach Chattanooga, where the federal general, Mitchell, was operating.

The ceremonies of unveiling will start at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. At 3 o'clock the Old Guard will meet at the Auditorium. Instructions have been sent out by Colonel F. J. Paxon, commandant, for every member to be present at that hour sharp, in fatigue uniform, and with cap, black shoes, sabers and white gloves.

The Old Guard will march in a body from the Auditorium to the corner of Alabama and Whitehall. Colonel Paxon will be master of ceremonies, which will open with prayer by Dr. J. D. Dickey.

Short addresses will be made by Mrs. W. S. Coleman, president of the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and by Mrs. Edward G. Warner, past president of the chapter and chairman of the committee for marking battle spots around Atlanta. The main address will be by Colonel George M. Napier.

At the conclusion of his address the tablet will be unveiled by Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. Warner, assisted by Dr. E. L. Connally and Major J. W Burke, representing the Old Guard, after which the benediction will be pronounced by Dr. Glenn.

HALF-MILLION TAX ASKED ON LIQUOR

Anti-Saloon League to Ask Congress for Prohibitive Tax on Sale of Intoxicants Until Dry Law Is Effective.

Columbus, Ohio, October 29.—Immediate introduction of legislation providing for a prohibitive tax running perhaps as high as $500,000 to prevent the sale of intoxicants between the date of ratification of the peace treaty and January 16, 1920, when constitutional prohibition goes into effect, will be asked of congress by the Anti-Saloon League, according to E. H. Cherrington, secretary of the league's executive committee, in an announcement tonight. He declared that there was little doubt that such a measure, if introduced would pass.

Existing and impending labor troubles would aid thepassage of such a measure, he asserted. The amount of liquor in the United States, he estimated at 65,000,000 gallons.

He stated that in its proposal to dry leaders in congress the league would set $100,000 as the minimum figure for the prohibitive tax.

A conference of dry leaders will be held in Washington at once, Mr. Cherrington concluded.

NORTH CAROLINAN NAMED PRESIDENT

Dr. W. S. Rankin Heads American Public Health Association—To Meet in San Francisco in 1920.

New Orleans, October 29.—San Francisco was chosen for the 1920 meeting place of the American Public Health association at a general session of the forty-seventh convention here tonight. Dr. W S. Rankin, of Raleigh, N. C., secretary of the state board of health, was elected president.

Other officers elected were: John Armyot, Ottawa, Canada; William H. Robin, of New Orleans, and G. H. Sumner, of Des Moines, Iowa, vice presidents; W. H. Hedrick, of Boston, secretary; Lee K. Frankel, retiring president, of New York, treasurer.

Resolutions favoring co-operation with the federal government, urging the appropriation of $1,000,000 by the government to combat plagues and objection to the pending bill prohibiting the use of dogs for science were adopted. A resolution favoring the abolishment of the handshake during influenza epidemics because it was considered insanitary and substituting the military salute brought an open fight and was defeated.

Closes Thursday.

The last general session will be held here tomorrow.

A new cabinet department of health in Washington or else the formation of a federal health commission along the line of the interstate commerce commission was demanded by Dr. W. S. Rankin, who was elected president in an address before the general session late today of the annual convention of the American public health association.

"Owing to lack of sufficient appropriation for the purpose, no one federal department has had control of the public health service in the past," said Dr. Rankin.

"Five cabinet departments—treasury, labor, commerce, agriculture, and interior—have shared in the investigations and administrations of matter must come under one administrative head with handling of the health service, and the whole good to be achieved."

Eight Bills Pending.

"There are now eight important public health bills before congress without co-ordination between the various federal health authorities or the different legislative groups. The present form of divided health administration is a grievous hindrance to the efficiency of the national health service and a positive danger to the value of state health work.

"Government agencies of one department feel they cannot co-operate with the state agencies which have made co-operative arrangements with another department, whereas with all of this work under one department or commission, the efficiency of the work would be tremendously increased. The primary health administration has been without sufficient financial resources to carry on the work without using parts of the appropriations of the departments and thereby giving those departments control of that part of the work which the department financed."

High Prices Charged For Louisiana Sugar Results in Complaint

Replying to a complaint from John H. Manget, chairman of the Atlanta fair price committ , that Louisiana sugar growers were charging merchants in Atlanta 21 cents a pound for Yellow C sugar, Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer wired that he has taken up the matter with the United States district attorney at New Orleans, and also advised Mr. Manget to confer with the district attorney here.

In a previous telegram Mr. Manget had told the attorney general of the action taken to force the Colorado beet sugar growers to sell their sugar at 10 cents a pound while no such action had been taken against the Louisiana growers who supply Atlanta.

Following is the telegram addressed by Mr. Manget to the attorney general:

"Your action toward refiners and hoarders of western beet sugar is highly commendable. Kindly advise if you will take similar action against Louisiana sugar profiteers who are now holding their stocks of plantation sugars at 50 per cent advance over prices that obtained inside last thirty days. It is impossible for merchants here to obtain sugar from other sources at present. The southeast looks to you for relief equivalent to that given territory supplied by western beet refiners. Hands-off policy by you and the administration will, in my judgment, result in 40-cent sugar to the ultimate consumer."

VANDIVER'S SELECTION IS CONFIRMED BY ROPER

(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper has told Senator Harris and Representative Gordon Lee that the announcement could be made of the appointment of John M. Vandiver, of Rome, Ga., as enforcement officer for Georgia of the new prohibition law. This was forecast in these dispatches.

The details of the enforcement of the law and the organization in the various states are expected to be announced within a short time.

HINES TO MAKE AWARD IN TRAINMEN'S DEMAND

Details of Railway Wage Board Recommendations Are Discussed.

Washington, October 29.—Director General Hines has not reached a decision on the wage demand of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Details of the recommendations made by the board of railway wages were discussed today by officials of the railroad administration with President Lee and the union's strike committee to develop how the recommendations would work in practical application.

Mr. Hines hopes to make an award in the case in the near future.

Mr. Hines, it is expected, will be guided in his decision by the policy laid down by President Wilson under which no general wage increase would oe given until the government had a chance to reduce the cost of living. Another important question is that of time and a half pay for overtime.

If all the eligible women in Italy exercise the privileges of the ballot recently granted them, the women's vote in that country will exceed the male vote.

COLVER FAVORS REPEAL OF EXCESS PROFITS TAX

Claims Measure Is Great Contributing Factor in High Cost of Living.

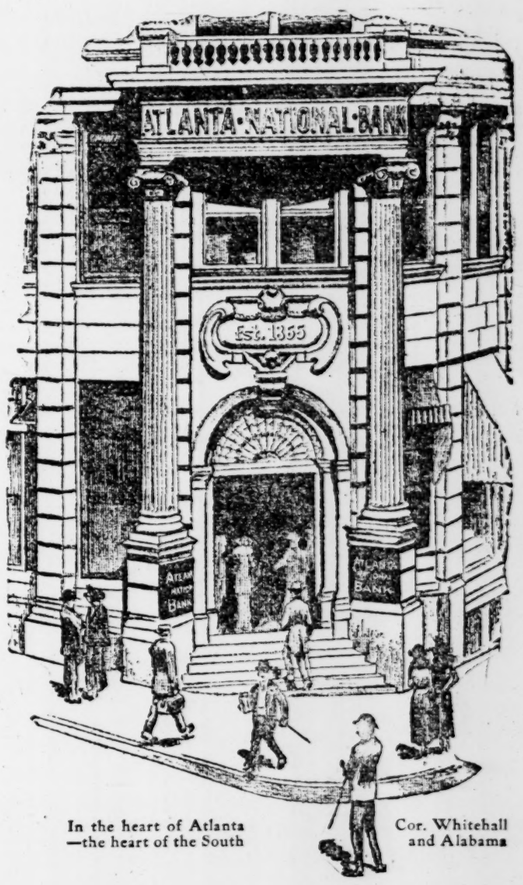

New York, October 29.—Challenging the "big five" meat packers to bring proof of charges that the federal trade commission has been guilty of conspiracy and acts amounting to treason, William P. Colver, a member of the commission, told representatives of the National Association of Ice Industries here tonight that the packers had spent "millions of dollars in advertising and that the sums of money so spent have been so great as to cause editorial astigmatism."

Declaring that the packers retaliated with every means at their command to the commission's campaign against these business methods, Mr. Colver said similar charges of socialism, anarchy and destruction of American export trade were diecterd against President Roosevelt in 1906, when he was urging the passage of a meat inspection law.

Declaring the excess profits tax to be "one of the chief contributing causes to the high cost of living," Mr. Colver placed himself on record as favoring the repeal of the measure.

IN THE REALM OF WOMAN'S AFFAIRS

Lijca-Bowden Wedding Is Most Brillinnt Event

Montgomery, Ala., October 29.—(Special.)—Attended by a chosen number of relatives and friends, who acted in the capacity of bridesmaids and groomsmen, the marriage of Miss Emily Castleton Ligon and Mr. George Temple Bowdoin, of New York, was solemnized at 8 o'clock tonight, witnessed by more than a thousand friends of both families. The marriage took place in the Court Street Methodist church before whose altar so many happy romances have been brought to consummation. No marriage in that historic edifice, however, has aroused greater local and general interest than that of last evening. This was not only because of the popularity of the young couple and the romance attached to their meeting and courtship, but especially because the principals represent, through their inheritance of blood, the highest traditions of their respective sections, the north and the south.

Decorations of Church.

The interior of the church was effectively decorated with orchids and golden-toned chrysanthemums, garlands of smilax and cathedral candles.

The Bridal Procession.

The company was seated by the ushers, four close friends of the bride's family, Colonel William P. Screws, recent commander of the Fourth Alabama; Captain William C. Oates, son of the late Governor Oates, and recently of the army; Mr. Henry T. Bartlett, a young banker of Montgomery, and Mr. Clifford Lanier, cousin of the bride and nephew of Sidney Lanier, author and poet.

The bridesmaids were Misses Marjorie Allen, Florence Peebles, Elizabeth Dent, all of Montgomery, and Miss Clara Houston, of Uniontown.

Mrs. Harry Bandy, formerly Miss Jette Aileen Farley, cousin of the bride, acted as matron of honor. Her gown was of the same type as that of the bridesmaids, differing only in color, her's being of orchid, while her tulle hat and flowers were yellow.

The two little flower girls who immediately preceded the bride to the altar were Mary Seibels Lanier and Mary Louise Holloway. These lovely little lasses wore frocks of orchid and of gold, with quaint poke bonnets. Their flowers were colonial bouquets of miniature chrysanthemums.

The groomsmen were Major Graham Ligon Johnson, of Atlanta, cousin of the bride; Mr. Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York; Mr. Frederick R. Shores and Mr. George H. Stein, also of New York.

The Bride's Gown.

The bride approached the altar upon the arm of her father, General Robert F. Ligon, and was met by the groom, accompanied by his cousin, Mr. Irving Kingsford, of New York, who was best man.

The gown worn by the bride was made of heavy ivory white satin with court train. The bodice was trimmed with historic family lace. From a Russian cap of lace, the bridal veil fell over the train, a cluster of orange blossoms over each temple. The veil was made of tulle, bordered on either side by wide bands of rare Venetian lace that was worn upon the bridal veil of Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, who was a Miss Schuyler, and by all the brides of the family since Hamilton was secretary of the United States treasury.

The only jewels worn by the bride was a rope of pearls given her as a bridal gift by the groom. Her bouquet was valley lilies, orchids and ferns.

Preceding the ceremony an organ program was given by Mr. Edward Lyde Taylor, F. A. G. O., who also played the wedding march. Two beautiful solos were sung by Mrs. B. F. Neely, "All Mine Alone," by Phillips, and just before the entrance of the bridal party to the church "At Dawning," by Cadman.

Mrs. Emmett Seibels accompanied the singer upon the violin and during the ceremony softly played "Evening Star," by Schumann, and "To a Wild Rose," by McDowell.

Reception at Ligon Home.

Following the marriage at the church a reception was held at the handsome Colonial home of General and Mrs. Ligon, on Perry street. Three rundred friends were bidden to the reception and an evening of festivity was enjoyed.

The bride and groom with their attendants were seated at a large circular table in the center of the dining room, where they were served supper. The table was decorated to represent a lakeside scene. In the center was placed a miniature lake bordered with lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns. A fountain playing beside the lake and was illuminated by electric torchlights.

The out-of-town guests included among others Mrs. R. A. Johnson, of Atlanta, and her son, Major Graham Ligon Johnson, aunt and cousin of the bride. From New York came Mr. and Mrs. Junius Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Kingsford, cousins of the groom; Mr. Daniel Kingsford and the Misses Margaret and Mamie Kingsford, uncle and aunts of the groom; Mr. Wainright Parrish and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Ludlow, of Ludlow-on-the-Hudson.

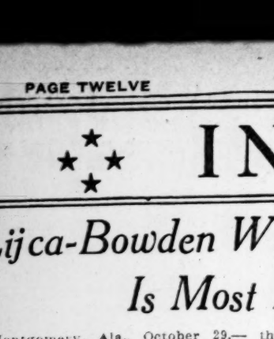

Bride and Groom.

The lovely brunette bride, Miss Emily Castleton Ligon, is the only child of General and Mrs. R. F. Ligon and the granddaughter of the late Governor Ligon, of Alabama. She is on her maternal side the great-granddaughter of Dr. Alexander Means, formerly president of Emory college, Georgia. She belongs through both maternal and paternal lines to distinguished families. She was graduated at the Margaret Booth school before entering Wellesley college.

The bridegroom, Mr. George Temple Bowdoin, is descended from the best of New England aristocracy, men and women distinguished in literature, statesmanship and economics. His more remote ancestry were French Hugenots and across the channel martial Englishmen who fought with Alfred the Great in his wars. His American lines include such notables as Alexander Hamilton, Governor James Bowdoin of Massachusetts; Washington Irving and General Philip Schuyler, of New York. He is also a descendant of the Morris, Sullivan, Temple and Winthrop families of Maine and Massachusetts. He is the son of the late George and Helen Parish Bowdoin.

The college career of the groom is also interrupted by his marriage. After graduating at Groton he entered Harvard. When the United States entered the world war young Mr. Bowdoin entered the aviation service and became a lieutenant. It was while stationed at Camp Taylor, Montgomery, that he met his bride. Following their wedding reception Mr. and Mrs. Bowdoin left in their private car for California and the islands of the Pacific.

The decorations in the reception house were entirely of white chrysanthemums, palms and foliage plants. The altar was an artistic arrangement of palms and ferns in pyramid effect, with pedestal vases filled with white chrysanthemums.

Adorning the mantles and tables were vases and baskets filled with these flowers.

The maid of honor, Miss Caroline Eakes, the sister of the bride, was gowned in olive green charmeuse, and wore a picture hat of black velvet, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Mr. Sidney Erown, of Macon, acted as best man.

How Times Have Changed

By Isma Dooly

An Atlanta woman, a friend and admirer of that distinguished citizen and knightly gentleman, the late Major Livingston Mims, has a note which she highly prizes, and which was written to her by the major. It follows:

My Dear Sweet Friend: It will give me pleasure if you and your good husband will dine with me Sunday, when there will be a company of friends assembled. Come a few minutes before 2 o'clock—it is the season of "peach blows."

Faithfully, your friend,

The following day the following note was sent to the same lady by the major:

Since writing to you, complications have arisen in the cuisine, and there is danger of there being nothing to eat for dinner; therefore I must deprive myself of the pleasure I had anticipated in the company for dinner Sunday. You can realize what an unhappy man I am in writing you this.

Faithfully, L. MIMS.

P. S.—Since writing the above I realize we at least have something to drink, and by the grace of God we may have something to eat—so come, anyway. L. M.

Those were days when, in the matter of hospitality, if one thing failed, another might be substituted. Even if the goddess of the kitchen was in a temperamental mood, there was still the refrigerator, the possibility of an oyster stew, and that good cold ham always on hand for Sunday, to say nothing of a well-disposed housemaid, who might substitute for the cook. And above all, there was the wine closet, and, as the major said, "by the grace of God," something could happen in any emergency.

But with crepe on the door of the wine closet, and the temperamental condition of the domestic problem in many a household, not even the "grace of God" can be entirely relied upon for a dinner party.

This statement is made in defense of Atlanta, and the many hospitable people who like to entertain in their own homes, but who many times do not know from one minute to another who is going to prepare the next meal.

A woman recently visited here, and being much entertained at the clubs and hotels in the city asked a friend confidentially: "Do none of these people live in homes?"

Whatever one may think of the lady's question from a standpoint of delicacy, there was some reason for it, passing as she did do, many beautiful homes as she was driven from one club to another to a series of delightful entertainments.

People are habitually saying: "The war has changed social life—people do not entertain as much at home as they did."

This is true and it may be attributed to an indirect influence of the war, but the truth is the unsettled condition of people in their domestic relations.

There are not enough homes to go around—people are looking for homes to live in, and there are not enough trained domestic servants to go around—to meet the demand.

"There must be a reaction," say the optimistic housekeepers, but the truth is several changes have to be made before there can be a satisfactory adjustment—one of these is a better understanding between domestic labor and the employers, and the other is more and better trained housekeepers, and home-makers.

K. A. Fraternity to Give Dance on Friday Evening

MISSING ATLANTA BOY MAY BE NOW IN BIG OHIO CITY

Information reached Atlanta by wire Wednesday that a lad answering the published description of J. T. Dye, Jr., the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dye, of 83 Ponders avenue, who has been missing from home since Sunday morning, was seen on Louisville and Nashville train No. 34 bound for Cincinnati Sunday morning.

He was said to have considerable money in his possession which he was spending quite freely on the train, and answered people who questioned him with the admonition to mind their own business.

The wire telling of the boy believed to be young Dye came from Chief Train Dispatcher Vandiver, at Etowah, Tenn., and was received by J. D. Hatchett, chief clerk in the division freight office of the L. & N. in Atlanta.

Mr. Vandiver stated that a friend was on the train who had read in the newspapers of the disappearance of the boy. His appearance tallied with the description of the missing lad and he started questioning him. The little fellow imparted the information that he had plenty of money and was on his way to Cincinnati, but when pilied with further questions told his interrogators to mind their own business.

Mr. Hatchett passed this clew on to Mayor Key to whom the father of the boy had appealed Monday to help him find his son. Police and detectives will endeavor to find out if this is the missing lad. He left home Sunday morning.

At that time he was wearing a brown Norfolk suit with a brown cap and tan shoes. His hair is very light, almost white in shade. He has blue eyes and a light complexion.

NO COOL WEATHER FOR ATLANTA SOON, SAYS FORECASTER

"All signs of the promised cool weather for Atlanta have disappeared," according to the local weather bureau. "Fair today, with probably showers tonight," is the forecast. The area of colder weather has moved eastward to the New England section, but with much diminished force. There is no prospect for even a light frost in Georgia. Light showers fell in Texas and along the middle gulf coast. The weather is fair and warm in the west and northwest, with an extensive low-pressure area covering the entire Rocky mountain region. Fair weather is indicated for Atlanta.

A WORKING GIRL'S LIFE

Day in and day out, month after month, she toils. Often she is the breadwinner of the family and must work that others may live. Rain or shine, warm or cold, she must be at her place of employment on time. A great majority of such girls are on their feet from morning until night, and symptoms of female troubles are early manifested by weak and aching backs, dragging-down pains, headaches and nervousness. Such girls are asked to try that most successful of all remedies for woman's ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has been giving girls strength to do their work. —(adv.)

What are your ideas on COLOR?

In "doing over" your home why not have the help of an expert?

Home decoration presents a problem to even the cleverest housewives. To meet this need in these days of reconstruction, The Constitution has obtained the services of Helen Kendall, whose daily articles, under the heading, "YOUR HOME AND YOU," will be found on the woman's page, beginning November 2.

Her suggestions are timely, cheery, easy to read, and, above all, sensible.

Miss Isabel Thomas Weds Mr. Gordon F. Mitchell.

The marriage of Miss Isabel Ormond Thomas and Mr. Gordon Forrest Mitchell was solemnized yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James William Thomas, on Spring street, Rev. C. B. Wilmer officiating, and the wedding guests numbering only the close relatives.

The floral decorations throughout the house were a combination of palms, foliage plants and white and yellow chrysanthemums. Smilax baskets filled with yellow and white chrysanthemums were used to further their ornament the mantels and tables. In the drawing room the pyramidal altar of long fronded ferns and sprengeri was showered with swansonia. Amidst these gleamed the lights from unshaded tapers burning in cathedral candelabra reflected in huge gilt mirror back of all. Pedestal vases held white chrysanthemums. Over all was hung a canopy of yellow tulle, etched with sprays of soft, feathery vines.

The musical program, which was given before the ceremony, was very impressive. "At Dawning" was sung by Mrs. J. H. Johnson. Immediately before the entrance of the wedding party a quartet of trained voices, under the direction of Miss Lula Clarke King, sang the bridal chorus from "Rosemaiden." The singers were: Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. DeLamar, Mrs. A. L. Slaton and Miss Dudley.

Bridal Party.

The bridal party entered to the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

The bridesmaids, Miss Elizabeth Speer, the bride's niece, and Miss Celeste Dunson, of LaGrange, entered first, and were both gowned in brown georgette crepe, with narrow sash of gold ribbon, and they wore brown velvet picture hats and carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Aline Mitchell Timmons and Miss Clara Mitchell McConnell, the nieces of the groom, were the flower girls, and they wore costumes of yellow taffeta and carried gilt baskets filled with small yellow roses.

Mrs. Albert S. Dunson, of LaGrange, as matron of honor, entered the living room with the bride, and she wore a gown of cream georgette crepe, trimmed with gold lace and draped over cream colored satin. Her hat was of brown velvet, and she carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Harvey Hatcher acted as best man.

The Bride.

The bride was unusually handsome in a tailored suit of brown duvetyn, with collar and cuffs of beaver. With this she wore a blouse of brown georgette crepe, which was embroidered in bead and chenille design. Her hat was a smart French model of brown velvet, with a touch of old blue velvet, and trimmed with small brown ostrich tip feathers. She wore a corsage of orchids showered in valley lillies.

Mrs. James W. Thomas, the bride's mother, wore a toilette of black and gray georgette crepe, over gray satin, and a corsage of sunset roses, combined with swansonia blossoms.

Mrs. S. F. Clarke, of Bridgeport, Conn., the bride's aunt, was gowned in black tulle, draped over a foundation of black satin, brocaded in gold roses.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. The table from which the wedding breakfast was served buffet held as its centerpiece a large golden basket of yellow chrysanthemums over which fell a filmy veil of yellow tulle. Loosely scattered over the cloth covered with delicate ferns were purple violets, Ices and bonbons, in yellow, conformed to the general color scheme.

The bride is one of the most brilliant and talented in the south's coterie of women writers, and she was for several years editor of the woman's department of The Atlanta Journal. She represents a family old and aristocratic and on her mother's side she is the granddaughter of the late James Ormond, of Atlanta. Mr. Mitchell belongs to the well-known Mitchell family of Georgia, who have contributed distinguished representatives to the state's citizenship. Mr. Mitchell is one of the prominent men among the younger members of the Georgia bar. His father was a pioneer citizen of Atlanta, and he is the brother of Mrs. Willis Timmons and Mr. Eugene Mitchell.

Out-of-town relatives in attendance were Mrs. S. F. Clarke, of Bridgeport, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale, of St. Simons Island; Mrs. C. C. Sanders, of Gainesville; Mrs. Robert Sanders, of Gainesville; Mrs. Robert D. Render and Mrs. Cyrus Wilkinson, of LaGrange, and Mr. and Mrs. James S. White, of Greenville, S. C.

BLACK-DRAUGHT CLEANS THE LIVER

Enthusiastic Texan Tells of Bad Fix He Was in and How He Got Out by Using Black-Draught Liver Medicine.

Holland, Texas.—Mr. J. N. Messer, who lives a short distance from here out in the country, says: "Black-Draught is without doubt the best liver medicine made. I do not hesitate to say it will do all it is recommended to do and more.

I am strong and healthy, but we all need a little active medicine once in a while, and Black-Draught is good enough for me. It does the work well and cleans the liver, carrying away bile, the easiest of any purgative I have ever seen.

Once, some years ago, I had slow fever and my stomach was in a bad fix, and Black-Draught gave me relief and helped me a wonderful sight. It cured me of indigestion, and the bad feeling after eating. I keep it for my family, they use it and have for years, and, too, it saves doctor bills and is not expensive.

A stitch in time saves nine, and most sickness is caused by a bad liver. A few doses of Black-Draught fixes that, and I don't see why people don't use it, and they would see as I have, what a help it would be."

Ask your druggist for Thedford's Black-Draught.—(adv.)

HOME—OURS OR THE LANDLORDS

Is America to remamin a country of homes, or are we to become a tenant race?

One of the proudest slogans that any city ever had has always been "The city of homes."

Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, and a half dozen other American cities have used that watchword, because they were proud of their miles of door yards and pretty homes.

What if the roof tree was only big enough to cover a cottage, and the door yard only held a patch of sunshine and space enough for a youngster's sand pile, the man and woman who held the deed to that little corner of earth were king and queen in their own domain, and possessed along with their own vine and fig tree, independence and security.

But figures show that America is losing her right to be called a country of homes.

Thirty years ago, 52 per cent of the people of America lived in their own homes. Today, the moving finger of the home-owning chart has moved steadily down to 40 per cent, so that now only 40 people in every hundred live in their own homes—the rest are tenants.

At this rate it will not take another twenty-five years before only a third of the American people own their own homes.

It was not to become a race of tenants that the men who founded this country fought their way through those first long winters of hardship and peril. It was because they wanted the sense of freedom and equality and independence which the home owner knows.

It is easy enough to say that it makes no difference, that "Home is where the heart is." But the fact remains that the man who turns the key in his own front door has a sense of stability and security which makes him a pretty good citizen. We are always talking about fighting to protect our homes. But, after all, we aren't going to fight so hard for the landlord's home as for our very own.

And it rests very largely with the women of the country as to whether we will continue to be a nation of home owners or tenants.

If a woman feels that a five-room cottage and a yard in the suburbs are better than a flat in the city she is going to see to it that she has that yard and cottage.

Then, after she gets it, she is going to harangue the powers that be until she gets the right kind of rapid transit system to keep her in touch with the big things in the city. But that is another story.

The Testing of Julia Grant

BY HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Copyright, 1919, for The Constitution.

READ THIS FIRST.

Julia Grant, a quiet sort of girl, of an unusual type of beauty, has been engaged to Dan Carson nearly a year, when she begins to worry about a steadily growing indifference on his part. The wedding date has been set, but three week before she can stand the agony no longer, and decides to ask him what is wrong. Finally, Julia wrings from Dan the admission that he no longer loves her—that there is someone else. Although completely crushed, she bravely renounces her claim and returns the engagement ring.

Then Start the Story.

CHAPTER IV.

The day that followed Julia's scene with Dan Carson in which she had released him from their engagement was filled with unutterable torture. Julia never quite forgot the morning afterward. She had not fallen asleep until nearly dawn, and she had waked to find Lucy standing over her in a dingy kimono. That sick recollection of something that had happened the night before Gave Julia the feeling of almsot physical nausea. She wanted to bury her head in the pillow and be alone, and solitude was the most impossible thing to attain in the Grant household.

Lucy, seeing that Julia's eyes were open, perched on the bed and began a description of what she had done last night. Lucy's descriptions were all very much the same. How she looked, what he said, what she thought about her, how easy men were, and so forth, ad infinitum. This morning, however, she ended by asking Julia a question.

"Whatever did Dan go home so early for? Did you have a quarrel?"

"No."

"Paul and I came home early and thought we might have a game of cards and found everything dark. I tried to wake you up when I came to bed, but you were too sound asleep."

Julia had not been asleep, but she had resolutely feigned it.

Lucy went over to the dressing table and made a pretense of fixing her hair. Then she yawned and stretched her slim arms over her head.

"You'd better get up, Julia. This is Mary's cleaning day, and she hates waiting breakfast. Put on a kimono and come on. Don't dress this morning."

Julia sprang out of bed. "You go on down and I'll hurry," she urged.

"You'll be half an hour if you wait to dress."

"No, I won't, I promise."

And then as Lucy reluctantly went downstairs Julia hurried through her dressing. Her head ached and tears stung her eyelids. A great weight seemed pressing her down all over, and when she ran downstairs and found her mother and Lucy sitting under the gaslight with Mary, the maid of all work, sullenly bringing in the toast and eggs, she felt as if she could not bear to sit there while Lucy and her mother asked questions.

The Grants were typical of many American families. Mr. Grant was in the commission business and made fairly good money. Neither Lucy nor Julia had ever worked and there was a maid of all work in the house, so that the girls had little to do but take care of their own room, and help with the dusting on Mary's washday. Mrs. Grant complained nevertheless about everything, and the dinner hour was generally the time of day when bills were talked over, expenses rehashed and all complaints confided to the head of the family. Lucy rather enjoyed these family squabbles, but everything in Julia's makeup rebelled against them.

This morning Mrs. Grant was in a very bad humor. Over her coffee cup she regarded Lucy disapprovingly.

"Lucy, how often have I told you not to come to breakfast looking like that?"

Lucy was reading a letter, but she looked up at this to stare at her mother in surprise. Mrs. Grant, however, had already turned to Julia.

"Did you make up your quarrel with Dan?" she askey crisply.

"Mother, Dan and I hadn't quarreled," Julia protested.

"Something was wrong," Mrs. Grant insisted, reaching for the sugar that May had placed on the table. "With the marriage only three weeks off I should think you and Dan might try to get along better than you do."

Julia considered a moment. The thing would have to be told, and she might just as well tell it now and get it over. Lucy sensing something wrong, had put down her letter and was staring curiously at Julia's tense face. Even Mrs. Grant was stirred by the tragedy in the girl's eyes.

Julia looked directly at her mother. "Mother," she began, "there isn't going to be a wedding. Dan and I settled things last night."

Mrs. Grant set her coffee cup down in the saucer with a crash. Lucy caught her breath. Why Julia's marriage had been one of the certainties of life. This thing that Julia was saying couldn't be true.

"You're not going to be married?" gasped Lucy. "You're not going to have a wedding now that your clothes are all bought and people know all about it?"

Her tongue was incredulous, scandalized. "I must say, Julia Grant, you haven't had much consideration for us."

Mrs. Grant waited, her eyes still fixed on Julia's face.

Julia felt a wave of faintness sweep over her and she locked her fingers in her lap.

"Dan is in love with someone else," she managed to say. "He told me so last night."

(Tomorrow—Lucy tells her mother some truths about what men want in a woman.)

Remarkable How Quickly Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough Disappear After Taking This Wonderful Remedy.

Have you tried the famous remedy for coughs and colds that makes taking a pleasure? If so you appreciate the wonderful virtues of Cheney's Expectorant and how delightful a cough and cold mixture may be made. Cheney's Expectorant has been the wonder of the drug trade for over 30 years. Its sales have steadily increased from year to year. During the "Flu" epidemic last year the sale of Cheney's Expectorant was so great that the manufacturers could hardly supply the demand. Physicians recommend Cheney's Expectorant for all kinds of coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough, asthma, headaches from colds, running of the nose, and that generally miserable feeling which coughs or colds afflict us with. They tell us that the "Flu" will return this fall. Cheney's Expectorant will prevent as well as cure. Keep it handy.—(adv.)

Adding Another Chapter to the Fall Fashion Story With

New Suits and Dresses for Women

—TO WHOM DO WE OWE HOMAGE FOR THIS ERA OF INdividuality in dress? Time was—and not so long ago—that women did not consider it bad form to wear garments like, or similar, to those worn by other women. Those who did try to express their personality by deserting conventional paths were considered eccentric and looked upon with a more to be pitied than censored attitude. Times have changed. Women have changed. Today they are wide awake to the meaning of self expression in dress—and manufacturers from whom our supply comes have realized that success depends upon giving women what they demand. Because they have concentrated all of their creative ability on individual styles for women, we are able to present variety in the new garments which have just reached us and which are mentioned here.

Home and Good Citizenship Discussed At Meeting of Council of Jewish Women

The Council of Jewish Women held their first meeting of the season at the synagogue on Wednesday afternoon, when good citizenship was one of the many interesting subjects discussed.

Mrs. Harry L. Schlesinger, the incoming president, in her greetings to the club expressed a lively sense of the responsibility resting upon the council at this especial time. "The one word which must be first upon the lips of every loyal American today is citizenship," said Mrs. Schlesinger, "and to perfect one's own idea of what true citizenship means and pass this ideal on to as many others as possible must be the chief work of the Jewish Council of Women."

Mrs. Schlesinger has just returned from a stay in New York, where she had an opportunity to observe striking evidences of the chaotic conditions existing in various phases of American life today.

"It must be part of our task to see that the children in the great educational plants under our direction have brought to them the most intelligent observance of every high day of American history, which will give them the fullest grasp of their significance A national faith thus instilled will not easily yield to the insidious attacks which are threatening true Americanism on every side today."

Suggestions of the president's inaugural were received with enthusiasm by the members of the council present.

Professor Melton, of Emory university, made the address of the afternoon, speaking on the subject "Tones of Home," and delighting his audience with his brilliant handling of the subject.

WOMEN WHO ARE WINNING -:- By Gwen Davies

BESSIE MAY ABBOTT, IMPORTER.

Theatergoers and music-lovers of a decade and more ago, remember Bessie Abbott as one of the popular prima donnas of the famous Bostonians. Business men and shipping agents know her now as a successful business woman—head of the only firm of women engaged in importing Oriental goods into the United States, it is said. Miss Abbott deserted the concert stage to engage in importing, and she now takes turns with her partner, Mrs. Georgia Proctor, in visiting the Orient to buy goods. During the time when Mrs. Proctor is bargaining with Chinese far us the rivers of interior China, for stocks of oils, rice copra, silks, crepe, peanut butter, crabs and quinine, Miss Abbott is kept busy traveling from city to city in this country, booking orders for her firm. She has now a flourishing trade with England, and plans soon to invade the Latin-American field. "The great mistake of girls who plan to make their own way in the world, is in going in for fancy callings of an artistic nature, whereas, the world is a serious place and needs workaday skill and brains," is Miss Abbott's "tip" to the women who want to win.

Hallowe'en Frolics.

On Hallowe'en eve the good fairies are permitted to make themselves visible to their many friends—so the traditions of Ireland tell us. And the little ones, as they are called by the romantic fun-loving Irish nation play a great many tricks this night on their enemies and they reward their true friends with many blessings.

It is truly a wonderful night for the romantic maiden to delve into the future and find, or try to find, her luck when seeking for the knowledge of her future life partner. In those good old days of long ago the lad and lassie spent a pleasant evening trying all the lucky spells to insure them success in their love affairs for the coming year.

And in the midst of much hilarity many games are played; there are bobbing and ducking for apples, spinning the plate, postoffice, heavy, heavy, what hangs over and forfeits. These were some of the old-fashioned ways the boys and girls of yesteryear passed a happy evening.

Other old legends told that this one night in the year the spooks or ghosts were permitted to roam the earth, so that, to escape their notice, all must go masked—hence our young folks disguised themselves and wandered forth from house to house seeking entertainment, for many informal parties were held on this eve and no one was refused admission; each visitor was treated to apples and nuts, and then he wandered on his way again.

Let your young folks entertain their friends with a good old-fashioned Hallowe'en party; let them play the old games of long ago and then close to the magic hour of midnight serve a real old-fashioned Hallowe'en supper.

Have corn husks and pumpkins for the decorations; use autumn leaves, strung together, for wall decorations. Cover the table with a silence cloth and then with linen tablecloth and place in the center of the table a new wooden pail filled with cider. Bank the sides of the pail with corn husk, golden ears of corn and autumn leaves.

Now wire the handle so that it will be in an upright position. Wrap the handle with yellow tissue paper and fasten a small jack o' lantern made from a small pumpkin to the handle so that it will hang in the well of the bucket. Arrange the table in the usual manner. Serve the cider from this well during the supper.

Hollow out a medium-sized pumpkin and cut it in a jack o' lantern and set bowls in the pumpkins to hold the radishes, pickle and sandwiches, sugar, etc., and make tiny pumpkins from the yellow crape paper, filling them with hard candies for souvenirs.

How to Make the Cider Cup.

Place in a large bowl some crushed ice and
One gallon of cider,
Three bananas, cut into thin slices,
Two oranges, cut into thin slices,
Three baked apples, cut into bits.
Mix and then serve.

Sardine and Potato Salad.
(Twenty-five Persons.)

Wash and then cook eight pounds of potatoes until tender and then, when cool, peel and cut into thin slices into a large mixing bowl. Now add
One cup of finely chopped onions,
One-half cup of finely chopped parsley,
One cup of finely chopped green peppers,
Two cups of finely chopped celery,
Two cups of mayonnaise or cooked dressing,
One-half cup of vinegar,
One tablespoon of salt,
One teaspoon of pepper,
One and one-half teaspoons of mustard.

Toss to mix thoroughly and then prepare individual nests of lettuce and place three-quarters cup of the potato salad in each nest. Mold it into a cone and then lay four sardines, tail-end up, against the salad. Garnish with finely chopped parsley and serve.

Jack o' Lantern Cakes.

Bake a sponge cake in individual or muffin pans and then ice with chocolate water icing and make the lantern face with white icing.

Gloucester Cod a la King.

Select a three-pound piece of boneless salt cod from the center cut; soak for three hours and then place in a piece of cheesecloth and tie loosely, plunge into boiling water and boil for thirty minutes. Drain. Place two quarts of milk in a saucepan and add one and one-half cups of flour. Stir with a wire spoon to dissolve the flour and then bring to a boil and cook slowly for ten minutes. Now add
Two well-beaten eggs,
The prepared fish, broken into flakes with a fork,
Juice of one lemon,
Two green peppers, cut into pieces and parboiled,
One tablespoon of grated onion,
One teaspoon of paprika.
Heat slowly until very hot and then serve on toast.

Fruit Cake.

Place in a mixing bowl
Two and one-half cups of sirup,
One cup of shortening.
Cream well and then add
Eight cups of flour,
Four level tablespoons of baking powder,
One cup of milk,
One-half cup of cocoa,
One tablespoon of cinnamon,
One teaspoon of cloves,
One teaspoon of allspice,
Two eggs,
Two cups of finely chopped peanuts.

Beat to mix thoroughly and then grease and flour a baking pan and turn in the batter. Place the raisins one at a time on the top of the batter and gently press them into the dough. Bake for fifty minutes in a slow oven. Cool and then ice and decorate with Hallowe'en figures and then cut into blocks.

SAVANNAH FLOODED WITH RAISED MONEY

Savannah, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Savannah banks today notified their customers that the city is being flooded with spurious bills, raised bills mostly. Numbers of federal reserve notes of small denomination are appearing raised to considerably larger denomination. It was stated by bank officials that they believed a gang is operating here, doing the "raising" cleverly, and that it has been operating for a month. Federal officials have been notified.

RHEIMS CATHEDRAL NOT BADLY DAMAGED

Paris, October 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—After all, the Rheims cathedral has not suffered from German bombardments and fire so much as was at first supposed, Cardinal Lucon has told a representative of The Paris Intransigeant. The cardinal announced that divine service would be resumed in the cathedral from November 1, but the holy office will be restricted to the altar of the Virgin and the ambulatory around it. These will accommodate only about 1,500 persons.

The interviewer describes how he met the cardinal at Rheims in a simply-furnished apartment of the archiepiscopal palace, with a shell hole in the wall. Cardinal Lucon, despite his 77 years, is still hale and alert, and he is an optimist.

"Destroyed, my cathedral? Why, no," he said. "The damage is much more easily repairable than is generally believed. A few ancient parts, it is true, cannot be replaced, but the beauty of the cathedral lay, first, in its stained glass; secondly, in its sculptures, and thirdly, in its statuary.

"Of the stained glass, nine-tenths has been saved and brought to Paris. The remaining tenth can be restored by specialists, with the aid of much patience and a great number of colored photographs we have. As regards the sculptures, we shall use the numerous moldings we have of them. Many have had to be restored anyway in the course of centuries, such as, for instance, the large piece representing the Assumption. That was restored in 1875.

"As for the statuary, we have so many moldings that it will be easy to reproduce the damaged parts. The pillars, with their ornamented capitals, have suffered little; only the two side doorways have been badly damaged by fire."

"Was there not some talk of leaving the cathedral as it was?" the reporter asked.

"If the evidence of Teutonic barbarity have to be preserved, let them be kept in a private museum," replied the cardinal gravely.

Drouth Hurts Cane.

Sylvester, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—The continued drought throughout Worth county is damaging the sugar cane and fall gardens as well as causing delay in the farmers sowing oats and rye. Owing to the very late fall there is being a small top crop of cotton, and had it not been for the caterpillars, there would have been more cotton, as the farmers say the boll weevil has disappeared some little time ago.

BEAUTY SPECIALIST TELLS SECRET

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased any drug store at a very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—(adv.)

A DISCOVERY THAT BENEFITS MANKIND

Two discoveries have added greatly to human welfare.

In 1835 Newton originated the vacuum process for condensing milk with cane sugar to a semi-liquid form.

In 1883 Horlick at Racine, Wis., discovered how to reduce milk to a dry powder form with extract of malted grains, without cane sugar.

This product HORLICK named Malted Milk. (Name since copied by others.) Its nutritive value, digestibility and ease of preparation (by simply stirring in water) and the fact that it keeps in any climate has proved of much value to mankind as an ideal food-drink from infancy to old age.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

In Command at Gordon

GENERAL W. P. RICHARDSON.

Brigadier General Wilds P. Richardson, who has, until recently, been connected with the road commission in Alaska, is now in temporary command of Camp Gordon, during the absence of General Lewis in Knoxville.

General Richardson has been assigned to the Fifth division by the war department, and his arrival at the camp makes him the senior officer there, and gives him the command during the absence of the regular commander.

Well known in military circles for his ability as an executive officer, and because of his energetic manner of taking hold of propositions that confront him, General Richardson will be a valuable acquisition to the Fifth division, and is the logical man for the position he now holds as temporary commander of the camp.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Signal.

The cool effrontery of Conrad Belknap and his utter indifference to consequences were never better exemplified than by a (to Katherine) startling episode that occurred in the evening of that day.

The weather was unusually warm, even for late June. Nobody cared to remain indoors, even for the attractions of bridge or music.

Robert improvised some dreamy airs on the piano for a time, but presently came out through one of the windows where Katherine was seated with Carruthers and Belknap.

"Come with me and I will show it to you," she heard Katherine say to Carruthers; and as they got upon their feet and started slowly away, Belknap remarked coolly:

"Ah; here is Senorita Cervantez. We will go with you, if the senorita will do me that much honor." And he added, by way of explanation: "They are going down to the lake. Will you go?"

Roberta knew that the polite question was intended for a command, but she would not have hesitated to deny him as she had done in the matter of the game of bridge, before dinner, if it had not been her whim at the moment to go.

So the four walked down the path toward the lake together, with Katherine and Carruthers in the lead, but not far enough ahead to render their conversation unintelligible to the pair who followed.

Roberta, whose understanding of Belknap's moods and methods was the consequence of long and varied experiences, knew perfectly well that he had a definite purpose in following the others, and she had her own reasons for desiring to be present to witness whatever might occur.

She was glad that Belknap kept so close to the leaders that there was no opportunity for confidences—as she also knew, because of that same fact, that he was meditating some sort of preconceived coup at the first opportunity that offered; and that he was actually making that opportunity.

They came to the lake at the boathouse and bathing pavilion, and went out upon the wide and spacious platform in front of the former, which extended above the water.

"It is much cooler here," Carruthers remarked as he brought some chairs forward for the ladies, and proceeded to light a cigar. Then his eyes rested for a long moment upon the Swiss chalet perched at the top of the bluff opposite, where the glory of the moon but added to its picturesqueness.

"What is that building over there?" he asked Katherine.

"Oh; the chalet?" she replied indifferently. "Everybody who comes here asks that question, Mr. Carruthers. It is really, I suppose, a sort of storehouse for the accommodation of articles that I don't care to keep in the house. It is closed and shuttered, and tightly sealed—unused, practically. Mr. Harvard and I have some plans regarding it, but, you know that procrastination is the thief of time."

"By the way, Carruthers," Belknap spoke up before a reply could be made, "I have been puzzling my head about you ever since you came here yesterday, to call."

"Yes? Have you, indeed?" the man with the scar replied, uninterestedly; but Roberta bent slightly forward in her chair, convinced that the moment had arrived when Belknap would make the play that had brought him out there with the others.

Katherine, because Belknap's remark and the manner of it had startled her, half turned toward them to listen; and Belknap—well, whatever it was that he intended to say, he knew himself to be master of the situation, for he knew what the other man could not know (as he figured it)—that both of the women present were more or less in his confidence; at least he was not afraid of anything that might be said in the presence of either of them.

"I have," he rejoined, without hesitation. "I thought, last evening when you came, and I am quite certain, now, that we have met before; only—"

"I have no recollection of such a meeting, Mr. Belknap."

"Possibly not. It happened some years ago. You have met with a serious accident since then. You did not wear that scar at the time"—he hesitated while Katherine caught her breath and bit her lip in amazement at his insolence, and while Roberta sat bolt upright on her chair as if petrified; and Belknap deliberately plucked the boutonniere from his coat and tossed it into the lake—"and," he went on, "your name was not Carruthers then. It was Brainard—Bruce Brainard. You were, so I was informed, an operative in the secret service."

It was all said very deliberately, concisely, and in a tone of finality that left no room for argument or denial.

A pistol shoe exploded immediately behind them could not have been more astouding, although it might have produced a different effect.

As it was, all three of his listeners sat very still and silent. Belknap alone of the group was on his feet.

There was a space of perhaps a full second, but which seemed, to at least two of the four, to be many seconds, during which nobody spoke; then, as deliberately as Belknap had spoken, Carruthers replied:

"Your memory is remarkable, but—misleading, Mr. Belknap. It is remarkable because I happen to be acquainted with the Mr. Brainard to whom you refer, who is, I believe, a member of the secret service, and who, quite unaccountably, resembles me, save for the facial disfigurement to which you have so delicately referred. Shall we stroll on, Mrs. Harvard, along the lake shore?" he added, before Belknap could reply.

Belknap, apparently, had no desire to pursue the subject. He knew that Katherine had seen him pluck the boutonniere from his coat, and that she had understood the signal. Also, he had accomplished his purpose, which had been to inform Carruthers that he was "on to" him—and to defy him.

It was plainly up to Roberta to follow Carruthers and Katherine, if she so desired, but she kept her seat and let them go—and watched them in silence until they were out of hearing. Then, in a tone so low as to be barely audible, she said to Belknap:

"Why did you do that, C. B.?"

He shrugged, and indulged in his sardonic smile.

"Because it pleased me. I was warned of his coming by telephone last night. I got the particulars early this morning. The man is Brainard, of the secret service. There is no doubt about it."

"And he is here"—she hesitated, and Belknap noticed for the first time that she was pale and tense—"why is he here, if you are right about him?"

Belknap smiled even more pronouncedly as he replied:

"There is only one reason why any of his kind would be after me. You know that. It is old, to be sure; but, you know that legend, don't you, that Uncle Sam never lets go? A thousands years are as a day, and all of that rot. He hasn't got the gall to try to put irons on me, even if he is sure that I am I—which I doubt; and if he did it he could not prove his case. Berta. Bah!" he snapped his fingers. "I don't fear him that much."

Then he turned sharply upon her.

"What did you guess at, about him?" he demanded.

"Nothing," she replied, calmly returning his gaze.

"I was watching you this afternoon when you talked together on the veranda. I could not hear what he said, and, of course, I couldn't read your written replies; but, your manner and his were not as between total strangers. I saw something that smelt of an understanding between you, I thought. Are you trying in another way to double-cross me? Did you supply the information that brought him here? Somebody did, and if it was you—"

He did not finish, but he managed to convey a world of menace in what he left unsaid.

Robert did not reply, for at that moment several more of the guests joined them on the platform.

Belknap excused himself and returned to the house as soon as the other guests came upon the scene.

Miss Loring and Demming were seated together on the veranda, and saw him enter the house. Black Julius, passing through the main hall, saw him ascend the stairs as if he were going to his own room, and a maid on the third floor saw him enter it. Nobody, on the following day, remembered having seen him after that; as least, nobody admitted it, if he was seen.

Katherine saw and understood the signal of the boutonniere when he plucked it from his coat and threw it into the lake at the boat house, and so, instead of wandering along the shore Carruthers—although for reasons of her own she did wish very much to do so—she guided him away from it, and, by a roundabout way, led him back to the house, where she left him on the veranda and went inside.

She wrote a single line upon a sheet of paper—"The rustic seat under the boxelder, after midnight," was what she wrote—folded it, carried it to the next floor, and slipped it beneath Belknap's door unseen. After that she went outside and joined the others on the veranda.

"The others" were scattered along the length of it, save for the senorita, who was inside at the piano, playing for them; and presently, while she was rendering Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire," Carruthers tossed aside his cigar and entered at the window beyond which the piano stood.

At first he began idly to turn over some sheets of music on the top of the piano, as if seeking a choice selection, and soon, having found it, apparently he carried it around to the end of the piano to her.

"Will you play this one for me, please?" he asked, fixing it against the rack; and while he bent forward to adjust it, Roberta murmured:

"He knows you. What will you do?"

"Nothing at present. I'll wait—and watch."

She began to play, but Carruthers, in withdrawing his hand, dislodged a sheet of the music, so that it fell to the floor. When he stooped to regain it, she murmured swiftly:

"I must talk with you. How can you manage it?"

"Go where you met me Saturday night," he replied softly. "The bench under the tree by the lake."

"What time?" she asked, while he readjusted the music on the rack.

"After midnight, Bobbie. Who arrives first will wait."

She nodded as if to assure him that the music was well placed at last, and he passed again around the end of the piano and dropped upon a chair to listen to her playing.

OLD WAREHOUSE SITE PURCHASED IN ROME

Rome, Ga., October 29.—(Special.) T. H. Booz, F. M. Formby and associates have just purchased the old warehouse site formerly known as the old Rome oil mill on East Fourth street, between the W. & A. railroad tracks and First avenue. One acre is embraced in the tract and is all inclosed, affording an extra large floor space for handling cotton, for which it is understood the purchasers intend to use it after considerable remodeling and improvements shall have been made. The deal involved $20,000.

This valuable property was purchased of the Union Seed and Fertilizer company, of Atlanta, and since operation by the company of an oil mill was suspended some four or five years ago, it has lain dormant. Already it is equipped with a splendid sprinkler system, and with some wall repairs and some actual construction can be converted easily into an ideal warehouse.

Women Leaders Announce Platform for Year's Work

Resolutions Passed Indorsing Red Cross, Carnegie Library and Advocating Many Forward Movements.

At a meeting of the executive board of the City Federation of Women's clubs, which was held yesterday morning, Mrs. A. P. Coles, presiding, plans for the year's program of work were presented and many earnest women participated in the discussions.

The session was an executive one, but as the resolutions passed at the meeting epitomized the purposes of the federated organizations, their contents indicate clearly the spirit of the organization and the lines of work to be pursued.

Mrs. Bolling Jones, chairman of the resolutions committee, submitted them to the press for publication as follows:

Appreciation of President.

Whereas, through an unprecedented accumulation of duties relating to public issues of the gravest concern to the welfare of the nation, the president of the United States has been prostrated for a time by overwork, therefore:

Be it Resolved: That we express our deepest appreciation of the toil, personal sacrifice and devotion to duty which he has so uncomplainingly endured; and,

Be it Further Resolved, That we register our most earnest hope for his restoration to health and strength, and an early consummation of his plans for world peace.

Urge Loyalty to Government.

Resolved: First, That the City Federation of club women in Atlanta will stand by our great president, Woodrow Wilson, and in the study of what "citizenship" really means, we will begin this study by living the first basic principle of citizenship—loyalty. Loyalty to our government, loyalty to our president, and that the observance of this fundamental principle of citizenship will begin in our homes.

Resolved: Second, That every club woman become an evangel of this gospel of loyalty, and that individual clubs will take like action.

The Study of Citizenship.

Whereas, The City Federation has for more than a quarter of a century worked for the betterment of nation, state and community life along the various lines of education, health, economics and morals, and

Whereas, The confusion of social relations in the whole world today renders such work more vitally necessary than ever before, and

Whereas, To work effectively we must know intelligently the field in which we are working;

Therefore, Be it Resolved: That the executive board of the City Federation shall establish a department for the study of citizenship, and that the president shall appoint an able chairman for this department, to whom the clubs of the federation may apply for suggestions as to material and courses of study.

Fight Against Illiteracy.

Whereas, the legislature of Georgia, at its last session, created the Georgia illiteracy commission, the purpose of which was to organize by co-operation with the counties and communities throughout the state a concerted and earnest movement to eliminate illiteracy in Georgia, and

Whereas, The appropriation available to the commission is only sufficient to maintain five or six expert teachers to visit and organize the several counties, depending on the work being carried on by local authorities, public welfare organizations, and patriotic citizens;

Therefore, Be it Resolved: That the Atlanta City Federation of Women's clubs heartily endorse the plans and purposes of the commission and earnestly request the active co-operation of every organization and each individual member of the federation.

Censorship of Movies.

Whereas, the Atlanta City Federation of Women's clubs has, for many years, advocated a proper censorship of moving pictures in this state (having for several years had a strong committee at work on this line); and,

Whereas, there is now before the general assembly of Georgia a bill (introduced by Honorable Boyce Ficklen, Sr., of Wilkes county), which provides for the state censorship of moving picture films; therefore,

Be it resolved, That the executive board of the Atlanta City Federation indorses the above bill and recommends its indorsement by the federation at its fall meeting, with the recommendation that local clubs and individual club women use all possible influence with their respective senators and representatives to secure the passage of this measure through the assembly session of 1920.

Indorse Library.

Whereas, the library is one of the most potent factors in the upbuilding of the community;

Be it resolved, That the city federation go on record as indorsing the effort being made to extend the services of the city library to the county at large.

Places for Women.

Resolved, This federation again request the city council to put the women on the educational, library, Grady hospital, parks and health boards.

The Drama League.

Whereas, the Music Study club and the Drama League of Atlanta have made lasting and effective influences for the cultural and refining uplift of the city and are building an atmosphere of love for the finer arts;

Be it resolved, That the City Federation of Women's clubs recognizes these two agencies with special appreciation and asks the hearty co-operation of all its members to these two organizations.

Funds for Cyclorama.

Whereas, the Cyclorama at Grant park is one of the city's richest assets, both from a point of history and of art; and,

Whereas, the housing of this wonderful picture is in such state of dilapidation as to jeopardize the safety of both picture and person;

Be it resolved, That the City Federation of Women's clubs request the general council of the city of Atlanta to either appropriate sufficient money to preserve this Cyclorama or to authorize a bond issue of sufficient amount to be used exclusively for this purpose.

High Cost of Living.

Whereas, the women of the nation are stirred by the high cost of living; and,

Whereas, the housewives of Atlanta and vicinity are being confronted by economic problems never met before; and,

Whereas, the price of staple commodities—eggs, butter, coffee, milk and other foods necessary to the maintenance of health are priced beyond the income of the average housekeeper;

Be it resolved, That the City Federation of Women's clubs organize a committee to be known as the Housekeepers' league, with the purpose of looking towards some means for the reduction of the high prices now set on foodstuffs.

Respectfully submitted,
LOLLIE BELLE WYLIE.

Cover Trash Carts.

Whereas, the trash carts of our city go through the streets with trash and garbage exposed to the wind; and,

Whereas, such exposure is not only unsightly but unsanitary;

Be it resolved, By the City Federation of Women's clubs that we ask the sanitary department of our city to cover said carts, and we further urge a large number of boxes be placed on our streets in which trash may be deposited.

MRS. R. M. STRIPLIN.

Pledge Red Cross Aid.

Whereas, The American Red Cross has accomplished such wonderful work both at home and overseas during the past four years;

Be it resolved, That the Atlanta City Federation heartily endorse and pledge our co-operation in their next drive; also,

Be it resolved, That we endorse the thrift movement which has been inaugurated by the government, and pledge our influence and support.

Mrs. Schoff, National Figure, To Be Honored at Luncheon

Mrs. Frederick Schoff, of Philadelphia, national president of the Parent-Teacher association, who will arrive in Atlanta Thursday, November 6, will be the distinguished honor guest at a luncheon given on that date at 1 o'clock, by Mrs. Philip Howard Jeter, state secretary of the Parent-Teacher association, at the Capital City club. Covers will be laid for twelve.

While in Atlanta Mrs. Schoff will be the guest of Mrs. Jeter at her home in Decatur. She comes to the city to round out a series of visits to the different states in the union, where she has spent her efforts in the interest of the association. There will be a national convention of the Parent-Teacher association in New York during the latter part of November, and Mrs. Jeter will be a delegate from Georgia. Mrs. J. E. Andrews is city president of the Parent-Teacher association.

This work is broadening in every phase throughout the city and state, and is an organization of merit and purpose. Mrs. Schoff's visit will be of special interest.

Will Make Report On Roosevelt Fund At York Lecture

More Than $7,000 Raised by Citizens of Roswell, Where Institute Will Be Built.

The address of Sergeant Alvin C. York, "the greatest soldier of the world war," at the Auditorium Saturday night, will be the principal feature of the closing rally of the Roosevelt memorial fund campaign in Georgia.

Delegations headed by the various county chairmen of the Roosevelt Memorial association from all parts of the state will be present and the final report of the campaign will be announced. In the three remaining days about $13,000 of Georgia's $50,000 quota of the national fund of $5,000,000 must be raised.

More than $7,000 has been raised by the citizens of Roswell, the birthplace of Roosevelt's mother, where the Roosevelt Memorial institute for the education of mountain boys is to be built.

The Atlanta Woman's club, of which Mrs. Irving Thomas is president, has raised over $150 for Atlanta's quota. Mrs. B. M. Boykin, chairman of the woman's committee for the Roosevelt Memorial association, said last night that the club would raise not less than $200 in all before the end of the campaign.

Adair Named Chairman.

Forrest Adair yesterday was chosen chairman of the committee to receive Sergeant (now plain Mr.) York. Other members of the reception committee are President A. S. Adams, of the Rotarians; Dave Webb, president of the Advertising club; Julian Boehm and Wylie West, as well as C. W. McClure, state chairman of the Roosevelt Memorial Association of Georgia.

Brigadier General Wilds P. Richardson, of Camp Gordon, and his staff were invited yesterday to occupy seats on the Auditorium platform for Mr. York's speech. Mr. York and his wife will arrive Saturday morning from Nashville.

Advance orders for seats, many of which are coming from other Georgia cities, were in blocks of as many as a hundred yesterday, and indications are that York will outdraw Caruso and Galli-Curci. Of 6,000 seats placed on sale over 1,000 were ordered yesterday. None are reserved. Admission is $1 and for children 50 cents. Tickets are on sale at the Cable Piano company, Rich's and Chess' place.

Member of Association.

Every purchaser of a ticket, as well as every subscriber to the memorial fund, becomes a member of the Roosevelt Memorial association, a permanent organization for the perpetuation of American ideals as expounded by Roosevelt. It is of course a non-partisan organization. Governor Hugh M. Dorsey is honorary chairman.

A telegram was received last night from Attorney Alene Hardin stating that the Macon Shriners, in session with the State Masonic convention, decided yesterday to raise Macon's quota, $2,000. Grand Master Robert J. Travis is a supporter of the memorial movement.

VETERANS OF MADISON FORMALLY ORGANIZE

SPRAYS AND LOCAL APPLICATION WILL NOT CURE CATARRH

Don't deceive yourself, if by the persistent use of sprays, douches, salves and other local applications, you have stopped the discharge from your nose and throat. The trouble will return in a more aggravated form.

It is said that the glands of the nose and throat act as an "emergency plug for the human sewage system," that when the kidneys, skin and lungs are unable to properly dispose of some of the impurities that collect in those organs, such impurities are thrown out through the glands of the nose and throat.

Head colds, due to exposure, must not be confused with that chronic, aggravated condition of the nose and throat traceable to impure blood.

The best way to relieve this condition of chronic catarrh is by cleansing the blood of all the impurities that have collected in the system. There is no better treatment than Plough's Prescription C-2223, the great blood purifier. This reliable alterative prescription treatment corrects the impure state of the blood, gives the tissues an opportunity to exercise their normal functions and results in the relief of the catarrhal condition so dangerous to good health.

To secure the best results in taking Plough's Prescription C-2223, the liver should be made active and the bowels regular. 2223 Liver Pills are recommended especially for this purpose. These pills do not sicken or gripe, one pill is a dose and only three need be taken a week to keep the liver and bowels in a healthy condition.

Plough's Prescription C-2223 can be supplied you by any good druggist in large bottles for $1.50 the Pills for 25c; or the 2223 Laboratory, Memphis, Tenn., will mail both postpaid on receipt of $1.75. Samples of the Liver Pills and leaflet regarding Plough' Prescription C-2223 will be sent you without charge on receipt on this clipping with name and address.—(adv.)

EDITED BY LES RAWLINGS

GRID SEASON HAS INTEREST OF FANS, AS 'DOPE' PROVES

Many Star Games Were Seen Last Saturday, Among Them Being Contest Between Tech and Pitt, Says Walter Camp.

By Walter Camp.
(Copyright by Otis F. Wood for The Constitution.)

As was predicted in this paper, the football season has been full of the most interesting happenings long before October, usually a comparatively quiet month, has passed.

Probably the most important instances were the downfall of Glen Warner's Pittsburg team before O'Neill's Syracuse team at Syracuse. And the defeat of Yale by Cavanaugh's Boston college team. The former had more import because it is the first time for a number of years that the colors of Pitt have been lowered on the gridiron, and more than that, it was a delightful revenge for Syracuse, who, it will be remembered, a few years ago, with a fine team and the two star guards of the country—Babe White and Schlachter—entertained the Pittsburg team at Syracuse, with an anticipation of a hard fight, but victory for Syracuse, whereas the result was an overwhelming defeat for them, Warner's men being complete masters of the situation from the start to finish, and scoring nearly thirty points.

All Syracuse, therefore, rejoiced in October, 1919, when the tables were so effectually turned. But before Syracuse had stoped cheering over the victory, they were humbled by Washington and Jefferson. And this brings up another point as to the result o fanother game which turned out a decided victory for Pitsburg, and which had been looked forward to as a much closer game, namely, that of Pittsburg with West Virginia.

West Virginia Good.

By comparative scores, West Virginia would drop through Pittsburg's defeat by Syracuse far below the proper point, for the West Virginia team is a good one and has two men, Bailey at center, and Rogers in the back field, of the really star players of the year. But the Pittsburg field, when it is wet and slippery, is a problem for any team not accustomed to that kind of going. However, we may yet see West Virginia coming up. As in the case of Syracuse, Pittsburg was overconfident. Boston college, full of glee after defeating Yale, fell down to defeat by the Army.

The star games of Saturday, October 25, were many, but the Colgate-Princeton and Dartmouth-Cornell were the headiners in the east, followed closely by Lafayette-Pennsylvania, Virginia - Harvard, Tufts-Yale, Georgia Tech-Pittsburg and Washington-Jefferson-Syracuse. The first two, Colgate-Princeton and Dartmouth-Cornell, were especially important as being practically decisive in the way of the standing of the teams, and each turned out as expected, but with the losers playing better than their friends had dared to hope.

The Virginia-Harvard game was important to measure the development of Harvard, the Virginia team, however, being so weak as not to be really a strong test. The Tufts-Yale was taken as an opportunity to see whether Yale was really as weak as indicated in the Boston game or not, and showed the Blue on the mend, having much bearing in regard to the information that it would convey to Yale sympathizers throughout the country as to the future prospects of the season.

Tech's Better Showing.

The Georgia Tech-Pittsburg game promised an opportunity for the Pittsburg team to reap their vengeance for the defeat by Syracuse the previous week, which they did, although Tech made a better showing than last year, and also had a bearing on the relationship between northern and southern football. The Syracuse game with Washington and Jefferson was the first opportunity of assuring the ability of the Washington and Jefferson team, which in former years has many times given trouble to the big fellows, and the result showed the same old dangerous group of football warriors from that institution, for they lowered Syracuse colors.

One other game of special importance should be mentioned, and that was the Boston-Army game at West Point. Those who are particularly interested in service football viewed this as the real test of the Army, and from it the opportunity to tell whether they would be strong enough to cope with Dobie's Annapolis team the end of the season. Their friends got much satisfaction from the good showing and the victory over the conquerors of Yale. The defeat of Yale at the hands of the Boston college had shown that the Boston team was a good one, and the decisive defeat of Pittsburg at Syracuse had shown that it was not particularly the Army's weakness that had caused the downfall of their colors to O'Neill's men. The Bucknell-Navy game at Annapolis was regarded as only a mild tryout for Dobie's men, and they not only came through, but had a good chance to baptize their second-string backs.

But in the west there were, indeed, serious happenings. The Ohio-Michigan was sure to show the rating of these teams in conference, as were, in fact, the other three vital games out in that section—Northwestern - Chicago, Iowa-Minnesota, Wisconsin-Illinois. The results put Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern and Illinois on the back seats.

Important Southern Games.

In the south, the Auburn-Vanderbilt game and the Kentucky-Sewanee were important, as was the Tennessee-Clemson and Georgia-Florida. Out on the Pacific coast, Washington-California and Oregon Aggies-Stanford were looked upon as giving some bearings towards the relative merits of California and Stanford for their big intercollegiate game in November.

Thus we reach the end of the first half of a football season with more startling happenings and far greater interest than ever before in the whole history of the gridiron game. The great body of football fans are now complaining. Not that there is not a crackerjack game to see every Saturday, but because so many star contests crowd the calendar that they have to miss some of the treats in any event because they cannot be in two places at once. Indeed, it is an embarrassment of riches.

This column predicted before the start of the season the plentiful material for back field positions in several of the big teams. This prediction is being verified steadily. At some of the institutions there is almost a superfluity of good men back of the line. The time was when the loss of one back field man might be serious, but this year there is a plentiful array, a thing which augurs well for the quality of play later in the season.

And speaking of this remarkable material for back field positions, suppose a coach had before him the following men from which to draw in his games:

Robertson, of Brown; Ackley, of Syracuse; Gillo, o' Colgate; Trimble, of Princeton; Rogers, of West Virginia; Wysocke, of Lehigh; Fitzpatrick, of Boston; Brunner, of Pennsylvania; Shiverick, of Cornell; Casey and Horween, of Harvard; McQua.ie, of West Point; Davis, of Pittsburg.

And this is only an early season glance. In fact, never before was the quality of quarterback and back field material so high.

College Men Who Will Make Gridiron History

Individual excellence on the gridiron this autumn is plentiful and clearly defined. Take quarterbacks, for instance. Such a player as Boynton, of Williams, stands out. He is versatile and ranks with the best quarterbacks of any day. Some more of the same grade may come to light before the season expires. Casey, of Harvard, is one of the best backs. He is fleet, is a good dodger and expert at taking openings. One of the best backs is Brunner, of Penn, a punter of skill far above the ordinary and rated the best punter in the east. Two of the best tackles are Keck, of Princeton, and West, of Colgate. West at present is the class of the whole array of tackles. Alexander, of Syracuse, is one of the best guards. Shiverick, of Cornell, is prepared to dispute Penn's claim that Brunner is the best punter. McGraw, of Princeton, is winning a name for himself as a guard.

Auburn Tigers Seek Revenge on Georgia For Defeat by Vandy

Eleven Is Primed to Give Red and Black One of Hardest Games Athenians Have Seen This Year.

Auburn, Ala., October 29.—(Special.)—Defeated, but not beaten, the Auburn Tigers have returned to their lair, in no way discouraged, and are bending every effort to put over a substantial win over the University of Georgia in Columbus next Saturday.

Last Saturday the first set-back of the season was received at the hands of the Vanderbilt Commodores, but though the score indicates that Auburn had tasted the "bitter pill of defeat," a close analysis of the game shows that the Auburn Plainsmen were the superiors of the Nashville team in every department of play. However, no alibies are being made for the defeat, it was simply one of those cases when the best team doesn't win.

The thing lacking in the Vandy game seemed to be the absence of the final punch, the perfect co-ordination of the line and the backfield when the ball was in the near vicinity of Vandy's goal, which, coupled with a wet and slippery ball, spelled ruin. The line did not charge all together, and when a line fails to open up a hole, the backfield men are in a sorry pickle. This point together with other weaknesses pointed out in the game are being thrashed out by Coach Donahue, and by Saturday, the team should be working together as one man, something that is absolutely necessary in successful line plays.

Open Style Shown.

More open style of play was shown in the Vandy game than has been exhibited at any time before this season, and the squad is being drilled daily in this mode of attack. Most of the forward passes attempted at Vandy were incomplete, but the failure of these might be attributed mainly to the wet and slippery ball.

As might be expected from the fierceness of the encounter, the Plainsmen returned from Nashville Sunday night in somewhat of a bruised and battered condition. The whole school turned out Sunday night to meet the returning eleven, defeated but not humbled, and the spirit shown must certainly have been balm for their many hurts.

When the train was first sighted around the bend, the band started playing, "We'll Roll the Ball Along," and the players alighted in a din that has seldom been equalled in Auburn history for many years. This is the kind of spirit that makes a football team fight in the face of bitter adversity, and when they receive such a royal welcome after a defeat they go into the next game with the determination to make themselves more than ever worthy of such enthusiasm.

Probably the biggest casualty resulting from the last game is the injury to Charley Scott, the diminutive back. This fleet broken field runner covered himself with mud and glory in the game last Saturday and ripped off several long gains, one being for 40 yards on a wet field after a kick-off. In the latter part of the game the brilliant little performer received a badly twisted knee, and it is doubtful if he will be able to get back in harness before a fortnight or more, certainly not before the Georgia game. His presence will surely be badly missed, for there are few times when Scotty is called upon

VANDY PRACTICES UNDER ARC LIGHTS

Resolved Not to Be Cheated by Clocks, McGugin Has Rigged Searchlights on Dudley Field for Practice of Commodores.

Nashville, Tenn., October 29.—(Special.)—Since the hands of the clock have been shoved back an hour and Father Time has resumed his normal stride, Coach McGugin discovered that darkness spread its blanket over Dudley field at 5:30 or thereabouts and shortened the time for football practice. But the Commodore pilot was equal to the occasion and has had huge searchlights rigged up on the football field, by the aid of which his team is able to run signals far into the evening.

After looking over his machine which had such a hard fight Saturday, Pilot McGugin saw that several adjustments were needed in the works and, together with his mechanic, Doc Manier, set out to tune up the machinery in preparation for the next lap of the race which is to be staged next Saturday afternoon in Lexington.

Satisfied that the Commodore line is able to repel invasion, the Vandy coach is now working to build up an offense that the Wildcats will have trouble stopping. With a few shifts and changes and more good weather for practice the backfield will develop more horsepower than has been shown heretofore. McGugin learned in his youth that the best weapon to use in wildcat hunting is a double-barreled shotgun, and he is attempting to develop an attack that will carry the wallop of the aforementioned weapon.

It was discovered last Saturday that Hendrix, who has in the early season been performing at fullback, would make a creditable showing at end. When the big backfield man went into relieve Neil Saturday the Auburn backs found it almost impossible to make any gains around his end and gave up the attempt in despair. This occurrence set Coach McGugin to thinking and as a result Hendrix may appear in the lineup Saturday as an end man.

From present plans the Commodores will depart on the wildcat hunt Friday night instead of Thursday, as this will give the team a chance to practice one more day on their own field. A large delegation of rooters will accompany the team to the Kentucky city to bring home the carcasses of the Wildcats. After the form shown by Kentucky Saturday the game promises to be one of the best on the Commodore schedule.

VIRGINIA TECH HOLDS BASKETBALL PRACTICE

Charlottesville, Va., October 29.—(Special.)—Virginia held her first basketball practice here Tuesday night with nine letter men on the floor in addition to a large squad of former first year stars. Practice will be held regularly hereafter on Tuesday and Friday nights.

"Pep" Lansigan, the veteran coach, is anxious to secure a couple of games before Christmas. Among other prospective games this year is a game with Bucknell university. Pettway, center on last year's varsity, has been elected captain of the team for this year.

New Rugby Rule.

The Canadian intercollegiate rugby union has decided to eliminate the scrimmage buck. This change was first introduced by the Ontario Rugby Football union. Interference is only to be used to open a hole in the line, according to the new definition of the rule by the intercollegiate union.

Atlanta sport fans should be delighted at the success which the boxing game has made since its revival in Atlanta several months ago. The fact that several thousand mitt followers packed the Auditorium Tuesday night to witness the Ted ("Kid") Lewis-Jake Abel battle shows that where real fights are assured there is going to be a representative crowd.

There have been a number of fights here since the revival of the game. In justice to the sport and the men promoting them, some have been good, very good, and others have been just as bad, although it is impossible for anything of the kind to be good every time.

Human nature will not permit of perfect squared circle shows. The human element of the thing must come through and show several boxers of the bum variety as the various cards are held but Atlanta has been fortunate in having good fights, some better than others but none of the kind where it would be perfect justice for the word "rotten" to be used.

The success of the Abel-Lewis scrap has encouraged the promoters to bring other and just as good boys here from all parts of the country and in announcing their intentions to do so they are assuring for Atlanta's followers of "Fistiana" the continuance of a popular sport.

The Golden Tornado, a little the worse for wear, is busy practicing for the game with Davidson which takes place at Grand Field, Saturday afternoon. The Jackets are doped to be about four touchdowns better than their Tar Heel opponents, but Davidson has the reputation of always fighting hard against Tech and the game should be a good one.

There will be several good gridiron shows Saturday. Of interest to Atlantans will be the Tech-Davidson shindig, the Sewanee-Alabama game, the Georgia-Auburn game, and the University of Tennessee Volunteers against the University of North Carolina.

Lost, strayed or stolen, one sporting editor, wearing a Revenge club ribbon and supposedly in the vicinity of Pittsburg, Pa. Finder please return to W. C. Munday, Jr., Atlanta Journal.

Just a belated welcome to brother Henry Vance, who has joined the Atlanta fraternity of sporting editors. Formerly with the Birmingham News, Mr. Vance comes to Atlanta with an enviable record and should find a welcome from all sport fans who appreciate stuff, "On the Level."

Billy Evans, well known umpire of the big leagues, and an authority on baseball, has been secured by The Constitution to write dope articles for the fans of the Winter league. Mr. Evans will contribute a weekly column to the paper which should keep the fans interested until time for the crack of the bat in springtime.

It is safe to say that the present football season is coming up to expectations which were held out at the first of the year for this to be one of the greatest years on the gridiron seen in some time.

We cannot help but look ahead, however, and realize that when the 1920 football squads are called to order there is going to be the makings then of some of the greatest teams which have ever graced particularly southern gridirons.

Football has made a great recovery from the effects of the war this season and turning out as good squads as the southern colleges have, next season is bound to show probably the greatest possibilities ever noted south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Gene Hinton, assistant sporting editor of The Constitution who is at Auburn finishing up, says 'Tech better watch out Thanksgiving.

GOLF AND HOW TO PLAY IT

By Chas. "Chick" Evans Jr.

A Talk on Stymies.

Whether stymies are good golf is a much debated question, but since stymies are played in national events they must enter into the calculations of a golfer.

Stymies offer a difficult and annoying question to every player of golf and I find it hard to make many suggestions with which experienced players at least are not familiar. I believe I can, however, give some information on this subject of interest to experienced players and very helpful to beginners. In a previous article on putting we suggested the value of the cut stroke which gives a curve to a ball and allows a player to go around a stymie. To execute this cut stroke Vardon, who does it well, turns the face of the putter slightly outward—that is, away from the hole. The face of the club is kept at this angle clear through the stroke and the moment the club face comes in contact with the ball you draw the club sharply across the ball. All golfers have played baseball sometime or other in their lives and they understand giving the simple curves to a baseball such as an incurve and an outcurve. This same spinning motion which you used to give to a baseball will, if imparted to a golf ball as described above, produce the same kind of curves. And let me say here that this control of the curve in golf is valuable not only in stymies but to avoid a bad piece of the green, which, if played otherwise, the ball would have to pass over. There is even greater use for the curve ball in putting on sloping greens. The playing of this shot I explained in a previous article.

In my recent match with Quimet at Pittsburg, Francis stymied me a number of times. One stymie he laid me on the fifth green was averaged up by a bit of luck for me. There was a chip of the green which had been thrown up by a spinning ball just to the right of the line into the hole. I started to brush it out of the way and then thought that it would be large enough to deflect my ball towards the hole if I could hit it properly. I played this shot and won the hole. This reminds me of an old trick of golfers who used to take their cleek-putters and rough up the blades of grass around the cup, when stymied. Then they would play up against these stiff, upstanding blades which would resist the ball enough to throw it back on the line or into the hole.

In playing stymies one should recognize the simple fact that some stymies can be played successfully and some cannot. When a stymie is absolutely impossible it is poor judgment to attempt to play it excepting in a situation where a miracle is necessary to win.

The danger of giving even this guarded advice is the fact, as I have seen so often on the links, many players are so determined to win the hole in a tight situation that they disregard the situation as it lays before them and attempt to do what is absolutely impossible. The result of this is that they almost certainly lose the hole at the finish instead of halving it. Or they may sink their opponent's ball or even find themselves facing another stymie. It is in situations like this that golfing temperament which we talked of in the previous articles is of such a great value to a player.

When a player doesn't feel confident that he can curve his ball around the stymie a common method of solving the difficulty is by lofting your ball right over your opponent's. Whether this can be done or not depends upon how near the other ball is to the hole and also how far the balls are apart. Of course, in playing your ball over your opponent you must abandon your putter and play with a club that gives plenty of rise, such as a well lofted mashie. The strike should be short and snappy and is almost wholly a wrist stroke. Still another method is by giving your golf ball the follow-through and thus knocking your opponent's ball over the hole while your own follows and drops in.

The follow through is usually played by hitting the ball just above the center and aim squarely at the other ball. Sufficient force should be used to get twice the distance ordinarily required. All of these three methods must be made with decision and confidence. If the shot looks risky by any of these methods then it is a question of judgement. It may be better to play safe and accept a half than to take the chance of sinking your opponent's ball.

'TRACK' SMATHERS TO COACH EMORY

Carolina Boys Are Coming to Meet Tech With "Do or Die" Resolve, and Will Give Heisman's Lads Real Battle.

Premier Track Man of Trinity College Will Train Athletes for Intercollegiate Sport in Which Methodists Participate.

By W. Ernest Rogers.

Emory University, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Ray K. Smathers, premier track man of Trinity for three years, is at present in charge of track athletics at Emory university.

Smathers is an athlete of wide reputation and Emory scored on the other colleges of the south when such a star was secured. "Track" has proved his merit time and again in the Trinity uniform and from the auspicious beginning of the track activities at Emory it seems that he will succeed equally well as a coach. As a Trinity man he made the time of 4:28, which is a tie with the south Atlantic record for the mile run. He also holds the time of 2:03 for the half-mile.

Interest has picked up considerably at Emory since the arrival of the coach and it is the ambition of this institution to play a spectacular part in the track history of this section this spring. Already the men are at work every afternoon and a squad of 75 men are furnishing the raw material from which the varsity will be picked.

As Emory cannot participate with other colleges in any form of athletics save on the track, this form of sport will certainly be given the lime-light this year in the hope of turning out a winning outfit of track men. Watkins, Velasco, Pittman, Rochell and Brandon are showing great form at present, with the prospect unusually bright that the coach will uncover quite a bunch of speed demons before the track season opens.

PENN TRACK TEAM WILL BE STRONG NEXT YEAR

The return of Sherman Landers of the University of Pennsylvania track squad was a big encouragement to Coach Lawson Robertson. With Shields, the famous mile runner of two years ago, and the promise that Maxim, the quarter-mile star, returning the Red and Blue may regain some of its local laurels in 1920.

By George C. Griffin.

News has come from the mountains, where the Davidson Waldcat holds forth, that the Jackets had better beware. They claim that they have run into the most horrible streak of luck that a team could ever meet and survive. The Clemson victory, they claim, was an accident, and the games that they have lost were by the smallest size of scores and they say their luck is due for a change and they are going to try and cast the old grouch aside when they meet the Jackets Saturday.

The Jackets are looking for no picnic and they will be prepared for anything the Wildcats may spring. But the same old jinx that has been following the Jackets all season is on the job again. Mr. "Injuries" himself must be camping on the Tech campus. Harlan has little chance to play Saturday. Staton and Fincher are on the sick list and Ham Dowling in the hospital.

It is almost certain that Red Barron is out for at least three weeks, if not for the whole season. Mayer was the last varsity man to "get his," getting a terrible rap that has laid him up for repairs. None of these men are suffering with serious injuries, however, except Barron and Harlan, and the rest are pretty certain to come around by Saturday.

Wednesday's scrimmage was the last of the week and saw Captain Phillips going the limit and he seems to be his old self for the first time this season. The scrimmage Wednesday was by far the hardest of the week. Coach Clay putting the best scrub team in the field that he could possibly get together as a little preliminary training for the two games that come in the next three weeks, the first being but a week off, when they go to Savannah to play the Savannah All-Stars and the Auburn freshman in Atlanta on February 22, the Saturday before the varsities of these two schools get together on Thanksgiving.

A remarkable thing about the scrub team at Tech this year is that four of the regular men on the team are Savannah boys. Fleetwood at center, Borum at guard, Howden at quarter and Arintrout at end.

Getting back to the Davidson game, the Atlanta fans will have the chance to see an Atlanta boy in action in the person of a little red headed demon by the name of Miley, who is holding down an end position on the Davidson team. He prephed at Boys' High school and upon graduation hied himself to Davidson to learn his football.

Two men who will bear watching in this game will be Captain Spann at quarter and Black at full, who not only is an able field general but also is the man that Davidson trusts to make most of her gains around the end. Besides he does the forward passing for his team. Black is one of the hardest bucking backs in the S. I. A. A. and it is claimed by many that next to Harlan he is the best bucker in southern football. Another star is Hammett at tackle, who played on the Clemson S. A. T. C. team of last year.

ALABAMA-TIGER BATTLE PROMISES REAL GRID CLASH

Sixteenth Annual Clash Between Sewanee and "Thin Red Line" Will Be Witnessed at Birmingham Saturday Afternoon.

By George H. Watson.

University, Ala., October 29.—(Special.)—At 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Rickwood park, in Birmingham, Alabama and Sewanee meet in their sixteenth annual gridiron clash, a battle that promises to be a "humdinger" from the first, judging from past games.

Information coming from the mountain, lair of the Tigers state that a general change has been made in the Sewanee lineup. Entirely new ends have been substituted, while Wortham and Hammond have dropped from the backfield. Crimson supporters are wondering just what effect Coach Abell's shift in his line will have on the strength of the Tigers.

It is a safe bet that by next Saturday the Tennessee team will be at its best and ready to put up a game fight against Alabama.

Sewanee Will Fight.

It is almost axiomatic in its application that Sewanee always does her best against the Crimson team, while Alabama always seems to suffer from stage fright. Followers of the Tigers used to say all that was necessary to defeat an Alabama team was to wave a purple jersey in its face.

Be this at it may, Alabama confessedly is out after the number of the Tiger, and she will not be content until she ties the third knot in his more or less tangled tail. Alabama is not led on by overconfidence, but by a grim determination.

Coach Scott put his "Crimson Whirlwind" through a pretty stiff work-out Monday afternoon. Most of the time was devoted to signal practice and no scrimmage was allowed until Tuesday afternoon. The scrub team under the direction of Adrian Vandegraaf is supposedly working on some of the Sewanee formations, which it will use in scrimmages with the varsity during the week. The Crimson mentor is careful not to overwork his men before a big game.

The fact that several of Alabama's stars are out of the game with injuries is no "hear story," as it might probably seem on the eve of a big game. It is a common knowledge that Sessions suffered a dislocated arm. His absence from the Sewanee game will materially lessen the Crimson hopes.

Brown in Uniform.

Brown appeared in uniform Monday for the first time in over two weeks. At the present rate of improvement it is probable that he may get into the Sewanee game. However, Coach Scott has the Vanderbilt game in mind one week later and for that reason he does not want to take a chance of having one of his men hurt an old injury. O'Conner, one of Alabama's star backfield men, has not been in uniform for a number of days and it is highly improbable that his name will appear in the lineup against the Tennessee team.

In the meanwhile, much "pep" and ginger is being shown among the student body. Large numbers flock to the athletic field each afternoon to lend encouragement to the "thin red line" in any way possible. Talk of the coming game is all the go on the campus.

A huge mass meeting in the interest of the game will be held in Morgan hall Thursday night. The following prominent speakers will be present to add encouragement to the Crimson cause: Borden Burr, of Birmingham; Dr. George H. Denny, of the university; Champ Pickens, of St. Louis; W. W. Brandon, of Tuscaloosa; Hugh Friedman, of Tuscaloosa, and Dr. James S. Thomas, of the university. Coach Scott will also address the student body.

A special train of eight coaches has been arranged to transport the some 1,000 students to the scene of the fracas. The train will leave the university at 8 o'clock over the Louisville and Nashville railroad and will arrive in Birmingham at 10 o'clock. A parade headed by the band of the Boys' Industrial school, of East Lake, and the university band will be staged through the streets of the Magic City.

Tech High Eleven Journeys to Macon For Saturday Game

The Tech High football squad will journey down to Macon to play the Lanier High team Saturday afternoon.

The Junior Smithies have not lost a battle to date, and have piled up 76 points against their opponents' 7.

Tech High has only allowed its opponents to make fifteen first downs, while they themselves have made a total of 60. About four to every one made against them.

The Lanier High team was beaten by a score of 4 6to 0, by the strong Gordon team from Barnesville early in the season. Captain Scott, of Lanier, has made the team much stronger since they met Gordon. He has been working the squad hard all week, in preparation for the game with the Junior Smithies.

The Tech High team is not in the pink of condition now, due to minor injuries received in scrub scrimmages.

Wilson is having quite a time with his nose, which was broken early in the season. Little Frankie Harris is also on the ailing list. His knee was wrenched in the Riverside game and he has not played to any extent since, but he hopes to be in condition to play at least a part of fthe game Saturday.

Saunders has been sick nealry all season, but is now coming around all right, and will be seen in the game with Lanier.

Kansas City, Mo., October 29.—In a recent practice handicap match held here, Benny Allen, former world's champion, set a new world's record when he pocketed 78 consecutive balls. Allen will attempt a "come-back" for the title in the national tourney in Philadelphia December 1.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

Harvard Outclasses Yale at Quarterback

This Position Has Become Most Important Single Factor in Chances of Contesting Teams.

By BILL ROPER,
Princeton Coach.

Laroche, the veteran Yale quarterback, has been relegated to the second eleven and I am told it is because of poor generalship in the Boston college game. Yale had the ball within easy scoring distance and Laroche deliberately ran the plays away from the goal posts so that on the fourth down his team was in a position from which it was impossible to kick a field goal.

Harvard has a tremendous advantage over Yale in this respect. Murray, the Cambridge quarterback, is a field general of high order. For several years Harvard has paid particular attention to generalship and the result has been that her elevens have won a vast majority of the big games.

The most important single contributing factor in the games that are to come will be the generalship displayed by the quarterback. We have passed the season of the year when the contesting teams can expect to run over their opponents.

All Teams Play.

On Saturday, November 1, practically every team of importance in the east will have a real tryout with the exception of Yale and Harvard. Pennsylvania plays Penn State at Franklin field and is in for a hard game. The Philadelphians are unusually fortunate in their games with Penn State, but the upstate team is playing high grade football and Bezdek will have his charges primed for this game. Penn State gave Dartmouth an awful rub earlier in the season at Hanover. His charges would rather beat Pennsylvania than any team on the schedule, and the Quakers in turn have little or no love for their upstate rivals. The Philadelphians should win out by a close score.

Princeton will catch a Tartar in West Virginia. Early in the season the latter played Pitt on a muddy field, and by a disastrous amount of fumbling, gave their opponents several touchdowns. West Virginia had been touted all over the country as one of the best elevens of the year, and disagreeable as the results of the Pittsburg game were, they really proved a blessing in disguise for the development of the team. The mountaineers are going to Princeton with a determination to wipe out the disastrous defeat at Pittsburg.

The West Virginia team is probably the heaviest in the east, and will outweigh the Jersey aggregation from end to end with a great deal to spare in the backfield. I understand they have chartered a special train for the team and rooters which will arrive at Princeton the night before the game. The Princeton team is developing slowly and the outcome is by no means certain.

Harvard and Yale will meet easy opponents. The New Havenites play Maryland State college, which defeated the University of Virginia, but as they will play a reorganized Yale eleven, I don't think they stand a chance of winning. Harvard has what ought to be an easy game with Springfield. The Harvard eleven is a powerful aggregation, and it is going to be interesting to see how their policy of development this fall will eventually turn out. The Crimson will not play a first class eleven before she meets Princeton.

The Harvard system and organization is the best in the football world. The question is, can it take a team and stack it up against second rate elevens all through the season and come through the important games with credit? If it can, there can be no criticism of this course, because easy games are certainly not as likely to wear out the players and result in numerous injuries. Harvard has a wealth of material, however, and can stand the loss of one or two good men better than could Yale, and certainly much better than Princeton.

Cornell's Development.

The Cornell team's development certainly does not lie along the "primrose path," and this week it will stack up against Lafayette at Ithaca. It is Rush's policy to develop the Cornell team with the Pennsylvania game always in mind. But it takes a wonderful aggregation to stand a series of lickings and have the necessary drive to win any special game, and a victory over Lafayette would be a most welcome tonic.

Colgate meets Dartmouth at Hanover. Distance and hard games have very little terrors for the upstate New Yorkers, and it will take a good eleven to beat them.

Syracuse plays Brown at Providence, where the latter had an easy game against Norwich last Saturday, and the week before displayed a great deal of improvement over the form shown in the Colgate game in their play against Harvard. The Brown team is a light, fast one with a puzzling attack and some deceptive forward passes. The Syracuse aggregation have been playing splendid football, but a reversal of form always comes when least expected. On past performance Syracuse should have a fairly easy game, but one cannot always tell.

Annapolis probably will have another scoring matinee against West Virginia Wesleyan. It is too bad the Navy can't get a real test.

It is about time for the army to show some offensive strength. November 1 is the date when they usually begin to swing into their stride. Pittsburg meets Lehigh at South Bethlehem. The "Smoky City" aggregation will have to play high class football to win. Lehigh has a top notch eleven.

Rutgers will have a breathing spell this week, unless they have recently scheduled a game. I understand an effort has been made to induce the New York Agricultural college to go to New Brunswick. At any rate the enforced lay-off will not do any harm, as Rutgers has two busy Saturdays in prospect with Boston college and West Virginia. I understand Rutgers has only about eleven players besides the redoubtable coach, Foster Sanford.

DEMPSEY TO SHOW WARES TO ATLANTA

Nicholes Says Jack Is Real Fighter and Deserves to Hold Crown of World Conqueror After Great Victory.

By Bob Nicholes.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, will display his wares in Atlanta Friday and Saturday in connection with the Sells-Floto circus. This will be the first appearance of the champion in Atlanta since annexing the title, by his victory over Jess Willard at Toledo, Ohio, last Fourth of July.

The writer happened to be among those present at the time the Willard-Dempsey fight took place and can say that Dempsey is some fighter. By "fighter," we not only mean that he is a boxer, but a real honest-to-goodness fighter as well. In fact, Jack seems to love the boxing game as well as a sport, as he does as a profession.

For a few days before the big fight the Toledo papers would quote Dempsey as saying that he would stop Willard in the first few rounds. Now, Jack didn't make any boastful remarks as to the outcome, but merely stated that he would take the measure of big Jess. So believe me he certainly did.

The Fourth of July proved to be a very hot day and the 45,000 people who saw the big fight suffered accordingly. Dempsey entered the ring first, clad in white tights and looked as confident as if he had already won the battle. The blistering summer sun had tanned him so that his skin resembled that of a south sea islander. But there he was, a picture of health and in perfect fighting trim.

Willard entered the ring soon after, and went immediately to Dempsey's corner to greet the challenger. The countenance of big Jess was all in smiles, but somehow under those smiles there seemed to be a lack of confidence.

The fight started, and with very little "feeling out" Dempsey tore into his bigger opponent like a wildcat. Before the spectators could realize what had happened Dempsey had sent Willard to the canvas, and Referee Ollie Pecord was counting him out. Big Jess had a surprised, sickly smile on his face, as he lay there on the floor wondering what it was all about. Willard staggered up at the count of nine, but down he went again and before the first round was over Champion Willard had been to the mat no less than five times.

Willard was very bloody about the mouth, nose and right eye, and really looked pitiful.

Willard showed wonderful recuperative powers between the rounds and did better in the second round. But the champion's blows lacked power behind them, Dempsey having knocked all the "power" out of him in the first frame.

The third proved to be the finish of Willard and as he came to his corner he was very groggy and blinded, not being able to see his stool or the ropes. He was unable to come to the scratch for the fourth and threw in his towel, and with that towel went the heavyweight championship of the world.

A few hours after the battle it was reported that Willard had died from a broken blod vessel received in the melee. No, Willard himself was not dead, but his reign as king of the heavyweights was, and it had died hard, too.

Sox Plan Resort.

Chicago, October 29.—A permanent spring training home for the Chicago Americans, with its own hotel and commissary equipment, is planned by Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the club, it was learned today. A site climaticaly and otherwise adapted to good results in spring training is being sought. The place picked for the coming training season probably will be chosen as the permanent home, Mr. Comiskey said, but the plan will not be put into effect next year, it being desired to try out the camp first.

Fred Fulton Failed To Impress British In First Ring Bout

Fred Fulton managed to score a knockout in his first bout in England, with Arthur Townley as his opponent, but the big Minnesota plasterer failed to impress British critics with his prowess as a glove pusher. Fred was roundly panned—but in a nice way—by the ringside critics, and several of them were bold enough to express surprise that he had risen above the mediocre in his native land.

It seems Fulton took things quite easy in the Townley match. Fred was never the type of fighter to rush into action in the first round, but in his British debut he seemed even more cautious than ever before, and Townley rushed in and was floored for the charmed count in exactly 2 minutes and 24 seconds.

The British system of boxing and of conducting boxing shows may have the faults some American fighters have charged it with, but to the credit of the same system it may be said that it encourages action from the tap of the gong because nearly all English critics exact a number of points of the man who lays back and forces the other man to start the action.

After the English critics had panned Fulton for waiting out his British opponent, Fred broke into print with an alibi in which he declared he had always fought in that style. He added that he liked to have his opponent carry the milling, but this explanation does not ride well with those who saw Jack Dempsey beat him in a round.

Fulton has been referred to in England as a lumbering giant who has absolutely nothing a championship contender should have, and curiously enough, Townley is given credit for making a fight of it, even though he did go down to defeat in the first session. One critic ventures the opinion that had Townley gone on the defensive as Fulton did, there would have been no battle, but a tiresome stalling around that would have forever killed the popularity of both boxers. It is not likely Fulton's British experience will be as profitable as he figured it would be. It is understood he had three engagements cancelled on him following his first bout.

With the Major Leagues

Organized baseball will have to mend its ways, enforce reforms that have been promised for years, or have those reforms forced upon it.

I am in position to state that, within the last fortnight, a move has been inaugurated that will result in a complete reformation of the game. I am not, for the present, at liberty to state the names of those behind the reformation movement, but they have the power and they have the money to go through with it to the finish.

As I understand their present plans, they will give organized baseball ample opportunity to enforce certain changes and will offer a schedule of the reforms that will be insisted upon. Of all the alterations suggested, only one is new. The others are things that organized baseball has been promising to do for several years—and has failed annually to do. I am pledged not to reveal what the reforms are—but I have, in the past, written and listed all save one.

Is Big Stickler.

That one is a big stickler. There is no doubt in my mind that the baseball powers will fight it, and oddly enough not because they consider it wrong, but because to adopt it would be a practical admission of guilt in the past. That the great majority of owners would indorse it vigorously is certain. They are for the principle, but would not like to admit that a need for such a ruling actually exists.

I understand that the persons behind the reform either will present their ultimatum to the major leagues at the winter meeting, or have already done so. I tried yesterday to talk with the club owner to discover whether the ultimatum had been received and he scoffed at the idea that anyone not actively connected with the game can force the owners to do anything. In fact, he stated that frankly, while hedging to the extent of admitting that reforms are needed. He will be among the first to join the reform movement when he discovers what is back of it.

The idea is entirely new. It comes from men who have no financial interest in baseball, but who love the sport. In a way their interests are affected. The events of the last world's series brought them together for selfprotection. The club owners and major league officials may imagine that they can run their business to suit themselves, but they haven't a chance with this power against them. The movement was, until a few days ago, confined to one city, but is spreading rapidly.

Old-Timers Organize.

Chicago is taking a big step in the right direction in sport. The sixty-niners of baseball are preparing a huge celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the famous old White Stockings. The veterans who played in the amateur clubs of sixty-nine or who were fans in those days, have been called together and the old-time baseball players will dine and form a permanent organization.

Such organizations have flourished in Boston, which really was the cradle of baseball (after Brooklyn) and during the excitement of winning the world's championship the veterans of Cincinnati's lots and bottoms organized to pay honor to the famous old Red Stockings.

Years ago we had an old-timer's day in Chicago. Few of us imagined that the call for such a meeting would bring so general a response. We had a room ready to accommodate fifty persons and more than three hundred attended. The veterans attended a game at the South Side park, nearly five hundred of the mangle-fingered old boys who battled when baseball was in its infancy.

We think now of baseball as prosperous and great because of the big attendance at major league games. In sixty-nine nearly thirty thousand persons paid to see a game at Dexter park—where the Chicago stockyards now are, traveling there afoot, on horse-back and in carriages to see the White Sox play. There were then half a dozen teams in the little city by the lake that challenged the right of the White Stockings to the city title. Every section of the city had a team that ranked high.

Every city ought to have its organization of old-timers. If you want to see the old boys slough off the years and become kids again just get together the fellows who played ball on the same team forty or fifty years ago and listen.

All Night Argument.

There was a funny incident some years ago during a meeting of the old-timers of Chicago. Em Gross, who was one of the great catchers for Providence and Philadelphia, and who ranked with Ewing and Kling, those big rangy backstops, one of the Wilkes boys who is wealthy, Cherokee Fisher, a famous old pitcher, and Nat Hudson, another famous player of his day, got into an argument about a play that happened along in the early seventies in a game between the Lakeviews and the Dreadnaughts. They argued for an hour and refused to give in to each other. Finally someone remembered that Byron Clark, who later became a great pitcher with Fort Wayne and Chicago, and who won even more renown by discovering John Clarkson, was scorer for the Lakeviews before he was old enough to play on the team. So the entire bunch climbed into a taxi, rode miles up the North Side, and waked Clark at midnight.

When they explained the argument, Clark dug through trunks in a storeroom until he found the old score book, and that bunch stayed there until daylight, reading the scores and talking of old days.

The path of the minor leagues, now that they have accomplished home rule and thrown off the "yoke" of the national commission, is not all smooth. Al Tearney, who was took in addition the presidency of president of the Three-I and who the Western when Dickenson went to France, is making plans for the enlargement and solidifying of the old Three-Is. Dickenson, meantime, is organizing a new Central league. He has six cities lined up and two others tentatively on the list. It is reported that Tearney and Dickenson's leagues will clash in two cities where territorial rights have been in suspension.

Without a national agreement who shall decide?

Bonner Was Spiked.

Captain Pete Bonner was spiked in the foot by one of the very discourteous Vandy players, and though he is still walking around with the aid of a stick, it is thought that the "Towering Blonde" will be seen in the very thick of the fight next Saturday. With Pete out of the line-up, the whole Auburn line will be weakened to a very appreciable extent, as the sorrel-topped leader is probably the hardest fighter on a southern gridiron today, and his eternal fighting spirit is contageous enough to be caught by his co-workers.

A new star sprung into the limelight in the game last Saturday, but he too is on the list of the injured. This one is "Babe" Williamson, a halfback who was put in the game in the place of Howard last Saturday, and shared with Scott the laurels of the day. Williamson has been on the squad all season, but the Vandy game was his first real chance to shine. He took full advantage of the opportunity, and in only one instance during the time he played was he stopped without gain, and that time he was halted on the line of scrimmage. He broke away for 9, 11 and 12-yard gains, and played a great all-around game. He received a injury to his shoulder, and it is feared that he will not be able to participate in the game Saturday.

Howard Is Crippled.

Red Howard is still somewhat of a cripple, first receiving the injury some two weeks ago, and then injuring himself further by violent contact with the supine form of Josh Cody. He is improving each day, however, and should be his old self by the end of the week.

One of the bright features of the game last Saturday was the great punting shown by Rodney Ollinger, who was called on when Red Howard was forced to leave the fray. Ollinger, who at present is putting up a great game at end, gets his punts off in beautiful fashion, and his distance compared favorably with that of Gore, the long Vandy booter. Once Ollinger kicked for seventy yards, and only once did his kicks fall below the 50-yard mark. This was all done with a heavy, slippery, water-logged ball.

Secret practice is being held, and only on Wednesday and Friday may the students see the Orange and Blue in action. The followers of the destinies of the Plainsmen are expecting something new in the Georgia game, a dazzling aerial attack, and some trick plays that have not characterized Auburn football to any great extent in the past few years.

A special train will be run to the Electric City Saturday, and every student, except those physically unable to make the trip, will be in Columbus on Saturday, if they have to start out two days in advance of the team and walk. The band will accompany the team and there should be some real demonstrations of college spirit that only an Auburn student body can exhibit.

Fraee Not Worried OverRuth'sDemand For Salary Raise

Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox, is not worrying over the reported demands of Babe Ruth for an increase in salary for next season. The Red Sox magnate says he has had a talk with his famous slugging batsman, and feels confident everything will be fine when Babe is called to report next spring.

Those who have directed their energies toward making it appear Ruth would have trouble with the Boston owner over the salary question, declare the home-run manufacturer has learned how easy it is to get away from the Boston club through the Carl Mays case, and unless his demands are granted he will break the ties that bind him to the Beantown and get with an organization that will pay him a big salary.

Frazee's manner in discussing the affair recently would tend to prove that the Boston magnate does not anticipate trouble with Ruth. He says Ruth and Mays cannot be compared, because they are two entirely different personalities, and that Ruth has always exhibited a sense of fairness which Mays did not know or would not recognize.

Last season Ruth received a salary of $9,500, with a substantial bonus for breaking the world's home-run record. "Ruth will be taken care of before the 1920 season opens,' said Frazee, "and I am satisfied he will be contented with our offer."

Frazee made it plain that he would not and could not give Ruth $20,000 per season. But he also stated he would give Ruth a substantial increase, with privilege of a bonus, which, he says, is Ruth's favorite way of working. "Babe Ruth likes to get what is his due, and he knows he will get it here," said Frazee. "Ruth is what I call a good business man, and he likes to work on a basis that will net him an increase according to what he does to earn an increase."

Frazee is perhaps better able to deal with temperamental individuals than any magnate in either of the major leagues. He made his fortune in the theatrical business, where temperamental workers reign almost supreme, yet the Boston magnate has never had any serious trouble to handle the stars whom other managers tossed over after a battle that taxed their patience as well as their bank roll. Frazee says none of the critics know Babe Ruth as well as he does, so he is not worrying.

Petrels Are Working For Maryville Game With Might and Main

By Bob Nicholes.

Each afternoon finds the Oglethorpe Petrels hard at work on their Silver Lake campus. If hard work is what it will take to give them the verdict over Maryville college Saturday in Maryville, Tenn., they should already have the game won.

Coach Anderson is driving his warriors hard for this game, as he realizes that it is the first big battle his boys have faced this season.

To state that Maryville has a first-class aggregation goes without saying. The Mountaineers held University of Tennessee to a score of 27 to 33 and trounced Cumberland, 34 to 0. The one game with Tennessee, argues that they have a strong team.

But the Petrels are hopeful of victory, and, in fact, believe they have a chance to cop all the remaining games on their schedule, provided they put up the caliber of football that they have shown at times. They have hard stones to overturn, though, in Sewanee and the University of Florida.

The Petrels will leave here for Maryville Friday morning at 6:40, so that the men will get a good night's rest before the game Saturday.

RHEUMATISM
CAN NOT BE CURED

BY RUBBING WITH LINIMENTS AND OINTMENTS.

If you are one of the many thousand victims of torturing Rheumatism, make up your mind today that you will abandon your efforts to rub the disease away with liniments, lotions, ointments, and local applications. Such treatment by itself is not only futile and devoid of results, but is a waste of time, during which the disease is getting a firmer hold on your system.

Rheumatism is a stubborn disease. It is not on the surface, therefore you must not expect to be able to cure it with remedies applied to the surface. No one ever yet effected a permanent cure in this way, so why should you continue to suffer while relying upon treatment that has failed in thousands of cases?

The experience of others afflicted with Rheumatism is your best guide, and by following their advice you can not only save yourself untold suffering, but rid yourself of a disease that will eventually wreck your body and leave you helpless. Almost every victim of Rheumatism has practically the same experience. They are so impressed with the pains and suffering of the disease and are so anxious to get rid of them that they have treated the pains alone, and overlooked their cause. They have rubbed with liniments, lotions and ointments in an effort to get temporary relief, with no chance of doing themselves any permanent good.

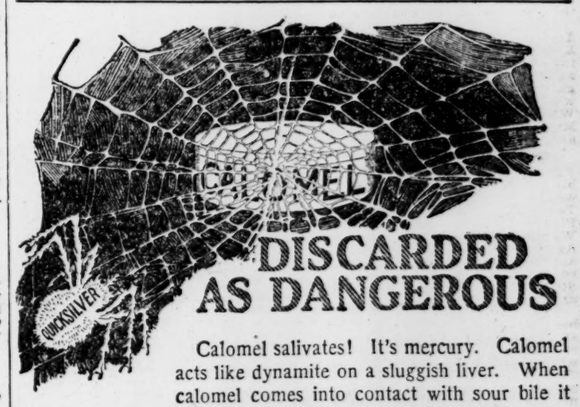

Such was the experience of Mr. Caspus Bibb, of 2424 Tenth Avenue, Bessemer, Ala., who writes to tell how he found relief from this terrible affliction. He says:

"A few years ago I suffered from a severe attack of articular Rheumatism that rendered me almost helpless. By the use of the usual external remedies I was able to check the pain somewhat, but did not regain the full use of my limbs, and on cloudy days or when exposed to dampness or cold I would immediately suffer from stiff and aching joints. I began to take S. S. S. and all symptoms at once began to disappear, until now I have no fear of exposure to the worst sort of weather. I feel it my duty to recommend S. S. S. to all who wish to free themselves from the torturing clutches of Rheumatism."

Physicians now agree that many forms of Rheumatism are caused by a germ in the blood. The pain is not the disease itself, but merely a symptom—nature's warning to you that you have been attacked. The only intelligent treatment, therefore, is through the blood; treatment directed toward eliminating the disease germ from the blood. For years nearly all the prescriptions used by the medical profession were those containing iodide of potash or mercurial substances, but in nearly every case these minerals are more injurious to the system than the disease itself.

One reason why S. S. S. is so successful in the treatment of Rheumatism and other blood disorders is the fact that it is a purely vegetable remedy, being made from roots and herbs gathered direct from the forests. It contains not a particle of mineral substance, and acts by driving disease germs from the blood and cleansing it of all impurities. S. S. S. has been on the market for fifty years, and almost every druggist has sold it ever since he has been in business. It is sold under an absolute guarantee that it is purely vegetable.

Our medical department is maintained for the benefit of the afflicted, and if you will write fully about your case you will be given complete advice as to the treatment necessary for your individual case, for which no charge is made. DISCARDED AS DANGEROUS

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead!

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It is harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

New York, October 29.—The big advance of yesterday was followed by nervous and irregular fluctuations in the cotton market today. Spot and crop news continued bullish, but there was evidently a disposition to take profits on long contracts in advance of the government crop report on Friday and prices were generally lower.

January sold off from 36.10 to 35.55 and closed at 35.61, with the general list closing irregular at a net decline of 12 to 40 points.

Liverpool was better than due, but the weather map failed to show the expected killing temperatures in the western belt, which was a disappointment to buyers of yesterday. The market opened irregular in consequence with near months 2 to 24 points higher while late deliveries were 5 to 25 points lower.

The near positions made new high records with December selling at 37.00 and March worked up to 35.20 during the early trading, but the bulges met increased offerings and the lowest prices of the day were reached in the last trading when December sold at 36.48 and March at 34.80, with active months showing net declines of 24 to 47 points.

Late reports from the labor situation were considered less encouraging and probably contributed to the afternoon break, but there seemed to be no other special news factor in evidence. Reports that German interests have purchased 500,000 bales of cotton of the better grades in this country since the beginning of August were considered an exaggeration of the actual business by local shippers.

A continued active demand from one source or another was reported in the southern spot markets, however, while the rains in central and western belt sections also promoted trade buying and some fresh commission houses demand the declines.

LIQUIDATION LOWERS NEW ORLEANS MARKET

New Orleans, October 29.—Liquidation was felt by cotton during the greater part of today's session and it worked against values, holding them down in the face of reports of a good spot demand, with prices higher at several spot centers of the south. These spots were marked 50 points up to 38.50 for middling, while contracts closed at net losses of 12 to 30 points. December standing at 36.84 on the close.

Contracts were 15 to 34 points up around the opening, in sympathy with a much higher Liverpool than due, but liquidation soon set in and it carried the trading months 22 to 43 points under the last prices of yesterday, at the lowest level of the day.

The selling out on the long side was due almost entirely to the failure of the cold wave to sweep over any portion of the cotton region. Much buying was done yesterday on the fear that this morning's weather map would have both frost and freezing temperatures on it.

Too much rain fell in the western belt, but it was ignored while the very unfavorable weekly crop accounts from the government and a private bureau report on condition to October 25 to 46 per cent of a normal indicating a crop of 9,437,000 bales, hardly more than steadied the market.

Summary for the Cotton Region States.

New Orleans, La., October 29.—Day temperatures were 10 to 15 degrees below the sensonal average in Arkansas, Oklahoma and northern Texas, but the minimum temperatures in that section are only 2 to 10 degrees below normal, with lowest ranging from 34 to 42 degrees in Oklahoma. Temperatures continued 4 to 18 degrees above the normal elsewhere. Light to moderate rains were quite generally distributed in Texas. Arkansas and Oklahoma, with several locally heavy rains in the latter state. A few showers occurred in Louisiana and the southern portions of Mississippi and Alabama. Heavy rains: Oklahoma, Ada 1.80, Lawton 1.14.—Cline.

Summary of Weather and Crop Conditions in the Cotton Belt for the Week Ending October 28, 1919.

Washington, D. C., October 29.—Very hot weather and moderate to considerable precipitation characterized the weather of the week in the cotton belt, which in general was very unfavorable for cotton. Progress in picking was poor in nearly all sections, and in places ceased entirely. Considerable rainfall and deficient sunshine caused moderate to considerable damage in all except the most eastern states, causing bolls to decay, seeds to sprout, and discoloration to open cotton. The progress of the late crop in North Carolina was about normal, but elsewhere in northern districts it deteriorated. Truck crops were benefited by rains in most of the southeastern states, but it continued too wet in the west gulf states. —Marvin.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, October 29.—(Special.)—Liverpool was again higher today on further rains in the western belt, although the expected frost did not materialize. On the opening here a great deal of cotton was sold, the idea being that as frost had failed to appear it was well to take profits after the recent sharp advance. The offerings were fairly well absorbed, but, as no frost outside buying appeared, prices eased off. The weekly weather report was unfavorable, but failed to stimulate outside buying. In fact, the south was a pretty free seller of hedges during the entire day. Many feel that the market is high enough for the moment, and, as has so often happened this year, a sharp reaction might occur at any moment.

HUBBARD BROS & CO.

New York, October 29.—(Special.)—The reaction in the cotton market was a natural one, in view of the rapidity of the recent advance, but there were no changes in the forces which are behind its ultimate advance. The government's weekly report was one of crop destruction rather than of deterioration. Interior spot prices were maintained as were the prices representing them in the contract markets. General speculation is small and most of the buying today was for account of spinners. The labor situation has improved to the extent that the chiefs of organization are fearful of the public sentiment which is so pronounced against their destructive program. J. W. JAY & CO.

New York, October 29.—(Special.)—Some liquidation in the stock market and profit-taking in cotton by satisfied longs brought about an easier feeling, and the natural, perfectly natural, reaction resulted. In our opinion, the next crop estimate to be issued on Friday will change the views of many, and the popular estimate will be for a crop less than ten million. It is certain in time cotton will pay the producers and patient investors. CLARK & CO.

New York, October 29.—(Special.)—As the expected killing frost in the northwestern portion of the belt did not materialize last night, this induced some liquidation. Furthermore, liquidation was also influenced by the condition report to be published at noon on October 31. This report should show a falling off in condition of 2 to 4 per cent, but regardless of what it shows, the situation will not be changed as to the small yield and the very poor grades. This, coupled with futures selling at a disparity with southern markets and prominent longs holding steadfastly to their position, gives strength to the belief that the present small recession is temporary.

ORVIS BROTHERS & CO.

NEW ORLEANS LETTER.

New Orleans, October 29.—(Special.)—The market had an easy undertone in the early trading today as the result of extensive liquidation from the long side, but toward the end became steadier, plainly showing the effect of continued reports of a good spot demand. The selling from the long side was stimulated because of a better map than expected, no low temperatures being reported anywhere in the cotton region. Liverpool was once more sensationally good on contracts and reported sales of 15,000 bales on the spot. The weekly crop accounts from the government could hardly have been written in a more unfavorable vein. The American Cotton association is out with condition figures of 46 per cent to October 25, indicating a crop of 9,437,000 bales.

REPORT ON STEEL FEATURES STOCKS

This Offset Later by Another Flurry in Money and Refusal to Rescind Mine Strike.

New York, October 29.—The favorable quarterly report of the United States Steel corporation was the foremost influence during the early and intermediate stages of today's stock market.

These were offset in the later dealings, however, by another flurry in money and the news that the United Mine Workers had refused to rescind their strike order.

The vagaries of the money market were reflected in an opening rate of 9 per cent, that quotation prevailing until the final hour, when 12 per cent was demanded, from which a drop to 4½ per cent occurred, the final rate being five per cent.

Steels and equipments were the most active features of the session, but they were overshadowed by the strength of oils, shippings and sugar shares, in which several new records and sensational gains were made.

Texas company led all others at a gain of 31 points to 340, losing only a point at the close. Cuban-American Sugar and South Porto Rico Sugar scored extreme advances of 39 and 24 points, respectively, and United Fruit made a vigorous spurt of 19 points with 7 for Atlantic Gulf.

Republic again led the steels, rising over 7 points to the new maximum of 125⅜, but the greater part of this advance was cancelled in the heavy selling of that entire division just before the end. United States Steel closing at fractional loss.

Worthington Pump, Savage Arms, General Motors, Continental Can and several of the tobacco issues had their periods of strength, but popular miscellaneous specialties were dull or heavy.

Liberty issues were the only exception to the easier trend of the bond market, the 3½'s again mounting to 101. Total sales, par value, aggregated $12,250,000. Old United States coupon 4's declined ½ on sale; others were unchanged.

Wall Street Disturbed Over Money Situation

New York, October 29.—As the result of the admission made by Fitzpatrick in this morning's papers that the steel strike was a failure, the traders bought stocks this morning. During the early trading American Sugar was up 1⅛ points, American Tobacco 1½, Lackawanna Steel 12½, Baldwin 2¾, Republic Iron and Steel 3½, General Motors 4. During the first hour Republic Steel was the leader, with a gain of 4¾ points.

When the renewal rate of 9 per cent for call loans was published in the second hour, prices began to decline, showing losses of from 1 to 3½ points. Then there was a recovery, followed by an irregular price movement.

Today speculative Wall street was in the frame of mind to believe that the big rise of 1919 was over. Traders who have been talking higher prices right along were saying today that spectacular advances might occur in specialties such as the advances reported today in the sugar stocks, but it was added with a shake of the head that 20-point advances throughout the list were over for this year. How long this frame of mind will continue is uncertain. It is certain, however, that Wall street is again disturbed over the situation in the money market.

Banks Loaned Up.

In that connection it was pointed out today that banks here were already loaned up, and that the banks would have to take most of the foreign loans unless the public showed more interest than at present in this financing. Bankers here are preparing to make a trip to Washington to convince government officials that the government must reverse its decision not to take any part in helping to float the foreign loans which are to help war-ridden Europe get on its feet. Unless this is done, bankers here are declaring this winter will see anarchy in Italy, Germany and France and other European countries.

So far the federal reserve board has taken the stand that it is a mistake to try to keep our exports up to the war-time high records, as that course would mean that we would be bidding against ourselves for the necessities of life. The federal reserve board is in favor of letting up on exports and increasing imports. It is also in favor of having the government keep its hands off in the matter of foreign loans, now that the war is over, and of letting private capital most interested in the export business do whatever financing is needed.

Wall Street Gossip.

Canada is now making its sixth and last war-time government loan. The amount of bonds being offered is $300,000,000, and the interest rate is 5½ per cent. Inasmuch as the fifth loan floated in November of last year was for $300,000,000, while subscriptions were received for $610,000,000, it is believed the offering now being made will be largely oversubscribed. The new loan is being offered at 100 and interest. There are two classes of bonds, one running five years and the other fifteen years.

Announcement was made today that a special meeting of the shareholders of the Studebaker corporation had been called for November 24, to vote on the proposition of the directors to increase the authorized common stock from $30,000,000 to $75,000,000. If a favorable vote is given by the shareholders, which is expected, 15,000 shares of the new stock will be offered to the shareholders at 105. The new stock sold on the curb today "when issued" at 120. Proceeds from the sale of the new stock will be used to retire the $15,000,000 7 per cent serial notes running to 1929.

Predicts Solution.

Guy Tripp, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric company, who has just returned from Europe, made the prediction today that this country would shortly solve the labor troubles now disturbing both capital and labor. "Neither labor organizations nor capitalistic combinations can long resist the opinion of the majority," he said. "Our people as a whole are quick to determine which side is in the wrong. Their judgment has now crystalized to a point where radical union leaders can expect little sympathy. England has turned the corner in its labor troubles, because the people are beginning to feel the pinch and tremendously tired of being imposed upon."

Directors of the Savage Arms corporation met today and declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent.

Shrewd traders on the stock exchange floor reported today that there was no longer mass buying of stocks by the public.

Receive Gold Shipment.

Receipt of $700,000 gold from England by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. represented the completion of one of those curious operations in Transvaal gold which were made possible by the depreciation of sterling exchange at New York. The metal was shipped to New York bankers, by Rothschild, of London, the New York house merely acting as agent in this connection, according to a statement made today. The fact that sterling is approximately 15 per cent depreciated does not indicate by any means that the bankers were able to make a profit of 15 per cent. They had to bid a slight premium over the price offered by countries where sterling was only slightly less depreciated than in the United States. Thus, if sterling exchange in India were at a discount of approximately 13 per cent New York would have to bid, say 13½ per cent over the parity of gold. Their profit would be represented by the difference between 13½ and 15 per cent, less whatever transportation charges had to be met.

Call loans renewed on the stock exchange at 9 per cent this morning and afterwards went to 12, despite the fact that the rate fell away sharply at the close yesterday, dropped to 4½ today before the close. After the market closed on Tuesday it was reported that about $1,500,000 had been offered by the banks, with no takers. There is no incentive for a broker to borrow money on call for which he has no immediate need, since he may find the rate raised at next day's renewal. With the stiffening of call loan rates, brokers are again trying to borrow on time. Bids were made today at 7 per cent, with little money to be had at that figure.

Many Favorable Factors.

There were many favorable factors in the news developments of the day to account for the early strength in the steel shares, but the most important one possibly was the reports coming from the west indicating a firmer tendency to steel prices. From Youngstown it is stated that all grades of steel were commanding from $4 to $6 a ton above previous quotations. Some western independents are commanding a premium of $13 per ton, and it is stated that one mill has taken orders for steel rails at a price of $49 per ton, which is $2 above the recent price.

The sharp upward movement of corn products to a new high record today is possibly in recognition of the favorable statement of earnings published during the latter part of last week. That report showed that the company in the first nine months of the current year earned more than $17 per share on the common stock, and, according to current gossip, earnings for the last quarter of the year will be larger than any of the previous quarters. The stock started to move upward following the publication of the earnings, but the movement was checked on Saturday, when the coal strike situation brought about heavy liquidation in the stock market.

Silver again moved upward today to the highest price in the last century. The price of the metal in this market is officially quoted at $1.23¼ per ounce. Certain local banks were willing to pay $1.25 for all the metal that could be had. This had a decided effect on the prices of stocks of silver-producing companies, the shares of the United States Smelting and Refining company advancing to a new high record. Ontario silver, which has long been dormant, started upward today.

Sugar.

New York, October 29.—There was no change in the local raw sugar prices, which are quoted at 7.28 for centrifugal to the refiner. The demand for new crops was more active today and sales of 20,000 to 25,000 bags for January shipments were reported.

Holders were firm in their views and prices were well maintained, with January shipments offered at 8c, first half February at 7¾ and second half February, March, April, May and June at 7½c, all f.o.b. Cuba.

In refined, there was a little better feeling and refiners were said to be operating about 50 per cent. Some allotments were made through the committee, indicating more liberal deliveries on account of the larger meltings, which during the past week amounted to 53,000 tons, against 36,000 a week ago. Receipts, however, were smaller, probably on account of the harbor difficulties, aggregating only 43,464 tons, against 60,309 tons a week ago. Prices were unchanged at 9 cents for fine granulated.

CORN UP ON RUMOR OF GERMAN CREDIT

Close Was Steady at Net Advance of 7-8 to 2 1-2 Cents—Oats and Provisions Also Gain.

Chicago, October 29.—Reports that a $50,000,000 credit had been negotiated between New York financial interests and eGrmany had much influence today as a strengthening factor in the grain and provision markets.

Corn closed steady at 7⅞ to 2½c net advance. Oats up ¼@⅜ to ½c, and provisions unchanged to 77c higher.

Gossip about the supposed big loan to Germany led to assumptions that the German nation would would purchase freely of American foodstuffs. Considerale investment buying of corn here as welf as extensive covering on the part of shorts ensued. Notwithstanding that disclaimers weer received from New York as to any knowledge of such a loan, the market went upward and at no time showed any important reaction.

Aside from reports of a loan to Germany, the chief bullish factors were wet weather predictions and the scantiness of receipts. A decided fresh upturn in the value of hogs was a further stimulus to would-be owners of corn.

Oats weer firmer with corn. Eastern demand was active and there was no prospect of an increase in supplies from rural sources.

Nearly all deliveries of provisions made a sharp upturn in prices. More active domestic demand for packing house products was noted and the trade gave due attention to the German loan reports.

ESTIMATE IN BALES WILL NOT BE GIVEN IN REPORT ON CROPS

By J. H. Benton.
(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—The crop condition report to be published on Friday next will not contain an estimate in bales. Senator William J. Harris complained to the bureau of crop estimates in behalf of several Georgia organizations, but the bureau said it was impossible to make a report in bales. They sent the following telegram to several organizations in Georgia:

"At request Senator Harris advise condition of cotton is reported regularly each month from May 25 to September 25 in terms of percentage of normal. What normal condition on particular date signifies in terms of yield per acre is calculated from experienec of past years by comparing average of the condition estimate for a series of yers with final outturn of crop in same series of years.

Thus it is necessary to have reports for a series of years as of a particular date before an interpretation in pounds can be made from condition estimate of such date. In past no reports have been made as to condition of the cotton crop as of October 25, therefore there is no basis for determining relation of condition on that date to final estimate of yield per acre. Attention directed to fact that prior to 1915 cotton condition figures were not interpreted by department in terms of pounds or bales and such condition figures without quantative interpretation weer acceptable."

German Newspaper Announces Coming $500,000,000 Credit

Berlin, October 29.—Die post says that while official action on the part of the government with regard to American credits has not yet been undertaken, because the peace treaty is still unratified, German financial circles have been negotiating for some time with American banks and actually have had some success, since they have received important credits from American firms which have been very accommodating.

The newspaper adds that whether the German government will be granted a loan in the United States naturally is very doubtful under present circumstances and is hardly to be thought of. Rather it is a question for private persons.

It is certain, Die Post continues, that contracts following individual negotiations, have guaranteed a $500,000,000 credit expiring in the spring in which 22 New York banks and three American firms will participate.

Leaf Tobacco Held By Manufacturers Shown on Decrease

Washington, October 29.—Leaf tobacco held by manufacturers and dealers October 1, 1919, aggregated 1,263,760,070 pounds as compared with 1,627,233,876 on April 1, 1919, the census bureau announced today.

This figure included the following: Chewing, smoking, snuff and export types, 891,633,932 pounds, as compared with 1,255,860,264 on April 1; cigar types, 302,972,044 pounds as with 303,565,869; and imported types, 69,163,094 pounds, as compared with 67,798,743.

WAR LOAN DECLINES ON LONDON MARKET

(The Constitution—London Times — Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

London, October 29.—The most satisfactory feature in the stock markets today was further appreciable decline in war loan and Victory bonds. Home railway securities were a better market and foreign railway stocks continued to meet with support. Weakness of exchange adversely affected French loans. There was some profit-taking in oil shares, but the demand for rubber shares continued. Liverpool and London and Globe insurance shares rose 5 points on an offer to purchase, and shipping securities showed strength. The tendency of the market in South African gold shares was harder, but Diamond shares were subjected to profit-taking sales.

Money was rather more wanted, there being good demand for short loans at 3½ per cent during the early hours.

Towards the close the tendency became easier, balances being placed at 3 per cent. Discount rates continued to harden, the demand for bills being less keen. Banks were buyers of December bills at the higher quotation of 3¾ per cent. New York exchange was less favorable, the rate closing at $4.16¼.

Owing to the fact that we are going out of the truck business, we offer at a large discount a few popular New Motor Trucks.

DAMAGE TO COTTON BY RAIN REPORTED BY CROP BULLETIN

Washington, October 29.—The weather generally was unfavorable for cotton during the week closing yesterday, according to the national weather and crop review of crop conditions. Unseasonably high temperatures and moderately heavy rainfall characterized the weather of the week in nearly the whole of the cotton belt, although rainfall was light in some extreme eastern localities, and in parts of Texas.

Picking was delayed by rainy weather in most sections of the belt and virtually was suspended in many localities, although good progress was made in South Carolina. More or less damage resulted to cotton in all except the more eastern states by too much rain nd cloudy weather, causing bolls to decay, seed to sprout and discoloration in open, unpicked cotton.

SIX BODIES RECOVERED FROM SHIP'S WRECKAGE

Muskegon, Mich., October 29.—Search of the wreckage of the lake steamer Muskegon, which pounded to pieces in a gale and sank in Muskegon harbor yesterday, and investigation by Crosby Line officials today brought the probable death list to 24. Fourteen are known to have lost their lives and six bodies have been recovered.

It is possible, the purser declared, that the passenger list may have been even larger by reason of some persons traveling on return tickets sold at Muskegon, or on passes. This can only be established through relatives or friends, for the ship's register was lost.

Divers and coast guards spent today searching the hull, which lies in 50 feet of water and combing the shores of the lake for additional bodies, but none were found. Tomorrow officials will drag the bottom of the channel and another search will be made of the wreckage.

COUNTESS ADDRESSES SAVANNAH MEETINGS

Savannah, Ga., October 29.—(Special.)—Countess Turcznowicz, author of "When the Prussians Came to Poland," made two stirring addresses in Savannah today, first to the Rotary club at its weekly luncheon and another to the public this evening, in the interest of the Red Cross, the drive for the annual roll call being set for its start on November 2. C. Lucian Jones today was registered as the first member for 1920 of the Savannah Red Cross chapter, of which J. Randolph Anderson is the chairman this year.

Cairo, Egypt, Saturday, October 25.—Shouts of "We don't want the Milner commission" interrupted a band playing "God Save the King," at the public gardens yesterday, giving the signal for a nationalist demonstration. The trouble was quelled by the authorities who placed a number of students under arrest.

It was announced in London some time ago that the government was considering sending to Egypt a special commission headed by Viscount Milner, secretary for the colonies, in order to ascertain what changes were necessary in the constitution of the protectorate.

The entertainment has been arranged by the Christian Endeavor society of the church and the "spooky" spirit of Hallowe'en will be manifested in every feature of the evening's fun. Besides many unique games in keeping with the Hallowe'en season, the committee has provided some interesting readings, songs, etc., to be furnished by splendid talent. All members of the church, and especially the young people of the church, are cordially invited. Any who are interested in the Christian Endeavor society are given a special invitation.

EX-GERMAN PRINCES VISIT IN HOLLAND

Amerongen, Holland, October 29. (By the Associated Press.)—Three sons of the former German emperor are now in Holland. Former Prince Oscar arrived last night from Germany to spend a few days at Bentinck castle with his father. August departed from Amerongen today for Wieringen for a several days' visit to the one-time crown prince, who is residing there, prior to returning to Germany.

The Dutch government is permitting these visits largely in order to lighten the burden of former Empress Auguste Victoria, who is said to find separation from her family her greatest trouble.

'TIGER' TO RETIRE FROM PUBLIC LIFE

French Premier Says Advancing Age and Health Compel His Return to Private Life.

Paris, October 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—In replying to the request that he stand as candidate for the chamber of deputies to represent Bas Rhin (lower Rhine, a French department, which was formerly the district of lower Alsace) Premier Clemenceau has written a letter in which he says:

"I am more touched than I can say by the friendly offer that I be the successor of Gambetta. I would accept with pride this high post of honor had I not been warned by too many signs that the time has come for me to take the repose I have not known for a long time. The age I had reached when the vast joy of victory came and the state of health which followed, oblige me to retire from political life."

Premier Clemenceau's refusal to stand as a candidate for the chamber of deputies, is regarded as conclusive evidence of his unswerving determination to retire from political life immediately after the elections. There has been much incredulity expressed concerning the sincerity of the premier's decision to retire. His political foes were earnestly desirous and his friends were alarmed both refusing to believe the announcement as official until it was confirmed yesterday. The political opponents of the premier had caused a rumor to be widely circulated throughout the electioneering campaign that M. Clemenceau's ambition was toward the presidency of the French republic despite the premier's repeated refusals to allow his name to be put forward by his friends. A few days ago the premier told friends that he desired to travel in Egypt during the coming winter.

"I don't wish to die without seeing the pyramids," he said. "After 44 years of political life, my hour of rest has come. I am thankful to have lived long enough to see victory wipe out the terrible memory of 1870, which had grieved me for more than 40 years."

Atlanta Again Thanked For Hospitality Shown Confederate Veterans

Atlanta's efforts at giving the confederate veterans the time of their lives when they visited us in the early part of the month were repaid then by the joy of observing their joy, and by the expressions that they rendered of their gratitude.

But wholesome gratitude finds constant expression, it seems, for The Constitution is in receipt of a copy of a resolution passed by the Frank Cheatham Camp, No. 35, of United Confederate veterans, of Nashville, in which Atlanta is again abundantly thanked for her many kindnesses to Nashville's quota of heroes in gray that assembled here for the reunion.

This reiteration of appreciation, one of many that Atlanta has received through various channels, follows in full:

At a largely attended meeting of Frank Cheatham camp, No. 35, of Nashville, Tenn., held on Saturday, October 25, 1919, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

"Whereas, the city of Atlanta, Ga., invited the United Confederate veterans to meet there, on October 7-10, 1919; and

"Whereas, said invitation was accepted, and we, and a large number of other confederate soldiers, did attend the reunion; and

"Whereas, we were elegantly and sumptuously entertained—especially by the fair daughters and mothers of the old south, and they never tired in their hospitality; therefore,

"Resolved, by Frank Cheatham camp, that its heartfelt thanks be and the same is hereby given Atlanta for its magnificent and generous entertainment; be it further

"Resolved, that a copy hereof be furnished The Atlanta Constitution, requesting its publication.

"W. H. RANDALL,
"Commandant.
"JOHN F. HICKMAN, Adjutant."

TWO KILLED IN RIOTS IN EGYPTIAN CITY

Alexandria, Egypt, Saturday, October 25.—Two rioters were killed and ten others injured and 27 policemen were hurt in a serious nationalist demonstration yesterday. The trouble arose when the police attempted to suppress a peaceable demonstration such as have recently been a weekly feature of political activity in Alexandria. Sticks, stones, bottles and police batons were first used.

The arrival of the governor of Alexandria restored order for a time. Then two motor lorries with troops appeared on the scene and eventually shots were fired at the crowd.

Today there was some recurrence of the trouble, at the harbor side, but it was of a comparatively minor character.

ALLIES WILL GET GERMAN WARSHIPS IN GOOD CONDITION

Buenos Aires, October 29.—The six German merchant ships which took refuge in Argentine ports during the war will be delivered to the allies in good condition. This decision is the result of diplomatic negotiations extending over several months to determine the fate of the interned steamships.

The ships are unable to proceed to sea under their own steam and Dutch tugs are therefore expected here soon to tow the vessels to Germany, where the machinery will be repaired. The ships will carry cargoes of Argentine products on the voyage to Germany.

FOUGHT 22 YEARS TO PROVE SANITY

New York, October 29. — John Armstrong Chalenor, recently victor in a 22-year fight to be declared sane in New York, is to go on the stage. He announced tonight that he was to appear in a Broadway production in his own play, "Robbery Under Law," written five years ago, as part of his crusade for lunacy law reform. Mr. Chaloner will take the part of the hero, Hugh Stuffield.

"The character and adventures of Hugh Stutfield," Mr. Chaloner said, "are photographs of myself and my experiences at the hands of the present iniquitous lunacy so-called law of the state of New York and some 40 per cent of the other states in this enlightened Union."

AUSTRIAN GENERALS FACE COMMISSION

Vienna, Tuesday, October 28.—Generals von Arz and Waddstaeten, of the Austrian army, who have been subjected to severe censure for ordering the cessation of hostilities on November 3, 1918, 30 hours before the armistice with Italy became effective, were heard today at a secret session of a commission appointed to investigate the allegations made against them.

It is claimed that the Italians concluded their offensive and captured more than 300,000 prisoners during the period mentioned, all Austrian posts having been ordered to stop firing.

Horn, who conducted his own defense, said he was a German officer and was acting under orders of the German government in war time.

MILL WORKERS STRIKE IN NORTH CAROLINA

Gastonia, N. C., October 29.—No change was reported today in the strike situation at the Loray mills here, where 700 employes walked out yesterday because the mill management refused to recognize the textile workers' union and also because of some minor differences with the superintendent of the mill.

It is stated the employees are not demanding higher wages nor a change in working hours. They are at present employed on the 55-hour basis, which was agreed upon some time ago, when demanded by the operatives.

CAMPAIGN TO SAVE 250,000 PLANNED

American Health Convention Launches Public Health Service to Reduce the Mortality in America.

New Orleans, October 29.—A public health service drive to save 250,000 lives in the United States in 1920 was launched here today at a meeting of the American health convention by Dr. Leslie L. Lumsden, of the public health service. He urged the convention to wage the drive in the same manner that the Liberty Loan, food conservation and Red Cross drives were pushed to success during the war.

Dr. Lumsden told the convention that "every civic and official body in the United States should begin at once to consider ways and means for this health drive," and said that the plans should be compleated during the next two months. He declared that such a health drive was not "fanciful" and said that the psychology of the United States today demands reconstruction to make up for the losses of the war.

Delay Disastrous.

"Estimates of the loss in blood and treasure caused by the world war stagger the imagination," Dr. Lumsden told the delegates. "Toward the end of the war a pandemic of influenza-pneumonia added its frightful quota of destruction. The number of persons killed within a few weeks in the United States by this pandemic exceeded more than tenfold the number of American soldiers who died from the results of wounds received on the battlefields of Europe. For good living to be restored, a great period of construction must follow this awful period of destruction. Every day's delay in the beginning of this program of construction is disastrous."

Dr. Lumsden declared that the world looks to the United States as the greatest single factor in the new era of reconstruction, but warned the conference that "the resources of the United States, although large, are not unlimited." He said that the most important of the nation's resources today is its human power, with which, he said, this country has always been prodigal.

For Business Basis.

The conservation of life and health in the United States should be placed on a strictly business basis, Dr. Lumsden declared. He advocated the public health service drive in 1920 as the first step toward such action. He pointed to the selective service law statistics as proof of the waste of human power in the United States in the past, declaring that more than 30 per cent of the men of the country between the ages of 21 and 31 were physically disqualified for military service under the draft requirements. Much of the disease discovered by medical examining boards during the draft process was, he said, easily preventable.

Dr. Lumsden plead for education of rural communities throughout the United States along health lines and declared that "in less than 2 per cent of the rural homes in the country are the sanitary conditons reasonably good in the most essential respects. Hook worm, malaria, typhoid fever, dystentery and tuberculosis are alarmingly prevalent in rural communities," he said.

Dr. Lumsden pointed to the results accomplished in the Panama canal zone and in army cantonments all over the country as evidences of what can be accomplished by a systematic campaign to conserve human life.

March Responsible For Death Orders, Declares Crowder

Washington, October 29.—General March, chief of staff, was held chiefly responsible before the senate military subcommittee today by Major General Enoch M. Crowder, judge advocate general, for recommendations that four soldiers in France sentenced to death on conviction of sleeping on post or disobedience of orders be executed. All four were pardoned by President Wilson, but General Crowder declared General March had refused to concur in recommendations for clemency made by Secretary Baker and himself.

General Crowder was answering the charge made by Samuel T. Ansell, former judge advocate general, that "the whole military heirarchy entered into an agreement that these men should die."

Secretary Baker "was receptive from the start to clemency," General Crowder said. "I know of no matter where there has been so much misapprehension," he added.

Admitting that he had never withdrawn his recommendation for execution General Crowder explained that it was based on legal grounds while the matter of clemency was outside his legal duties.

General Pershing and Lieutenant General Robert L. Bullard had urged execution for the purpose of enforcing discipline. General Crowder said in his recommendation approving the death penalty, he had "yielded to the judgment of a man (General March) who was fresh from the battle field."

"You don't believe in abrogating the death penalty in the army?" Senator Warren, republican, Wyoming asked.

"No, it's impossible," said General Crowder.

General Crowder concluded his statement today and the committee plans to call Secretary Baker next.

TURN DOWN REQUEST OF SENATOR HARRIS

By J. H. Benton.
(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—Senator William J. Harris has had his request for reduced rates on the railroads to attend the meeting in Atlanta on November 11 of the state memorial commission, turned down by the railroad administration, Judge Andrew J. Cobb, of Atlanta, the chairman of the commission, has been co-operating with the Georgia senator in the matter.

The first request was for reduced rates for all people attending the event and when this was declined the request was made for those people who had members of their families killed or died in the service.

The traffic director of the railroad administration writes Senator Harris: "In the matter of free or reduced rate transportation the railroad administration observes the provisions of the interstate commerce at which clearly does not permit of the granting of reduced rates unless the individuals referred to can be considered as objects of charity, which we do not understand to be true."

Chattanooga, Tenn., October 29.—Thomas S. Gardenhire, Jr., husband of Mrs. Maggie Gardenhire, who last night shot and killed her father-in-law, Thomas S. Gardenhire, Sr., arrived here today and, going to his wife, who is held by the police, pledged his support. He declares she was justified in killing his father.

Gardenhire told a pitiable story of the trouble leading up to the tragedy. Both husband and wife make sensational charges against the elder Gardenhire, as to how he had mistreated his daughter-in-law.

SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN TO AMERICAN NURSES

Washington, October 29.—American nurses to the number of 247, of whom 169 recently have been released from military service, have been granted post graduate scholarships by the American Red Cross to enable them to train in public health nursing, it was announced at national headquarters today.

This program was dictated by the scarcity of trained public health nurses throughout the country. Already $100,000 has been appropriated by the Red Cross for these scholarships and latest reports show $35,000 of the fund has been used, over two-thirds of which was granted to nurses returned from service.

The courses of training extend over periods of four, six, eight and nine months. In addition to the appropriation by the national organization, the work has been very largely supplemented by independent action on the part of subsidiary chapters of the Red Cross.

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Announce Wonderful New Feature.

The Long and Short of the Great Elephant Herd.

From the time the "quarter of a million pound" elephant act is presented along the length of the great hippodrome track, until the wonderful riding dog, Toque, performs his equestrian feats, there is scarcely a moment when the great, new Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circut program is not enlivened by remarkable animal exhibitions.

The elephant numbers are the most unusual ever attempted in a circus. There are six distinct herds of ponderous actors. These are exhibited as individual groups at first, but, at the conclusion of the number, are combined in one mammoth company so numerous that the entire length of the hippodrome is required to stage their gigantic performance. Picture a "pyramid" made up of six times as many elephants as were ever before used in a single grouping and you will have some idea of the immensity of this latest achievemetnt in animal subjugation. Thre increased size of the pachyderm acts may, it is said, be taken as an index by which to measure all numbers in which dumb actors participate. In place of the usual two troupes of seals, five will be exhibited. These ride horses, play upon fourteen different musical instruments, engage in basketball contests and perform feats of juggling which surpass human attainments. There are fifteen troupes of beautiful horses and knowing ponies that perform without bridles or riders. There are others that participate in remarkable statue numbers.

Added to these are trick monkeys, mules, goats, pigs, geese, cats, pigeons and more than a hundred wonderful dogs. There are one or more troupes of every wild and domestic animal known to the trainer's art. And each has its clown. The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows will exhibit here Monday, November 10, at Ponce de Leon baseball park.

MEXICAN SOLDIERS SHARE IN RANSOM

Carranza Government Declares Kidnaping Was Scheme to Arouse Hostile Sentiment in United States Against It.

By James A. Hollomon.
(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—Carranza soldiers were not only instrumental in the kidnaping of Consular Agent William O. Jenkins, but participated in the private ransom of $150,000 paid for his release.

Reports reaching Washington today that the Carranza government in Mexico claims the kidnaping at Puebla a fraud, instituted for the purpose of arousing sentiment in the United States against the present regime, have aroused official circles more keenly than did the original offense, for the reason that it is generally known here today that Carranza soldiers not only participated in the kidnaping, but in the spoils paid, by Jenkins' attorneys that resulted in his release.

Secretary Lansing today very firmly admitted that he did not believe Jenkins would lend himself to any scheme to discredit the Carranza government, and beside that, it may be stated, that the entire matter has been checked, from the hour of its first report to official Washington until the present, and it is known that the circumstances all through have been substantially as reported.

Every indication points to the conclusion that time for action as to the Mexican problem is rapidly approaching, and the question of intervention drawing to a showdown.

Sales of two large lots in Druid Hills featured Wednesday's real estate announcements.

Forrest and George Adair sold for Druid Hills to L. M. Morris, a large lot at East Lake drive and Durand's Mill road for $15,000.

This lot has irregular dimensions. The frontage is 210 feet and the depth 700, with greater width at the rear.

The same agency sold for Druid Hills to Judge S. C. Williams the southeast corner of Decatur and Springdale roads, a lot 10x380, for $5,000.

There is some speculation in real estate circles on just when the demand for vacant lots will come back. Just now there is practically none except for an occasional sale in some high-class subdivision. The cheap lot, as a sales item, seems to have disappeared and along with it the small house at a low price, except in certain cases where the house is an old one.

It has been six or seven years since there was much demand for lots. One vacant lot auction was held this year and it was a success, but it was the only one.

The high cost of building, of course, is chiefly to blame, and whether this cost will come down appreciably in the near or even distant future is a question that the agents seem to be unable to answer.

WHITE MAN IS FOUND SERIOUSLY STABBED

A. G. Ledford, a white man of about 30 years of age, was found in an unconsolous condition, stabbed several times about the abdomen and bleeding freely, at the corner of Houston street and Piedmont avenue, late Wednesday night.

The man was discovered by R. G. Parks, of 26 Lucile avenue, and E. A. Rauschenberg, who took him to Grady hospital. It is stated by officials at the hospital that he has very little chance for recovery.

The address of his mother, Mrs. Mary Ledford, 328 Bellwood avenue, was found upon his person, but as he is in such a critical condition it could not be found whether or not he lived with her.

The place where Ledford was found is in the very heart of a negro district. Officers McWilliams and Wood investigated the cutting, but until late last night no arrests had been made.

The slashes on his body have the apearance of razor slashes, several different slashes were made across his abdomen and a great amount of blood was lost before he was found.

GET PASSPORTS

Prominent Women to Study Foreign Mission Work.

By J. H. Benton.
(By Constitution Leased Wire.)

Washington, October 29.—Passports have been issued a number of prominent women who are about to leave from Pacific ports for a six months' investigation of all phases of the women's foreign mission field in the Orient.

The personnel of the deputation, which is being sent by the federated women's council of foreign missionary societies, includes such well-known women as President Ellen F. Pendleton, of Wellesley college; President M. Carey Thomas, of Bryn Mawr college; Miss Charlotte Conant, principal of the Walnut Hill school, Natick, Mass.; Dr. Marion B. Manter, of the Bellevue hospital, New York; Dr. Gertrude A. Walker, of the woman's medical college, Philadelphia; Dr. Josephine Lawney, of the Pittsburg Tuberculosis hospital; Miss Josephine Ramsey, the community music expert, and 23 others. The deputation represents the Methodist bodies, and the Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist and Disciples of Christ denominations and the interchurch world movement of North America.

The results of the investigations, which will cover China, Japan, Korea and probably India, will be used by the interchurch world movement in the formulation of its world program. The deputation is the first interdenominational body of women to go abroad for the investigation of foreign missionary problems and is said to include more prominent women than have ever before visited the Orient in a group.

President Thomas, of Bryn Mawr, is now in Egypt, and will join the other members at Yokohama.

Part of the delegation will sail tomorrow, headed by President Pendleton, from Vancouver, for Yokohama. The rest will sail from San Francisco on November 8, for the same Japanese port.

U. S. ON WAR BASIS TO COMBAT COAL STRIKE MINER LEADER BRANDS WILSON "USURPER"

Japan Ratifies Treaty of Peace

DIRECT ATTACK MADE ON WILSON BY MINER LEADER

Lewis Says President's Action Is Climax of Long Series of Usurpation of Executive Power.

PRESIDENT'S ACTION BLAMED FOR STRIKE

Lewis Alleges Wilson's Course Has Done More Than Any One Thing to Prevent Settlement of the Trouble.

Indianapolis, October 30.—After dispatching to Washington a telegram to Secretary of Labor Wilson in which the president's position on the coal strike was characterized as that of an usurper, the executive board of the United Mine Workers of America today turned to routine business. Although the actual strike was less than 36 hours away, the governing body of the union devoted the afternoon to adjusting disputes between locals and individual members, and at the end of their session said there was "nothing of public interest" in the proceedings.

The telegrams constituted the first exchange of views between the administration and the union. While the telegrams from Secretary Wilson reached here yesterday, the reply was not completed until today when it was submitted to the executive board by President Lewis. It was understood the reply was approved by unanimous vote. Union headquarters refused to give out the secretary's message, saying that its publication was something for the sender to approve.

Offered to Call Conference.

The reply indicated the secretary offered to call a conference of the miners and employers, which offer was accepted in the following language:

"We shall hold ourselves in readiness to attend any joint conference which may be arranged by you upon fair basis and stand ready to reconvene the international convention of our organization whenever our scale committee has received an honorable proposition for presentation to such convention."

Union headquarters were frankly interested in the arrival here tomorrow of C. B. Ames, assistant to the attorney general, in charge of suits brought under the anti-trust and fuel and food control laws. The union leaders learned with apparent equanimity that there had been unusual activity among local agents of the department of justice and professed faith that their every act had been under warrant of constitutional rights which no statute could abrogate.

No Sabotage, Say Miners.

At the office of the United States district attorney there was no announcement as to what proceedings might be instituted in regard to the strike.

The union officials said the mine owners and public could rest assured that no act of the organization would be allowed to work physical damage to the coal diggings. They pointed out that the strike order provided that local unions must allow "sufficient men to remain at work to insure the proper care and protection of all mining properties in conformity with the provisions of the district agreements in the several fields."

Building fences against charges that the demand for a six-hour working day was calculated to reduce production, the statisticians of the union assembled figures which they said proved that even the country's peak production of 685,000,000 tons of bituminous coal in 1918 was not the limit of the industry. They said this was dug with the mines averaging only about 70 per cent of capacity and with the skilled working force reduced by 80,000 miners in the army and navy. Out of a possible 312 working days in the year, they said western Pennsylvania miners averaged 260, Indiana 249, Illinois 228 and Ohio 224. The bulk of bituminous tonnage came from those states.

Claim Too Many Miners.

Against this record they set figures for 1919, which they said showed that the mines had operated at not to exceed 50 per cent of the time. Despite this reduction in time, they said the 1919 production of the country up to October 18 was 379,000,000 tons, only 103,000,000 tons less than in the same period of 1918. They estimated that the mine workers will not average more than 180 working days in 1919 and claimed that a full working force working steadily throughout the year can produce 800,000,000 tons if need be. They said the estimated needs of the country for 1920 were 550,000,000 tons.

"These figures show," said Ellis Searles, editor of the union's magazine, "that there are too many miners in the coal business for an eight-hour day. The shorter day would distribute the work evenly throughout the year and it would

FOUR BIG POWERS HAVE ACCEPTED VERSAILLES PACT

In Addition to Japan, Great Britain, France and Italy Have Announced Ratification.

Tokio, October 30.—Japan has ratified the treaty of peace of Versailles.

The peace treaty was approved by the privy council last Monday at a meeting at which the emperor presided. The treaty committee of the council reported that the league of nations covenant did not conflict with the prerogatives of the emperor and could co-exist with the alliance with England, which is defensive and not aggressive. The committee advised the government to settle the Shantung matter to the best possible advantage for Japan. After unanimous approval without reservations the treaty was submitted to the emperor and was ratified today.

Japan is the fourth great power to ratify the treaty, Great Britain, France and Italy being the other three.

GERMANY MUST SIGN ADDITIONAL CLAUSES.

Paris, October 30.—Before the peace treaty becomes effective the German representatives will be required, it is expected here, to sign an additional protocol, binding Germany to carry out armistice clauses which were not incorporated in the treaty of Versailles. The supreme council today considered the text of the proposed instrument.

CITY AND COUNTY MERGER FAVORED

Recommendation to This Effect Will Be Made Today by Grand Jury—Minority Report Also Expected.

That the governments of the city of Atlanta and Fulton county be merged will be recommended by the Fulton county grand jury in its presentments, which will be submitted to Judge John D. Humphries in the superior court Friday, it was learned Thursday. The question has been the subject of much discussion during the sessions of the grand jury and it is understood that a minority report will also be made by the members of the jury who do not favor this plan.

Since the present jury was sworn in various subcommittees have been investigating all the county departments and institutions in connection with an investigation of the present system of government.

It is understood that the recommendations include the bringing into the city of the county under the present city system of taxation, in order that more money may be provided for the improvements of the streets in the city.

In the minority report, it is understood, the present system of maintaining the city and county separately will be recommended, but a change in the city government is suggested.

The county commissioners have never been in favor of the merger since it was suggested several months ago and any move in this direction will meet with strong opposition from the county.

It is also reported that the grand jury will recommend that a new juvenile and detention home be built in place of the one now occupied on Trinity avenue and that the white reformatory, located near the town of Hapeville, be moved further into the county.

The foreman of the present grand jury is A. J. Shropshire, well-known insurance man.

DEADLY EXPLOSION ON JAP BATTLESHIP

Tokio, October 30.—(By the associated Press.)—The maneuvers of the entire Japanese navy, in which the emperor participated, were marred by an explosion on the battleship Hyuga, in Tokio bay. Fourteen men were killed and 30 injured.

The emperor was aboard the battleship Settsu.

The maneuvers, which were the most elaborate in the history of the navy, included mimic battles and airplane attacks on coastal cities.

IMMENSE HOTEL TO BE ERECTED

Seven Hundred Acres Bought Near Atlanta, and Beautiful Resort to Rival Grove Park Inn Is Now Planned.

Less than an hour's ride from Atlanta there will soon be erected one of the most sumptuous and well-appointed caravanseries in the whole south, involving the expenditure of millions of dollars—and whose surroundings and equipment will equal the famous Grove Park inn, at Asheville, N. C.

More than seven hundred acres are already being cleared of timber, and prepared for the construction of the immense resort that will be built near Bull Sluice, seventeen miles from the city.

The immense tract of land upon which the beautiful hotel and park will be placed lies in the northern part of Fulton county, beginning just south of Bull Sluice road and extending several miles along the Chattahoochee river. This land has been purchased by Aldine Chambers, J. E. Wilcox and W. F. Chase, who paid a total price of $62,000 for the property.

Will Be Cleared of Timber

Mr. Chambers, in a statement, admitted that the property had been purchased and declared that it would be cleared of a large portion of its heavy timber, after which it would be developed. He would make no detailed statement with reference to the plan, but it was learned from other sources that on this property there will be erected an immense hotel, fitted for service the entire year through, and the land surrounding the main building will be arranged to the last detail to conform with all possible wishes for sport, diversion or comfort that may occur to the guests.

Natural lakes are adjacent to the property and artificial lakes will be constructed so as to afford ample opportunity for indulgence of the sportsman's whims for boating, canoeing, swimming and all the pastimes that find popularity at a resort boasting lakes.

Golf courses are to be laid out, and it is the purpose of those in the lead of the proposition to have here the finest courses in the United States, to rival even the beautiful fairways and smooth greens of eastern courses such as Brae-Burn, near Boston; Oakmont, in Pennsylvania, and other championship courses.

Sports of All Kinds.

Sports of all kinds, in fact, are to be provided for, polo, fishing and hunting in season procuring prticular attention in the arrangement of the terrain that is to hold the mammoth hostelry that will give Atlanta another phase of precedence to add to her long list already won.

The gateway of the southeast, from a commercial standpoint, possessing a climate that rivals any in the world in moderation and consistency, Atlanta has been seized upon as an ideal spot for a resort that can be as pleasant a place in the midsummer as in the days of winter.

"I can only say," declared Mr. Chambers, "that the land has been bought, as stated, and that we have 700 acres from which we are clearing away the timber. After this has been done we expect to develop the property."

Information was gained elsement that is planned for the propermen that is planned for the property includes the erection of an immense resort hotel which will be practically a duplicate of the Grove Park Inn, the famous hostelry of Fred Seely at Asheville, N. C., and that this hotel will be surrounded with an immense park in which lakes and streams will furnish boating and fishing, polo grounds, tennis courts, golf courses and all facilities required to make a resort delightful, will be found.

Will Build Roads.

The plans, it is understood, also contemplate the building of avenues and driveways throughout the park.

Extending through the beautiful tract of land is the famous Boswell road, which leads to the little city that contains the old Bulloch homestead, the birthplace of Roosevelt's mother. It is also traversed by the Riverside Drive, that runs along the banks of the Chattahoochee river for many miles leading to the Bull Sluice power plant, and the proposed site of the big resort hotel.

These, with other roads that extend through the property, it is declared, will be improved and made into picturesque drives and boulevards. Avenues reaching to all parts of the park, walks and retreats, will also wind their way through the magnificent woodlands.

It is the purpose of those who have the development in mind, it is stated, to make this one of the most elaborate pleasure grounds to be found in America. Every effort will be made to attract the highest class of tourists, who wish to spend their vacation in a climate that is pleas-

To Sell Groceries Bought For Father By Mrs. Bradstreet

Order Signed by Judge Bell as Result of Agreement Between Woman's Attorneys and Bank Representative.

An order signed by Judge George L. Bell in the motion division of the superior court Thursday, as the result of an agreement between the attorneys for Mrs. Catherine Bradstreet and J. H. Longino, representing the Fairburn Banking company, authorizes the sale for the best price possible of certain perishable goods and groceries stored in a storehouse located on East Lake drive.

The probability of the deterioration of the goods before final disposition could be made of them caused this agreement to be reached and the cash is to take the place of the goods in whatever disposition is made of Mrs. Bradstreet's property in the case of the Fairburn Banking company vs. Mrs. Catherine Bradstreet.

The ultimate outcome of the cases against Mr. and Mrs. Bradstreet and William B. Green still awaits the completion of the audit of the bank's books. The commitment hearing that is to be called before Judge Homer McDaniel to decide whether or not the defendants will be bound over to the grand jury for indictment will probably not be held for another week.

W. O. Martin, special examiner who is at work on the audit of the bank's books, offers no information on the status of the bank's finances, but says that the work is progressing as well as possible under the extremely unfavorable circumstances, and hopes that no unforeseen delay will hold the final report up for a much longer time.

Some citizens of Campbell county are slightly perturbed as to what the outcome of the good roads projects of the county will be if the bank is found insolvent. The county deposit with the Fairburn Banking company that represented part of the proceeds from the sale of the bond issue of $225,000 if unavailable after the final accounting is complete, may, it is thought by some, interfere with the appropriation that would finally come from the government for good roads maintenance.

PAYROLLS PADDED AT CAMP SHERMAN

And Army Officers Given Liquor and Valuable Presents by Contractors. Witnesses Tell of Graft.

Columbus, Ohio, October 30.—That government payrolls were padded and army officers in the quartermaster's construction corps were furnished with liquor and valuable presents by contractors, was the testimony of E. E. Heald today, a former payroll auditor, and bookkeeper for D. W. McGrath & Son, Columbus contractors, before the congressional subcommittee investigating graft charges in connection with the construction of Camp Sherman at Chillicothe.

Liquor Brought to Camp.

Heald told the committee that Frank J. McGrath, a son of D. W. McGrath, had frequently brought liquor to the camp for army officers, and that he (Heald) had personally delivered some of the liquor to Captain Nicholson. He said the McGrath firm, which did considerable construction at the cantonment, purchased valuable presents for the officers in the quartermaster's corps at Christmas time, 1918.

He further testified that Frank McGrath drew $20 a day for himself and $5 a day for his automobile for 84 days when he was not working. Heald said he knew this was true, because he himself paid the vouchers under protest.

The D. W. McGrath & Sons company, Columbus contractors, who finished the construction, vigorously denied charges that members of the firm had furnished camp quartermaster officers with liquor or had given them presents.

E. E. Heald, Columbus, former payroll auditor for the concern, who made the charges, was branded by E. H. McGrath, of the company, as an "absconder and a defaulter."

Labor Is Attacked.

"Profiteering mechanics and employees, not the contractors," were responsible for "whatever waste and extravagance there was in the construction of Camp Sherman," ac-

Way of "Tiger" Being Made Rough In New York City

Many Arrested for Violating Prohi Law--Thousand Saloon Keepers Decide to Close Places.

New York, October 31.—One thousand gallons of whisky were seized and two men arrested by police and internal revenue agents in a raid early today on an alleged moonshine still in the Bronx. Several shots were fired, but no one was injured.

New York, October 30.—The close of the first 24 hours of prohibition enforcement in New York found 47 persons arrested, 1,000 saloon keepers in Brooklyn announcing the close of the places tomorrow, and the opening guns fired in court battles to restrain law enforcers from enforcing and liquor dealers from selling.

Jacob Ruppert, brewer, brought suit against Francis G. Caffey, United States district attorney, and Richard McElligott, deputy collector of internal revenue, to restrain them from enforcing the war-time prohibition law. Meanwhile, Earl B. Barnes, assistant United States district attorney, filed suits against

Hands Clasped By Belgian King And President

Meeting of Wilson and Albert Climax of Latter's American Visit. Queen and Prince Also See Wilson.

Washington, October 30.—King Albert and President Wilson clasped hands today. The meeting at the president's bedside, brief as it was, proved the climax of the American visit of the Belgian monarch and he left Washington late tonight, a happy man, to sail for home from Newport News at noon tomorrow on the transport George Washington, which brought him to this country. From the day he landed the pleasure of his tour has been marred by anxiety over the president's condition and he had abandoned hope of being able to see him.

When he drove to the white house, Albert had little expectation of being able to see the man for whom he has expressed the highest admiration. Only at the last moment, at the president's earnest request, did Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, consent to a brief chat. The king went alone to the sick room, operating the elevator himself. His call lasted ten minutes.

The visitor seated himself at the right of the bed and the president apologized for not being able to rise, but the king expressed deep gratification at being able to see him at all. Mr. Wilson remarked that it was a very happy occasion and showed great interest in the

U. S. SUGAR BOARD OUT OF BUSINESS

Unable to Get Cuban Sugar, Board Is Ceasing Activities—Claims $256,000,000 Saving in Year.

Washington, October 30.—The United States sugar equalization board today telegraphed Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, in charge of the senate sugar investigation, that it was preparing to "wind up its activities," in view of inability to obtain sufficient sugar from Cuba to warrant further government control.

In a statement issued tonight the board claims it has saved the American people a possible $256,000,000 in the year ended July 15, 1919. In addition the board will turn over to the treasury $30,000,000 made from its margin of 38½ cents per hundred pounds on Cuban sugars, which sum would have gone to refiners or Cuban producers, or would have been lost between producer and retailer.

Government control of coffee ended with the war, and sugar control still exists. Despite this the retail price of coffee, it is pointed out, increased 53 per cent in the year ended July 15 last, while the retail price of sugar increased only 18 per cent. The rise in coffee prices was in face of no decline of world production, while the smaller rise in sugar price was in face of a world shortage of 2,000,000 tons.

SENATE TO PUSH SUGAR LEGISLATION.

Washington, October 30.—In spite of advices from the United States sugar equalization board that it was preparing to wind up its activities because of inability to obtain sufficient sugar from Cuba to warrant further government control, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, in charge of the senate sugar investigation, said today the senate would proceed to enact legislation designed to aid the public in the sugar shortage and also provide for continuation of the board, even should the present members resign. A meeting of the senate agriculture committee was called for Saturday to act on pending legislation.

Senator McNary said the sugar board's plans evidently were due to the committee's refusal to enact legislation to provide for licensing of sugar refiners and dealers. The committee now plans, he said, to present a bill continuing the board and authorizing it to purchase Cuban sugar.

The board in its telegram to Senator McNary said it was impossible to acquire "any great amount of the new Cuban sugar crop at this time at a reasonable price," and that the board was planning to close its affairs except in a minor way, including supervision of equitable distribution of sugar left on its present Cuban contract.

SPRING ST. GRADE HAS BEEN ADOPTED

Work of Securing Waivers and Easements Between Marietta and North Avenue Will Now Be Rushed.

A joint meeting of the county commissioners, the street committee of council, city and county engineers, city construction department and the Spring street property owners' executive committee was held Thursday afternoon in the mayor's office. A definite profile was adopted on the proposed Spring street grade, and the work of securing waivers and easements between Marietta street and North avenue will proceed at once, with the view of getting ready for the county forces by December 15.

The grade adopted is based upon the Hall profile, which has received the approval of city council and the mayor, and the maximum grade on the entire section of Spring street from Marietta street to North avenue will be 4 per cent. This will insure an easy grade for that portion of the street that is expected to become an important business thoroughfare, and at the same time will not call for cuttings and fills that will cause excessive damage to property owners. It is also expected to take care of the grades at intersecting streets, which is an important item to be considered in the big street widening and grading project.

Present at Meeting.

Present at the meeting, which was presided over by Chairman Morris Brandon, of the Spring street property owners' executive committee, were County Commissioner Oscar Mills, County Engineer W. A. Hansell, City Engineer C. E. Kaufmann, Chief of Construction H. L. Collier, Mayor Key and many property owners on Spring street.

The profile of Spring street made by City Engineer Hall, showing the proposed new grade, and one made by County Engineer Hansell were exhibited to the meeting, and were under discussion. The maximum grade, as proposed in the city profile, was placed at 4 per cent, while that of the county engineer allowed for a 5 per cent grade at the intersection of Spring and Baker streets. In placing the county profile before the meeting Oscar Mills and Mr. Hansell said that the cross streets would have to be made to conform with the grade of Spring, and that it would be necessary to have the grade on Spring from Baker to West Peachtree street a 5 per cent one, unless Simpson street could be raised.

Then it was proposed that Simpson street be raised 4½ feet, which would have the effect of lessening the grade of Spring street, making it unnecessary to cut down at Baker. A motion was made by Alderman Jones H. Ewing that Simpson street be raised was not acted upon, but a committee was appointed to go immediately over the ground and see for itself what action would be best to take.

Committee Given Power.

This committee was given power to act, and after visiting Spring street at the intersections of Baker and Simpson, the committee decided to raise the latter street, thereby taking care of the intersecting streets, and making the maximum grade for the improved Spring street 4 per cent.

While the meeting was in session County Commissioner Oscar Mills and Alderman J. H. Ewing made talks in which they agreed that the work that is to be done on Spring street should be done with a view to permanence, and that the thoroughfare should be placed in such condition now as to make changes unnecessary for many years.

The new grade that has been adopted for Spring street will make it an easy grade all the way from Marietta street to North avenue, and the profile shows that but little damage will result to property owners by the changing of the street from the present line to the proposed one.

Now that the profile is adopted officially and approved by the joint meeting, it is expected that the securing of waivers from property owners will be but a matter of form, and it is believed the work will progress from this point with no obstacles to hinder it.

FOUR MEN SENTENCED IN EDSEL FORD CASE

Toledo, Ohio, October 30.—Four men held in connection with the alleged plot to kidnap and hold for ransom Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, were sentenced in police court today to three months in the city work house.

The officiating magistrate, in sentencing the men, said:

"I think you men who came here from the four corners of the earth indulged in this pipe dream and I believe you intended to carry the foolish idea through. You were living here with no means of support and your motives were sinister. Later, if the police learn your records are clear, I may mitigate this sentence."

Richard Ramsey, alias Herron; Eddie Cole, alias Kenney; Joseph Fisher and Claude Cameron were arraigned on charges of being suspicious persons. The four were arrested on the strength of a statement of a private detective.

WARTIME RULES WILL BE REVIVED BY GOVERNMENT

Fuel Administration to Resume Its Activities in Order to Prevent Hoarding—Maximum Price on Coal.

RAILWAYS WILL SEIZE COAL FOR THEIR NEEDS

Director General Hines Issues Statement — Priority Rules in Force During the War Will Be Revived.

Washington, October 30.—The government put on its fighting clothes today to meet the coal strike due to start Saturday.

While order after order popped out with startling war-time swiftness, the long arm of the law reached out to protect the public and those miners willing to remain at work in the face of union commands to quit.

Most drastic of all moves during the day was the order of the railroad administration for seizure of coal in transit for roads requiring it, with rationing of stocks on hand to essential industries.

So far as the government is able to prevent, there will be no profiteering while the grim specter of winter, with coal bins dangerously low or bare, looms big and close at hand. Almost the first step today was drafting an order fixing a maximum price for all grades of coal. Re-establishment of the priorities list will put coal where it is most needed, and if it comes to that the government will curtail consumption.

Propped in Bed, Wilson Acts.

Breaking down the barriers which had kept members of the cabinet away from his sick room, President Wilson took a hand in the fight today and personally approved every detail in the general plan of dealing with conditions likely to arise with theh walkout of the soft coal miners. For twenty minutes the president, propped up in bed, went over with Attorney General Palmer the various steps, heard what orders had been issued and was put in intimate touch with all arrangements. The president, it was said, was especially gratified to learn of protective measures, both for the homes and the mines.

The coal strike took precedence over the peace treaty in the senate, which for four hours debated and then adopted a resolution pledging its support to the government in maintaining order during the present industrial emergency. Efforts to have the house take similar action failed because of opposition by republican leaders.

In and out of congress, however, sentiment seemed to turn through one groove, and there were expressions of general approval of the

ALLIES ASK GERMANY TO BLOCKADE RUSSIA

Paris, October 30.—The text of the note sent by Marshal Foch to General Nudant for transmission to the German government inviting Germany to participate in the blockade of bolshevist Russia is similar to that sent to the neutral states with the exception of the last paragraph. The note follows:

"The president of the peace conference has been requested by the conference to inform the neutral governments of a decision taken by the supreme council of the allied and associated powers in regard to economic pressure which is to be exerted on bolshevist Russia.

"The German government is asked to take measures similar to those indicated.

All Governments Menaced

"The avowed hostility of the bolshevists toward all governments and their international program of revolution which they are spreading abroad constitute grave danger for the national security of all powers. Every increase of strength of the bolshevists would increase the danger and would be contrary to the desire of all peoples who are seeking to re-establish peace and social order.

"It is in this spirit that the allied and associated governments after studying the commercial relations with bolshevist Russian find these relations indeed could only be effected through the agency of the chiefs of the bolshevist government who, disposing at will of the products and resources which commercial liberty would bring them would thereby achieve considerable increase in their tyrannical strength which they are exercising over the Russian populations.

"Under these conditions the allied and associated governments request the Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Finnish, Spanish, Swiss, Mexican, Chilean, Argentinian, Colombian and Venezuelan governments to be good enough to make an immediate agreement with them in measures to prevent their nationals from engaging in any commerce with bolshevist Russia and to assure that this policy will be rigurously executed.

To Refuse Clearance Papers.

"To refuse clearance papers to every ship going to Russian ports in the hands of bolshevists or coming from said ports.

"To establish similar measures for all merchandise destined to be sent into bolshevist Russia by any other route.

"To refuse passports to all persons going to bolshevist Russia or coming from it, except through understanding with the allied and associated governments.

"It is the disposition with a view to preventing banks from doing business with bolshevist Russia, as far as possible to request refusal by each government to it own nationals of facilities for correspondence with bolshevist Russia by post, telegraph or wireless."

The note sent to Germany contains the following final paragraph:

"The British and French warships in the Gulf of Finland shall continue to change the route of ships bound for ports of bolshevist Russia."

REFUSED BONUS, PRINTERS QUIT NASHVILLE PAPERS

Nashville, Tenn., October 30.—Nearly, the entire composing room force of The Nashville Tennesseean walked out tonight following the refusal of the publishers, the Tennessee Publishing company, to grant a demand for a fourth bonus of a dollar a day above the contract scale of wages together with the bonuses previously granted.

Friday's edition of the paper is being gotten out with only two men operating linotype machines, one regular operator and the foreman.

A like situation also confronts The Nashville American, an afternoon newspaper published by the same company, and The Nashville Banner, published by the Banner Publishing company.

All of the operators employed by the papers are members of the Typographical union, with which the companies have contracts which will not expire until January 15, 1921. The scales in these contracts are $4.25 on the day side and $4.75 on the night side. During the past few months the companies have voluntarily granted three bonuses amounting to $1.25 a day.

A committee appointed by the president of the union this week requested a fourth bonus of $1 a day additional. This the companies declined to grant, but offered to submit to arbitration the question of what bonus, if any, should be paid above the scale. Without answering this proposal for arbitration, practically all of the men employed in the composing room failed to report for work tonight, and the typesetting forces of thhe American and the Banner, it is understood, will pursue a like course tomorrow.

SUMTER SOCIAL CLUB PLANNING TO BUILD

Americus, Ga., October 30.—(Special.)—The Sumter club, Americus' most exclusive social organization, held its annual business meeting, at which new officers were elected last night. These are W. A. Dodson, president; W. G. Turpin, vice president; J. Lewis Ellis, secretary-treasurer; Dan Chappell, assistant secretary-treasurer; W. G. Turpin, Hollis Fort, C. H. Burke, Walter Page and Judson Hill, governors. The Sumter club since its organization has used the rooms of the Americus Elks for their monthly dances, but a movement is now under way to have the club fit up rooms of its own.

METCALF NOT INDICTED FOR COOPER MURDER

Nashville, Tenn., October 30.—No true bill against Dennis Metcalf, gardener at the Cooper home, was reported today by the Davidson county grand jury, which for several weeks has been investigating the murder of Robin J. Cooper, Nashville lawyer, on August 28.

Metcalf was arrested, on a warrant charging him with the murder, on September 26, the warrant being sworn out by Gabriel Hansen, "psycho-analytical detective," of Memphis. He was released on $1,000 bond, but subsequently surrendered by his bondsmen and has been in jail since.

Probably the first known intoxicant was the fermented milk of mares, and it is at the present time a favorite with the Tartar.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX PASSES INTO UNKNOWN

New Haven, Conn., October 30.—Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, author and poetess, died at her home, The Bungalow, in Branford, today. Mrs. Wilcox had been ill for some months, having had a nervous collapse while engaged in war relief work in England.

Her death was not unexpected to those who shared the seclusion of her home. The exact nature of her final illness is not stated.

Mrs. Wilcox was in her sixty-fourth year and was a native of Wisconsin. She was married to Mr. Wilcox in 1884. Her literary work embraced a large number of books, both prose and poetry, and she was a contributor to many publications.

Her surviving relatives are a brother and a sister.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed. The body will be taken to Springfield, Mass., for cremation, and a service will be held there, although the time has not yet been determined.

After cremation Mrs. Wilcox's ashes will be taken to Short Beach and the receptacle sealed in a niche in the granite ledge on which "The Bungalow" stands. This was done with the ashes of Mr. Wilcox.

The property at Short Beach by deed given since Mrs. Wilcox's return from Europe, passes to Mrs. W. H. Ritter, a close friend. Mrs. Wilcox had retained a life interest in it.

HEARST IS ATTACKED BY N. Y. GOVERNOR

New York, October 30.—After William R. Hearst, publisher, had declined a challenge from Governor Smith to engage in public debate, the governor appeared in Carnegie hall and charged that the publisher's papers had attacked him because he had refused to let Mr. Hearst tell him what to do as chief executive of this state.

Reviewing his political record, Mr. Smith defied Mr. Hearst "to mention a crooked act that I ever performed, in public or private life."

Governor Smith charged that the Hearst newspapers were adding to the nation's difficulty in suppressing the spirit of unrest and were making it difficult for the government to handle the situation.

At the close the committee headed by Jefferson Demont Thompson, heading the committee of nonpartisans who hired the hall "for the common purpose" of staging the proposed debate, presented resolutions which were adopted, recommending appointment of a "citizens' fair play committee" of one thousand to direct public opinion against opinions expressed by Mr. Hearst's newspapers and "to protect public servants and citizens generally" from Mr. Hearst's "methods" of attack.

Killed in Action.

Washington, October 30.—Today's casualty list includes as killed in action Private James W. I. Dawson, Birmingham, Ala.

ROYALTY AND OTHERS PROMINENT IN ENGLISH RAILROAD STRIKE

In the recent English railroad strike many prominent persons took hold and tried to alleviate suffering and distress by manning the trains and doing manual labor connected in any way with transportation and the movement of freight. It was a daily scene to see many men and women of high repute, and many of them of the royalty, clothied in dungarees, overalls and aprons, doing the work of the strikers in order that England might remain the great nation that she now is and keep her place in industry among antions.

Picture No. 3 shows Lieutenant Colonel Lirke and Lieutenant Beresford on the engine they drove from High Wycombe to Marylebone, to England. Picture No. 2 is a striking likeness of Mr. Walker, who is a popular movie actor of England, who worked as porter during the English railroad tie-up. No. 1 discloses, despite the rough exterior, the person of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, joint hereditary lord great chamberlain of England, who is engaged in the unroyal practice of unloading eggs at Paddington to help alleviate the food sufferings and starvation panic in the railroad strike.

RAIL TELEGRAPHERS TAKING STRIKE VOTE

St. Louis, October 30.—A strike vote was ordered by the twenty-one chairmen of the Order of Railway Telegraphers representing 23,000 men in the Chicago district, after a twenty-four hours' wait for a reply to a telegram sent yesterday to Director General of Railroads Hines asking that the alleged increase of five cents an hour granted by former Director General McAdoo, be allowed.

OVERTURNED VESSEL OFF BRAZIL COAST

Buenos Aires, October 30.—A vessel which was seen floating bottom-up off the southern Brazilian coast recently is believed in maritime circles here to be the American wooden steamship Benvola. The hulk was first supposed to have been that of the American steamer Mount Hood, which, on the night of October 10, while on fire, was towed to sea from the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dispatches from Rio Janeiro report that the Benvola, bound from the United States with a cargo of gasoline for Rio Janeiro, has for some time been overdue. The dispatches add that a ship arriving from Santos received a distress signal from a steamship which was supposed to be the Benvola. The signal was received during a storm and the ship was unable to locate the vessel in distress.

The supposition here is that if the hulk is that of the Benvola the current carried it southward. The fate of the crew of the capsized vessel is not known.

The latest record of the Benvola, a 3,000-ton shipping board wooden ship, shows that she arrived at Kingston, Jamaica, September 13, from Port Arthur, Texas, and on October 1, was still in port there.

MARSDEN "FRAMED," DECLARES HIS LAWYER

New York, October 30.—Lieutenant Commander Christopher Marsden was "framed up" his counsel declared today in summing up at the court martial before which he is being tried on charges of accepting bribes for naval reserve enrollments during the war. Lieutenant B. J. Ellert, who already has pleaded guilty to similar charges, and Louis Markowitz, who testified to acting as "go between" in fraudulent enrollments," were the witnesses accused of "framing up" Marsden.

The verdict will be forwarded to Washington for approval by Secretary Daniels.

PREPARING REPORT ON THE STEEL STRIKE

Washington, October 30.—Preparations of a report to the senate on its investigation of the steel strike was begun today by the senate labor committee, with prospects of unanimous agreement.

Legislation reported today as tentatively approved by the committee includes bills to enforce naturalization of alien residents within certain periods, to provide more drastic penalties for radicalism and to bring about conciliation and mediation of industrial disputes under some system of government control with improvements over existing law.

The committee, in its report, also will severely criticise radicalism in the union labor movement, it was predicted. Many facts obtained in the investigation which, members said, will be astounding to the country, are to be incorporated in the report.

COSTA RICA GIVEN RECOGNITION BY U. S.

Washington, October 30.—The state department has decided to recognize the provisional government of Costa Rica, it was learned authoritatively today. Diplomatic relations between this country and Costa Rica were broken off three years ago, when Federico Tinoco, minister of war, by a coup d'etat deposed President Gonzales, who is now in the United States studying law, having taken refuge in this country.

Tinoco was recently compelled to abandon the presidency and leave Costa Rica, after his brother, who was minister of war, had been assassinated and a violent revolution threatened the government. It was on account of Tinoco's violence that the American government issued a pronunciamento, which has had salutary effect upon Latin-American countries, declaring that the United States would not recognize a government set up by revolution.

This government now considers the situation under the provisional government of Costa Rica to be acceptable in the sense of responsibility to that nation and capacity to discharge international obligations.

SIX PERSONS KILLED; 120 OTHERS INJURED

Los Angeles, October 30.—Six dead and about 120 persons injured, some seriously, was the known casualty list today as a result of the wreck of the Southern Pacific railroad's "San Joaquin Valley Flyer" late yesterday. The tangled mass of wreckage near Acton, a few miles from here, was expected to reveal additional bodies. No official investigation of the wreck had been arranged early today, but railroad officials said it was caused by the engineer attempting to make too much speed on a 10 degree curve.

Frank Fielder, of Los Angeles, engineer, the fireman and four passengers comprise the known dead. A survivor said he counted nine bodies at the scene of the wreck. Five bodies were brought here and a relief train with injured was detoured over another railway.

Davis Succeeds Rowe.

Washington, October 30.—Norman H. Davis, of Tullahoma, Tenn., who was one of the financial advisers to the American peace mission at Paris, was nominated today by President Wilson as assistant secretary of the treasury to succeed L. S. Rowe, resigned.

LONGSHORE STRIKERS WON'T UNLOAD SUGAR

New Orleans, October 30.—Asserting that a large quantity of sugar is stored in local warehouses and that two-thirds of the sugar awaiting unloading from vessels here is designed for France, Henry Keegan, president of the longshoremen's union, declared today the striking dock workers would not consider proposals to return to work long enough to get the sugar out of ships anchored in port.

It has been urged by representatives of dealers, growers and refiners that the longshoremen suspend their strike for higher wages for a few days in order that the raw sugar, aggregating 160,000 bags, could be unloaded.

Officials of the American and Henderson sugar refineries asserted that within a few days after the sugar was unloaded a portion of it could be marketed here. Denial was made that there was sugar stored in the refineries or warehouses.

Port records show that there is in the vessels yet unloaded here 7,600 tons of raw sugar for the French government, 3,000 for Great Britain and 1,500 for American interests.

FRANCE THREATENED BY GENERAL STRIKE

Paris, October 30.—(By the Associated Press).—The absence from Paris of Leon Jouhaux, president of the general federation of labor, who is on his way to the United States to attend the international labor conference at Washington, has caused the extremists in the federation of labor to make an attempt to organize a general strike for November 7.

Circulars now are being sent to unions throughout France asking the opinion of the local committees as to the advisability of all organizations starting a general strike in protest against intervention in Russia and convoking a commission to examine the proposition.

Keen opposition to M. Jouhaux and the other delegates to the Washington conference developed before the mission's departure. The extremists opposed the voyage, claiming French labor should not collaborate with certain classes attending the conference, which they consider harmful to the French workingmen's interests.

Heavy pressure is being brought to bear by syndicalist leaders upon railway men to endeavor to induce them to join the movement for a revolutionary general strike November 7. Revolutionary orators at a meeting of the Federation of Syndicalists Thursday called upon the railroad men to demand an increase in wages of 1,000 francs, not, as Citizen Sirolle admitted, with the idea of gaining this, but with the sole object of creating difficulties by the failure to obtain their demands.

Railway brakemen and switchmen had asked for a salary of 3,800 francs and from all indications is seemed that the demand would be granted. M. Sirolle therefore proposed that they should ask for 4,800 francs, 1,000 francs more, because "the comrades must be kept busy with claims for increased wages."

Continuing, Citizen Sirolle cited as an example the fact that the Russian revolution was brought about by 100 sailors who seized the parliament building and said that the railroad men must act in a similar manner. "I have my hundred men ready," said M. Sirolle.

It was decided that work should stop completely on all railroads November 7 at 3 p. m. "If we don't," said M. Sirolle, "the majority will never accomplish anything. We must give signal and try to get a minority to lead the majority."

FOOD AND CLOTHES SCARCE IN POLAND

New York, September 7.—Condition in Poland, due to lack of food, clothes, medical aid and hospitals, are described graphically in a message just received by the overseas committee of the Y. W. C. A. from Lois Downs, of Pittsburg, head of the Y. W. C. A. commission to that stricken country.

This mission went into Poland several months ago to investigate conditions and discover how members of the Polish Grey Samaritan unit which had been trained for reconstruction and social work in their native land might best be used to advantage.

Miss Downs tells of a trip into the department of the east—territory that is being taken from the bolsheviki. "It is just impossible for me to give you any idea of the utter lack of food, houses, clothes, medical aid, hospitals—everything," she writes. "I saw many sick, hungry, uncared for children that were too weak to eat or cry. I saw many children in all sorts of conditions and only heard six crying. It sounds unbelievable.

"Men, women, children, horses and cows, if a family is lucky enough to have them, are all living together in dugouts, in box cars, in open wagons, along the roads in the open with no covering or shelter from the heavy rains. Refugee camps have, at best, only a bare wooden platform for each family. All these camps are filled with typhus, smallpox and cholera cases.

"In one hospital sixty-six cases of dysentery broke out within two days. Men, women and children were all lying on the floor in small airless rooms with only one dirty blanket. At the same camp we found a ward filled with badly wounded soldiers suffering from dreadful lung, head and stomach wounds. The surgeon, a splendid man who spoke English perfectly, had operated on these men without an anaesthetic. I saw an eight-year-old girl stand up and have iodine put on her hand, which had been blown off by a hand grenade and never make one cry.

"Poland is surely in dire need of relief and workers. Everyone here is in great need of normal recreation. The women and girls are dreadfully nervous as the result of years of fear. One simply cannot keep them from continually discussing horrors.

"Very few factories are running so that the girls who formerly worked in them are now doing public work with the men—clearing up buildings that have been burned or blown up by the Russians and Germans, helping in the public gardens and such things. I did see some women and girls working in a factory outside of Warsaw. They were carding wool and received less than a dollar a day. Conditions in the factory were most primitive. The girl simply came in, hung up her shawl on anything handy and went to work. Few of them wore more than one garment. None of them had shoes or stockings.

"I visited a club of business girls the other evening and with great difficulty got them to play some games and forget the serious things they ordinarily discuss. In the end I was swamped with requests for classes in English and stenography.

"The advance unit of Polish Gray Samaritans arrives in Warsaw tomorrow and will go to work the next day. We have had difficulty in arranging their work as there are so many things to do. Mme. Paderewski wants them to train some of the Warsaw girls for canteen work. The minister of public health wants them to help nurses in the epidemic hospitals and the military hospitals want them, too. We are anxious that they be used to the best advantage, and in this have the co-operation of Mme. Paderewski and of all the government officials."

For some time Miss Downs has been doing Americanization work with foreign-born people in Pittsburg as director of the Y. W. C. A. international institute there.

SPANISH GOVERNMENT CONSIDERS LOCKOUT

Madrid, October 30.—The cabinet met today and deliberated regarding the lockout declared by the employers' federation, which is to begin at Barcelona Monday. The movement will include even the newspapers.

The situation is becoming serious and endeavors are being made by the ministry to prevent the lockout. In the event of the failure of its efforts 300,000 workers will be forced out of work.

A dispatch received from Malaga, on the Mediterranean, says the general strike there has been settled.

Explores Ocean Bed.

(From Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

The queerest submarine boat of all has just made its appearance in the waters of Long Island sound. Its purpose is peaceful, but none the less extraordinary; for it is to be used to explore the bottom of the sea, and to salvage what it may of the 22,000,000 tons of material that went down in the war. Its most remarkable feature is that its occupants may open a door in its bottom and walk, almost dry-shod, on the ocean floor. The new boat is only sub in part, however, for the greater portion of it, looking like a big twin-hull dredge ship, stays afloat and provides for the safety and comfort of those incased in the diving shell on the ocean bed.

The peculiar mechanism of the vessel comprises a long steel tube extending forward from between the bows, at the end of which is a steel chamber. When the exploring crew has entered the chamber by way of the tube, the latter is simply turned downward until the chamber rests upon the bottom. Air under pressure is constantly pumped in to exclude the water. On the bed of the sea, the bottom door may be opened, giving direct access to the ocean floor and whatever may rest upon it.

The Child.

(Bernard Shaw.)

A child is an experiment. A fresh attempt to produce the just man perfect; that is, to make humanity divine. And you will vitiate the experiment if you make the slightest attempt to abort it into some fancy figure of your own: for example, your notion of a good man or a womanly woman. If you treat it as a little wild beast to be tamed, or as a pet to be played with, or even as a means to save you trouble and to make money for you, it may fight its way through in spite of you and save its soul alive; but if you begin with its own holiest aspirations and suborn them for your own purposes, then there is hardly any mischief you can do.

Focus With Full-Size Image.

(From Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

Lack of any means for visual focusing is probably the greatest fault of the popular folding snapshot camera. A camera arranged to supply the deficiency is now on the market, however, and gives a full-size image on ground glass while the exposure is being made. The focusing equipment consists of an anxiliary bellows which is inclosed with the ground in a sliding box attached to the camera; and an extra lens which folds in alongside the front board. For use, the box is drawn out sidewise, bringing the bellows with it. The latter is then extended and joined to the lens. The two lenses focus together, so that a sharp picture is assured, covering exactly the field the operator desires.

THE AMERICAN MISSION MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Has Been Practically Decided to Withdraw Peace Delegates From Paris.

(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, October 30.—It has been practically decided, according to intimation from an official quarter today, to withdraw the American peace mission from Paris, and to conclude such negotiations as have not been completed at Paris in Washington.

The most important settlement still to be reached is the solution of the Adriatic problem, including the question of Fiume. It was said to be probable that a settlement in Paris being most unlikely, on account of President Wilson's refusal to accept the proposed compromise agreed upon by the governments of Great Britain, France and Italy, the new Italian ambassador to the United States, Romano Avezzano, will be charged with carrying on the negotiations here.

The allied governments are understood to be of the same mind as the American government in respect to the advisability of recalling the peace missions from Paris, the major work of the peace conference having already been accomplished and only a few questions still remaining unsettled, aside from the continuing work of the several commissions. Next to the Adriatic problem, the Roumanian question is considered most important, but it is believed it can be solved through negotiations between the various foreign offices and the Roumanian diplomatic representatives.

Cashing in on Right Thinking.

A man owned a tract of land near Pasadena, Cal.; on this there was a $10,000 mortgage; he had bought it on a shoestring, planning soon to sell it—for it was expected that a building boom would make it a desirable residence site long before the $10,000 was due.

Conditions at End of Six Months: The building boom had not materialized; the mortgage das due in ten days; real estate men refused to take it up; those holding the mortgage refused to extend it; the bankers wouldn't touch it.

Cause for Refusal: The land was in a hollow; real estate men and bankers were convinced no one would buy it until every other residence site near it had been sold; that might be years.

The Owner's First Efforts: When, at the end of the first three months, the boom failed to boom, he put his New Thought knowledge and faith into more active practice. He recognized "abundant supply," and faithfully and persistently and confidently affirmed "God is All Abundance" and "All is God."

Three months went by. The money did not drop from the heaven; but something else dropped—the corners of his banker's mouth. What was the trouble? Faithfully and confidently he affirmed the truth—that is, "God is the Source of Abundant Supply." Why then the failure?

Because God is Spirit; and consequently as long as he continued merely to affirm God as Abundant Supply—the supply continued in a spiritual state. This the bankers refused to cash; they wanted certified checks.

And here we come to the crux of the great difference between idealizing the thing desired and idealizing the process.

Affirmation of God as existence too often leads to a standstill conception of being ever the same.

Idealizing God as a the process, recognized the infinite as ever the same in nature, but as working in all processes and in ever changing activity.

Idealizing the thing desired often brings your mind to a standstill—mere recognition of existence; idealizing the process opens your mind to a limitless abundance of new ideas.

Now to the Case Again: After more than two months and a half failure the owner tried idealizing the process.

First, he idealized the land in all its details. And at once a new thought came: "If this land is not now valuable as a residence site, certainly there are other uses for it; and since God knows all the uses, the idea of another use will come to me."

Second, he idealized the changes in its condition at different seasons thought he had not thought before: of the year—hurrah—another new "Since the land was in a hollow and the moisture of the surrounding land drains into it, it is green many more months in a year than surrounding land—an important condition in dry California—and hence it is ideal for truck gardening."

Third, he idealized his activities in relation to it and to the bankers. Since God is all process, He must know many ways of convincing a banker's mind. Hence, a third new thought: "Many people talk to bankers about the value of their lands; I'll do something besides talk to make my banker realize the value of this land as a truck garden spot."

So, in one day, he called upon three different owners of truck gardens, and got three separate offers to buy this land—although the best price offered was less than the owner wished to accept.

But as the sum offered was much more than the mortgage, it made the banker himself take new notice—and even he had a new thought—a very difficult operation for a banker—and his new thought was: "Even if this land is not valuable for a residence site at present, it must be valuable for a truck garden plot, if three prominent owners want to buy it; and if they are willing to pay what they've offered, a $10,000 mortgage is certainly safe."

So the deal was closed. Two months and a half had been spent in idealizing the thing desired, and at the end of the time it was still "desired;" three days were spent in idealizing the process, and at the end of the seventy-two hours the thing was done.

Of course, you see the point: Idealizing the thing desired leads you to repeat old thoughts; idealizing the process leads you from one new thought to another new thought. That's it, one new thought to another new thought, and that's new thought!—Brown Landone in September Nautilus.

The sands at Beechcombe were crowded with happy holiday makers, and the nigger minstrels were so funny that some of the roysterers almost smiled. Uncle Bones came round with the inevitable tambourine, leaving his companion alone in the field to tell stores about boarding house landladies.

Suddenly the black gentleman in search of coppers had his tambourine ruthlessly snatched out of his hand by a stern-looking woman, who calmly swept all the money into her packet.

"There, you impudent cork-faced fellow!" she cried, returning the tambourine. "Tell your funny friend who knows so much about landladies that I'm the one he forgot to pay the last time he was here!"—Tit-Bits.

He—No, Marion, not even for your sake will I comply with the condition laid down by your father as a preliminary to my marrying you.

She—W-w-why? What does he want you to do?

He—He suggested that I should go and hang myself first!—Tit-Bits.

The young man told his girl that if she didn't marry him he'd get a rope and hang himself right in front of her home.

"Oh, please don't do that, Harry," she said: "you know father doesn't want you hanging around here."—Tit-Bits.
